Tall Stack Gets Spruce-Up

Here's crane's-eye view of steeplejack Al Moseley, 136 feet up chimney of old Phoenix (Lucky Lager) Brewery yesterday. He's there to chip, paint and repair the big stack, went aloft on small platform lifted by crane with extra spar attached to the top of the towering chimney.

Canada Merger Likely

After CIO-AFL Join in U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A developing move for amalgamation of Canada's two biggest labor congresses got impetus Wednesday from a long step toward AFL-CIO unification in the United States.

Spokesman for the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labor, which have a combined membership of 855,000, said the action of U.S. associates of the Canadian bodies will speed eventual amalgamation on this side of the border.

The U.S. action was taken at Miami Beach, Fla., where committees of the AFL and CIO agreed to a merge into a single 15,000,000-member federation, subject to later convention ratification.

In the view of qualified observers here, this may come about finally in the spring of 1956 and could be followed by organic unity of the TLC and CCL later that year.

In Toronto, Claude Jodoin, TLC president and A. R. Mosher, CCL president, both expressed jubilation over the move.

Victoria trade unionists also believe a Canadian merger is due.

"It's the greatest step labor has taken for years," said E. T. Staley, secretary of the Provincial Council of Carpenters (AFL-TLC). "I think it will lead to greater co-operation between the AFL and CIO in Canada."

"There is more feeling in Canada for unification than in the U.S.," he added.

James Moffat, carpenters' local business agent, said that "if it works there it can work here."

CONCERTED EFFORT

Jack MacKenzie, International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-118 (CIO-CCL) president, declared, "Organized labor will now be in a position to make a concerted effort at improving labor conditions in North America."

Charles Peck, business agent for Victoria local, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (ALF-TLC), expressed the hope that "the Trades and Labor Congress and Canadian Congress of Labor can now get together."

Some expressed doubt, however, that some international union presidents and other officers, who might lose jobs by the merger, would be willing to throw their hats into election rings and take their chances.

RCMP Check Exploding Fuel

Royal Canadian Mounted Police will investigate this strange and highly inflammable gadget picked up on Weir Beach, near William Head, by James O'Connor, shown eyeing his find. Mr. O'Connor, paymaster at Victoria Machinery Depot, picked the contrivance up on the beach and took it home to burn in his fireplace. One of its four sections burned furiously and immediately, sending out a stream of flame like a distress flare. There is a lead weight at one end of the wood casing which indicates it is some sort of marine distress mechanism, says Mr. O'Connor.

'Little Essondale'

Mental Unit To Be Built Outside City

Space for 1,500 Included in Plans

BY RAY BAINES
Colonist Legislative Reporter

The provincial government plans to build a 1,500-bed mental hospital near Victoria, primarily for the treatment of mentally ill persons on Vancouver Island.

This decision was announced yesterday by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black.

Although no location was mentioned, it was learned by The Daily Colonist that a site has been purchased about 15 miles outside the city.

Plans call for a "maximum security" section in the proposed hospital. This will mean eventual abandonment of the present inadequate Wilkinson Road institution.

PLANS ON BOARD

Mr. Black carefully worded his remarks to avoid appearance of a definite announcement, but later the Colonist learned plans are already on the drawing boards and the property is in the hands of the government.

In a speech in the legislature Mr. Black said property is "available" and "preliminary planning has been undertaken toward the possible construction of a 1,500-bed institution for the treatment of the mentally ill of this area.

"For some time it has been felt that the citizens of Vancouver Island and adjacent islands should have (mental) hospital facilities closer to their place of residence," the minister told the house.

He had said earlier that Essondale had "reached its maximum for efficient operation."

Officials say the Island institution would be complete in ever way, a "smaller-scale Essondale."

WINCH TRIUMPH

It was a triumphant day for E. E. Winch, CCF MLA for Burnaby, who for years has been advocating better mental home accommodation.

When Mr. Black disclosed plans for the hospital, the veteran member nodded approval.

"Good, good," he said.

CCF leader Arnold Webster said, "It was a very welcome announcement. It came as a surprise to us. If it is true as announced it certainly meets with our approval."

AGED NEED CARE

Dr. D. E. Alcorn, city psychiatrist, expressed hope that the plan would include accommodation for the aged.

"A mental hospital, particularly for the care of certain patients over 70 years of age, is most necessary in this area," he said.

"I hope that such a place would prevent such a situation as obtains at the present time, where patients who are over 70 and seriously mentally ill, cannot obtain hospitalization except after their names have been on the waiting lists for the homes for the aged for some time, or if they are wealthy enough to afford expensive private accommodation."

It is hoped the old jail at Wilkinson Road may soon cease to be used as a mental hospital, as the buildings are not considered suitable for a hospital, another Victoria psychiatrist said.

President Recalls Friendship

Eisenhower May Ask Zhukov To Make Visit to America

WASHINGTON (BUP) — President Eisenhower, warmly recalling a Second World War friendship with Soviet Marshal Gregori Zhukov, raised the possibility today that he may invite the new Russian defense minister to visit the United States.

Mr. Eisenhower told a news conference shortly after Zhukov was named to the defense post in the Kremlin shake-up that inviting the Russian official to this country "would be a remarkable thing at the present state of affairs."

Zhukov was quoted as saying it had always been his "dream" to visit the United States but that the time was not ripe now.

Russia completed its government shuffle accenting a build-up of armed might when Zhukov was named defense minister.

Georgi Malenkov, who turned over the premiership to Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, was appointed minister of electric power plants and deputy premier, in full charge of all Soviet nuclear production.

MAIDEN SPEACH

The white goateed Bulganin in his maiden speech as premier pledged his regime to give top priority to heavy industry—"the basis of the indestructible defensive might of our country."

He lashed out at the "war hysteria" and "atomic war propaganda" of the United States, demanding that "lunatics who brandish the atomic weapon" be brought to book.

Five words of Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev gave a strong clue that Russia already has followed up the dismissal of Georgi M. Malenkov with a far-reaching government reorganization and a seemingly painless purge.

MOLOTOV GAINING

Khrushchev, a powerful first secretary of the party, disclosed the existence of a new body inside the Kremlin and its very name hinted at the ascendant role of Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov.

Khrushchev said yesterday he was instructed to nominate Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin by "the central committee of the CPSU (Communist Party of the Soviet Union) and the Council of Elders."

"And the Council of Elders"—these five words unveiled an organization that western experts said have never been mentioned previously in Moscow's government set-up.

Western observers who already had considered Molotov's hand to be behind the Bulganin promotion pointed out that nobody in the Kremlin is more "elder" in the hierarchy than Molotov.

Flames Sweep Home

Baby Dies in Fire, Three Others Safe

(Special to the Colonist)

NANAIMO—A baby died and three others escaped injury in a raging flash fire that destroyed a home on the No. 1 Indian reservation about 5 p.m. yesterday.

Lost in the blaze was the eight-month-old daughter of Mrs. Virginia Fraser, whose home was gutted.

The other children, a second daughter and a son of Mrs. Fraser, about four and five years old, and an unidentified child of a neighbor, managed to escape from the five-room house.

The children were alone in the house when the fire started, apparently from a faulty stove.

Douglas White, Jr., son of a neighbor, saw the fire first and called the Indian reserve fire department. Dick and Don White rushed equipment to the scene, but the fire swept through the house so quickly their fire-fighting efforts were in vain.

A call also brought the Nanaimo fire department to the scene, but the baby could not be saved.

No one saw the other children leave the house and it isn't yet known how they escaped the flames.

The Fraser children are being sheltered by the Alfred Wise family. Other neighbors are looking after the mother.

An inquest will be held.

Axe-Wielder Slays Wife Of Financier

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—The elderly wife of a millionaire financier was slain by an axe-wielding assailant Wednesday in her $200,000 mansion.

Mrs. Katie Hayden, 71, died soon after she was found on the floor of the kitchen, bleeding from four head wounds.

The Hayden home is across the street from the former home of Virginia Hill, where gambler Benjamin Bugsie Siegel was slain June 30, 1947.

$127,600,000 Loss

Provincial Taxes Would Hit Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government said Wednesday it would lose an estimated $127,600,000 annually if all other provinces ditched the federal-provincial tax rental agreements and followed Quebec's lead in imposing a provincial income tax.

The theoretical figure was based on a 10-per-cent reduction in federal income tax in all 10 provinces.

On January 14 Prime Minister St. Laurent announced the government's unilateral decision to make a 10-per-cent reduction in federal personal income tax for taxpayers of Quebec, only province with a provincial tax of this kind and only one outside the tax rental agreements.

RETROACTIVE

The cut will apply in 1955 and 1956 and was made retroactive to 1954, the year in which Quebec started its tax, which amounts to about 15 per cent of federal levies.

At the same time, the government made the 10-per-cent cut available to other provinces as an alternative to the agreements. None has yet indicated it intends to exercise the option.

Hazen Argue (CCF-Assiniboia) asked what a 10-per-cent reduction in federal income tax in Quebec and the other nine provinces would represent in lost federal revenue.

In a return tabled Wednesday in the Commons, the government gave these loss figures by provinces on the basis of collections in the 1953-54 fiscal year:

Ontario $62,300,000, Quebec $28,400,000, British Columbia $12,700,000, Alberta $8,100,000, Manitoba $6,000,000, Saskatchewan $4,700,000, Nova Scotia $2,100,000, New Brunswick $1,900,000, Newfoundland $1,200,000, Prince Edward Island $200,000.

Vincent Trial Opens Monday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Third trial of Lawrence Bryan Vincent, 28-year-old carnival worker charged with the murder of Donna Lee Corbett at Quesnel, will open in Supreme Court here Monday.

Compensation Possible In Tax-Sale House Case

A woman whose $3,000 home was sold for $30.60 because of $16.83 unpaid school taxes, may receive some compensation from the provincial government.

A bill to be considered by the legislature will permit repayment for property mistakenly sold for taxes.

Recent case of Mrs. Erica Booth, of the village of Westfield, was brought to the house recently by CCF member Anthony Gargrave.

Although the new bill will not cover Mrs. Booth's case, it is reported the government may arrange compensation for her, anyway.

Socred Thinks So

Rhodes Scholars Socialistic?

OTTAWA (CP)—John Blackmore, outspoken Social Crediter from Lethbridge, Alta., indicated Wednesday he has little regard for Oxford's Rhodes scholars and graduates of Cambridge and the London school of economics.

"Generally speaking," he said, "when a man has graduated from any one of these he is a socialist in his ideas, he is a centralizer and he thinks nobody in the world knows how to govern a country except his own particular class. . ."

Mr. Blackmore attacked Rhodes scholars during a Commons debate on the question of federal assistance to public education.

He said Citizenship Minister Pickersgill's opposition to the proposal, on the ground that it would encroach provincial autonomy, "is typical of Rhodes scholars."

Mr. Pickersgill, who studied at Oxford on a scholarship offered by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, interjected to say he was not a Rhodes scholar, a socialist or a centralizer.

Mr. Blackmore replied that Mr. Pickersgill acted like an Oxford graduate.

Routed from Homes in Blinding Rain

Gun-Prodded Negroes Shifted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Under the guns and spears of 2,500 policemen and soldiers, hundreds of sullen Negroes Wednesday were herded from their shantytown homes to a new life in a government segregation project 14 miles outside the city.

But many others who were to have been evacuated Wednesday—three days ahead of schedule—were tipped off by a hooded mystery man and hid out with friends and relatives.

Many of these regard the government-built meadowlands project as a device for entrenching segregation more deeply and preferred to stay in their old Sophiatown slum area.

About 150 families were scheduled for removal from Sophiatown's worst slums Wednesday at the beginning of South Africa's biggest population shift. Just over 100 families went.

The man who tipped off the holdouts during Tuesday night's driving rain apparently was a leader in the African National Congress who is wanted by police for helping organize a resistance campaign.

At dawn police and troops surrounded Sophiatown, long a centre for race riots. The Negroes were moved in army trucks in the blinding rain.

Feeling ran high among the holdouts. But they appeared to be fighting a losing battle since the government had doomed their shanties to make way for white residences and factories in the advancing white suburb of Westdene.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

EVERYONE makes mistakes. Absent-minded secretaries put letters in the wrong envelopes. Husbands forget birthdays. Pilots fail to lower the landing-gear.

Some of these citizens do not survive their blunders. The pilot's first big mistake may also be his last. Those who do survive, however, need not reproach themselves for humanity. They are in distinguished company. Even Homer, as the saying goes, nodded sometimes. Famous men have fallen into strange errors and oversights.

Captain George Vancouver set out to explore a long stretch of the Pacific Coast of North America. He completely overlooked three great rivers, the Columbia, the Fraser and the Skeena.

In view of this lapse, men who forget to wind the clock need not feel so badly.

* * *

Vancouver was a skilled and careful navigator. "He took nothing for granted, and everywhere checked the claims of other navigators," says George Godwin his biography of Vancouver. He was scientific. He sought proof. When he was well enough, he went with exploring parties in small boats, and saw for himself.

And yet he sailed past the mouth of the Columbia, ignoring the mud-stained water that plainly showed the mouth of a great river. Why didn't he see the Columbia? Because he didn't want to see it.

That is the theory which Godwin puts forward. Vancouver even noted "river-colored" water in his journal, but ascribed it to minor streams, and passed along. Disgusted by certain travelers' tales, he had made up his mind in advance that no great waterways existed.

* * *

The waters of the Fraser River fan out for miles, staining the sea a vivid blue-green. Captain Vancouver himself was in the yawl that explored that piece of coast. But he missed the Fraser.

Godwin apologizes for him. The Fraser is a hard river to find. Eighteenth-century navigators had small boats; meagre equipment. Who are we to sit as armchair judges?

All the same, Vancouver failed to see a massive feature of the coast.

He sailed into the estuary of the Skeena and named Port Essington, but never perceived the size of that northern river. Godwin is particularly generous in excusing this third failure. It is much easier to understand than the others, he says. This time, Vancouver wasn't even looking for rivers. He was trying to debunk the legend that the Strait of Juan de Fuca led to Hudson's Bay.

In this, he succeeded. Vancouver could have won £20,000 for finding a northwest passage. And yet, his biographer says, he seemed to get as much fun from proving the old voyagers wrong as he might have shown in confirming their tales, and making a fortune.

Vancouver was a too-zealous skeptic who found out errors but failed to see great truths near at hand.

He discovered Burrard Inlet, sailed around Vancouver Island (the first man to do so) and charted countless miles of unknown shores. He overlooked three mighty rivers. And yet a city is named after him. His statue stands on the dome of the Legislative Buildings.

Remembering that even great men make mistakes, we small men may stare at the statue and take heart.

Gates Swing Open Again

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became "King of the Safecrackers" in the United States, now lives quietly, having paid for his years of wrongdoing, right among us on Vancouver Island. He continues his story in Chapter 27 today.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

(Copyright, Canada, 1955, by Herbert Emerson Wilson and The Daily Colonist)

Warden Cooper would often * [illegible] in the garden at Prince Albert pen, and we'd have long, quiet chats without calling attention to the fact.

There's no doubt in my mind that, had I remained under the harsh treatment at Kingston, Herbert Emerson Wilson would have come out of prison a different man from the one living so happily today on Vancouver Island.

After a few years at Kingston I'd have been fit—and in the mood—for only one thing: back to the rackets.

As it was, I did six of my nine years, getting time off for good behavior.

I came out in the spring of 1941—an ex-con without a cent.

My mother, I knew, was still living in the home I'd built her. One way and another, the interest on the mortgage had been paid, and she was secure in her house.

I got a job in Winnipeg building circulation again, this time for the National Home Monthly. With $50 down, I bought a 1937 sedan undertaking to pay the full price of $400 in a year.

However, I worked so hard, and so successfully, that the car was all paid for in 30 days.

My first territory was between Toronto and Montreal, and all my earnings went to pay off that mortgage, $1,000 at a time. That, too, was done as I expanded my territory all across Canada to Victoria.

In 1943 I left the magazine and took to the sea. That is, I bought a small boat in Vancouver and sailed her up the coast to Prince Rupert, exploring all the way. It was a fine trip but my inexperience on the water brought some problems.

Later in the year I bought a bit of shoreline property on Cortes Island at the upper end of the Gulf of Georgia. There I almost settled down.

Cutting timber, I built a sawmill on my property. I made a trip to the Mainland and induced the government to build a wharf, then persuaded one of the coastal boat services to make that wharf a regular stop. Visiting other islands nearby, I talked some of the residents into accepting the advantages of life on Cortes—and they moved over.

All this time I had a restless feeling that wasn't to leave me for years.

I had not forgotten the threats made by survivors of my mob. More than that, I knew that many of the underworld, and perhaps of the police, thought I might have hidden away a big part of the mob's loot. This wasn't the case, but it gave me the feeling that spies were watching me all the time.

After 18 months on Cortes I decided it was time to shift the scenes again. I sold my sawmill for a profit of $3,000, made a good thing out of my shoreline property, since it was right beside the wharf, and headed for Vancouver.

There, for some time, I kept busy with real estate deals. Rooming houses, mostly in the English Bay area, were my specialty, and these I bought and sold for some months.

Then the restless feeling got the best of me again. My bank account showed about $30,000 standing to my credit.

"Herbie," I told myself, "that's enough. Get going."

It was late in 1945. The war was over, and travel was opening up. I bought a ticket on a cargo-passenger ship bound for Australia, and sailed out of Victoria.

Landing at Sydney, I bought a caravan and drove in it over miles of Australian countryside, compiling notes for a travelogue I planned to write.

Selling the caravan at Brisbane, I turned my thoughts [illegible] once more. This time, I thought, I'd run a little store.

A small millinery shop—and its location—appealed to me, but I had to wait until next day before the proprietress could get out. All Brisbane, I was detremined, would observe my grand opening.

Came the day—and the shop was ready. There was a porch built on poles over the sidewalk in front, and all over the shop, across the windows and wrapped about the poles were gay signs telling one and all that there would be free hats and ribbon for the ladies on opening day.

The posters, signs, lights (and free hats) did the trick.

In no time, the old stock was cleaned out, and I was ready to approach a wholesaler and get in my intended merchandise: Notions of all kinds, kitchenware and the like. The store was similar to our "five-and-dime" stores here, but was new to Brisbane.

Garden Notes

Get Trenches Ready Early

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

One of the first jobs in the vegetable garden now, weather and soil conditions permitting, is the preparation of the trenches for crops like celery, leeks, peas, beans and corn.

Of course, trenches are not absolutely essential for these crops, as they can all be grown very nicely on the flat. But the two main reasons for growing certain crops in trenches are the concentration and conservation of precious manure, and the ease and economy with which water can be applied in the summer.

On very shallow soils, taking out trenches for these crops is equivalent to digging graves for the plants, but on deeper soils, considerable benefits can accrue.

POINTLESS

It is, for instance, rather pointless to take out a trench right down to the clay, putting in manure, and leaving all the good topsoil alongside, then trying to grow the plants on a few inches of soil on top of cold, wet clay. Trenches on such soils often become drainage sumps in wet weather, drowning the plants.

On soil overlying clay, take out a fairly wide trench, say about 18 inches wide, to accommodate two rows of celery. Place all the top soil on one side of the trench only. Then go down another spade's depth into the clay, placing this on the other side.

Break up the bottom of the trench now with a fork, digging in any rough stuff you may happen to have, such as half-rotted compost, hedge clippings, chopped stalks of cabbages, or perennial flowers and the like. Then give a good dressing of lime, about a cupful to the running yard.

Next, put in about a third of the topsoil you removed originally, then add your manure or compost, mixing it thoroughly with the soil. A bucketful to the running yard is not too much. Then add the rest of the good topsoil. This should work out so that the soil in the trench is not more than four inches lower than the original surface. If you need more topsoil to reach this level, you can steal a little by paring an inch or so from the edges of the trench.

If there is any fear of the trench receiving the drainage water from higher ground, it will be necessary to make some provision to lead it away. The clay from the second level of the trench, left on the surface, will weather down beautifully in about a year, and can then be mixed with the garden soil. In a few years, the depth of topsoil can be increased considerably this way.

Please understand that this procedure is for shallow topsoil over clay. Given a good depth of soil, the trench can be taken out in the normal way, manure incorporated into the bottom layer, and filled in with rich topsoil to within four inches of the top.

Two weeks before planting out, bonemeal and superphosphate are scratched into the surface at the rate of half a cupful each to the running yard.

Rail Unions Favored By Ruling

OTTAWA (CP)—Rail unions have won the final round in their long contract battle with the railways that came to the verge of a strike last August.

Chief Justice Gordon Sloan of British Columbia, cabinet-appointed arbitrator in the dispute, has ruled in favor of the unions in the last point at issue between the disputants.

His ruling, it was learned Wednesday, gives five paid statutory holidays a year to sleeping and dining car employees and express messengers.

The chief justice had been called in to arbitrate this point after the railways and unions disagreed on interpretation of his initial judgment last November on the paid-holiday issue.

Tiny Babe Hungry

MONTREAL (CP) — A one-pound baby hollered for food from a hospital incubator Wednesday and was given a fighting chance for life.

Nurses at the Children's Memorial Hospital reported the baby girl, born three months prematurely, cried audibly just before feeding hospital officials revised their earlier prediction that the baby had a "very, very poor" chance for survival.

The baby, only 11 inches long, was born Friday afternoon in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Yvon Gohier.

Gunderson Choice Not Unprecedented

Appointment of former finance minister Einar Gunderson as a director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce while still an economic adviser to the provincial government is not without precedent in B.C., financial authorities said yesterday.

Former Liberal premier John Hart was appointed a director of the same bank in January, 1948 while a sitting member of the legislature.

These authorities were replying to criticism of the Gunderson appointment.

One critic said Mr. Gunderson was working for both "borrower and lender" and that the appointment was "without precedent in our parliamentary experience."

According to a government spokesman, it has not been the policy of the bank, which handles the government's general [illegible] to appoint anyone to its board of directors who has a direct connection with politics.

Mr. Gunderson, this authority pointed out, is not an elected member of the government. He is a director of the PGE and a member of the toll highways and bridges authority, as well as economic adviser to the cabinet.

Mr. Hart was appointed a director less than a month after he resigned as Coalition premier in 1947. He remained a director of the bank, even when he was Speaker of the House in 1949 and a director of the PGE.

Financial authorities said they could see nothing wrong with Mr. Gunderson's latest appointment.

"The bank certainly knows what it is doing," was one opinion expressed.

"Mr. Gunderson has no real capacity with the government. I can't see how people could say the appointment was wrong," was another independent view.

Eisenhower Calls For H-Bomb Ban

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said Wednesday the hydrogen bomb poses so grave a threat to civilization that intelligent persons must strive heart and soul to prevent its use in warfare.

That was his comment on Tuesday's statement by Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov that "world civilization will not perish" if war comes, but that only "the rotten social system" of the West would be destroyed.

Less than a year ago Georgi Malenkov, now ousted as Russia's premier, expressed a contrary view which many Western statesmen also have voiced—that an H-bomb war would destroy all the countries involved in it.

Eisenhower, asked about the H-bomb's destructive power, said:

"The thing is so serious that intelligent people ought to forego a great many lesser ambitions in the effort to achieve an understanding."

He said there must be some kind of international inspection system, one that all the world could trust, with an assurance that no country is pushing toward an atomic war.

The Russian Enigma

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL once applied to Soviet Russian policy the only caption which fits it. He said it was an "enigma." It still is. The sudden change of leadership paraded for the world by the Supreme Soviet on Tuesday was significant for its timing, self-contradictory reasons, and for fresh evidence of ferment within the Kremlin itself. Nikita Khrushchev, who assumes no new post, receives an "ovation." V. M. Molotov, who has seen Stalin, Beria and others under the sod, spoke for 2½ hours. Georgi Malenkov resigns the premiership because his "agricultural policy" failed. Nikita Bulganin, not an army man but rather the party-line boss of Soviet forces in the Second World War, says nothing and is elevated to the post of premier.

Now, under what shell is the pea? Who winds up with the real power in the hierarchy of the Kremlin? It is obviously not Malenkov or even his successor, Bulganin. Some observers in the west point to Khrushchev, the man who received the ovation. Yet it was not Khrushchev but Molotov—who delivered himself of what must be taken as Russia's official reply to the world in comment on today's scene. Mr. Molotov breathes fire over Formosa, declares Russia to be ahead of every nation in its armed and atomic might and retaliatory strength, switches suddenly to defense and deals with Soviet creation of an eight-state bloc under unified command as an answer to the rearmament of Germany.

Is it unreasonable to suggest that the Russian enigma sometimes puzzles even the Kremlin itself? Why this fear of (invented) Western "aggression" if Soviet forces are so strong? Why this swift change in inner-party councils if only "an agricultural policy" has failed? Why, above all, if Russia is sincere in wishing peace, this two-and-a-half-hour tirade against the bogeyman of a Western militancy which does not exist outside of imagination behind the iron curtain itself? Could Foreign Minister Molotov by any chance have been concealing the hand that is ringing the changes in the Kremlin?

Regardless of who may be pulling the strings, not even a Supreme Soviet acts spontaneously and unanimously unless it is well primed in advance. Sudden as the changes may be they are likely the result of laid-down policy. Inasmuch as they reveal inner uncertainty at the Kremlin they may be directed at a domestic scene where all is not so unanimous or so peaceful as the West has been invited to believe. Meanwhile the test of any policy—spontaneous or prepared—is its application. What roll will the Soviets play now before the councils of the world?

Vision in Capital Planning

PROVISION in the budget of a second capital city grant of $50,000 reflects continued willingness on the part of the Province to do its share in the beautification of Victoria as the seat of government. If Victoria is to earn the grant on an annual basis, however, more initiative will have to be shown in the use to which it is put. Here we are with the financial year almost gone and less than half of the first $50,000 spent. It would be most unfortunate if this apparent indecision about what to do with the windfall should create an impression that the fund which the government has made available is more than is needed.

There is no dearth of ideas about where and how to spend the money; nor is there any shortage of planning authorities, with all the planning commissions and committees that have been set up in this region. What does seem to be lacking at the moment is a plan—by which is meant not a loose collection of separately attractive projects but a long-range scheme with a definite objective to be attained step by step as the funds come to hand.

To refer to the matter in this way may not be quite fair to the committee in charge of the fund, but that could be the committee's own fault. Perhaps it has such a plan; but if so, would it not be a good thing to make it known so that the provincial taxpayers as well as the people of Victoria may see the direction development is to take? Fifty thousand dollars in these days is not a large sum of money for beautifying a city of Victoria's size. Dribbled away on piecemeal works it could be largely wasted. If continued over a period of 10 years, however, the annual grants would add up to $500,000, and something really worthwhile could be done with that, but only if work is laid out ahead.

The first point to be recognized is that, as we understand the government's purpose, the grant is not a payment in lieu of taxes, nor is it a gift to Victoria to help it tidy up the city and provide ordinary amenities which are a local responsibility in any municipality. The grant is intended to do something special for Victoria so as to distinguish it as the capital of the province. If whatever plan is devised should also turn out to provide extra attractions for tourists, that is merely incidental; but it is not a primary purpose of the grant—is not in fact a purpose at all.

Leave the Navy Alone

TRUST a prohibition faddist to make a mountain out of a molehill if given half the chance. Because some seamen of HMCS Magnificent drank a weird alcoholic concoction of their own making and ended up in hospital a Baptist minister in Halifax has started a campaign to make the RCN "dry." This is on a par with advocating that eating cease because some people overeat or that automobiles be abolished because some motorists drive too fast. As Saturday Night says in another context, obviously the possibilities of a ban on intemperate talk have not been examined.

Like the RN whose traditions it upholds and widens in its own right the RCN follows the custom of a daily rum issue to seamen and the serving of liquors in wardrooms, a practice held within bounds of propriety and seldom if ever abused. Actually much more salt water flows over a ship at sea than ever liquor into a glass or mug and the custom is part of the daily round, no more. It has little more significance than the cup of hot coffee that may also be imbied, and were the minister concerned to take a trip to sea he might have cause to regret his exaggeration.

Incidentally it was neither rum nor spirituous liquors that marked the unauthorized incident aboard the aircraft carrier, but duplication machine fluid and other methyl alcohol that caused the harm it did. How prohibition would have any effect on the storage of such liquid is not easy to imagine. In any case this is the first happening of its kind and one imagines it will be a salutary example to any future seaman tempted to surreptitious indulgence of this nature.

Seamen are hardy men, not children, and they are not to be made the scapegoat of prohibitionist intolerance. It is sadly typical of the faddist, however, that he would deprive the innocent because of a lapse on the part of a very few, especially when it is a question of alcoholic beverages. There is no justification whatsoever in turning the Magnificent incident into a campaign to make the RCN "dry." Indeed it is an insult to a service proud of its efficiency and never found wanting in defense of this country. Only a bigot would seize on an excuse to imply otherwise.

Interpreting the News

Pattern Starts To Emerge

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

A PATTERN is beginning to emerge from the series of Soviet shake-ups. It indicates the Soviet Union hopes for at least four or five more years of grace in which to build its economy.

The Communist party has entered into a deal with the forces representing career men of the Soviet Army, and some attention will be paid henceforth to army views on preparations for eventual war.

* * *

It is good news in this respect: The world may have time to compose its differences, while the internal Soviet structure evolves from a monolithic dictatorship under the Communist party to a sort of hybrid military dictatorship in which conservative army leaders have influence.

The fact that Zhukov has exchanged warm words with President Eisenhower need not presage any softening of Soviet policy toward the United States. But Zhukov is a hard-headed career general likely to think of military consequences ahead of dialectics on the inevitable triumph of world Communism.

There undoubtedly has been a compromise in the Soviet heirarchy. Some of the army leaders' views must be taken into consideration by Nikita S. Khrushchev the leading personality in the Soviet Union today.

If Khrushchev has come to terms with the army men, some attention will be paid to the consumer sector of the Soviet economy to quiet the army's fears of a brittle situation which could crack in wartime. Apparently, however, this must be accomplished without sacrifice to the heavy industry sector. The army, if satisfied this can be done, probably will go along with the setup of Soviet heavy industry which produces armaments. No army is ever interested in weakening a country's armed forces.

Thinking Aloud

Gerald Waring

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

FOR all their radio belligerence the iron country nations send very polite sporting ambassadors abroad, and their representative teams play strictly according to Hoyle. There is perhaps a lesson here for western games players.

I thought of this when reading about the Penticton Vs eve-of-Europe game in Vancouver the other night. The Vs were billed to play "dainty" hockey but lapsed into familiar body-checking ways when their strategy failed.

The use of the body in such sports as soccer and hockey, currently the two team-sports in international competition, is part of our way of playing. These are considered he-men pursuits which permit physical strength to have its fling.

* * *

By contrast, although continental athletes may be as physically strong as western performers—they seem in fact to be much better trained—they eschew the impact of body contact. This was noticeable in the film shown here of the England-Rest of Europe soccer game, the European goalkeeper obviously shrinking from the menacing rushes of the English centre-forward. The same avoidance of body play has marked the style of all Russian and Hungarian soccer teams, and, last year, of the Russian hockey team.

* * *

This policy has had concrete effect on their mastery of their medium. Omitting all thoughts of body-checking they have concentrated on control of the ball or puck, on a manipulative artistry that in the realm of soccer has reached new standards of perfection. Russian teams may not yet have equalled with a puck their supreme skill with a football but they are improving, and a year ago were good enough to defeat this country in the European hockey finals.

The fact that the Canadian team was not this country's best by a long chalk does not alter the thesis we are discussing. The continental and iron country teams have put a premium on sheer craft and it has paid off.

* * *

There is also the aspect of behaviour off the field or outside the arena. The Russians as a notable example have been scrupulous in their conduct when in other countries. This may be the result of iron discipline and the fear of punishment, nevertheless it is impressive and draws favorable comment.

By contrast western athletes are more free to behave as they please and not always are they the kind of ambassadors that do credit to the countries they represent.

One assumes these considerations will be kept in mind as the Penticton Vs carry abroad the colors of Canada in an attempt to regain from Russia the international hockey honors of the year. One notes the Vs are quoted as saying that "dainty" hockey will suit them fine and that if there is no body-checking the Russians will need an ouija board to find the puck. One hopes also that the Penticton lads are not going to be too cocky about the whole thing.

Reports from Ottawa

WHATEVER posterity may say about Louis St. Laurent, it isn't likely to cherish his memory as a guardian of the authority and prestige of Parliament.

His position as an outstanding prime minister seems assured. A century hence, if mankind has not by then atomized itself out of existence, St. Laurent will be rated up with the Bordens and the Kings; not sunk into obscurity with the Thompsons and the Bowells. But it will be despite his attitude toward Parliament, not because of it.

* * *

One of the government's bitterest critics, Davie Fulton (PC, Kamloops), recently indicted the administration, and by inference the prime minister, for affronting and insulting Parliament. Fulton made a strong case, but his perspective was narrow, for he smarts from many failures to budge the government.

It seems to me the concentration of power and authority in the cabinet isn't entirely due to ministerial belief in the omniscience of the government and that what's good for the Liberal Party is good for the country. I think you can attribute it in large measure to the personality of a prime minister who seems not to enjoy the role of chief ornament of the Green Chamber, and not to revel in the rivalry and conflict in the Commons.

* * *

We have had prime ministers who were great parliamentarians; men who were zealous in protecting the position of Parliament. Sir John A. Macdonald was one, Sir Wilfrid Laurier another. Sir Robert Borden was of their ilk, and so in a way was Mackenzie King.

Perhaps the best criterion of a prime minister's attitude toward Parliament is the extent to which he keeps Parliament informed as to the government's plans and the reasons for its actions. When Mackenzie King spoke in the Throne Speech debate in 1947, a normal post-war year, his address took up 28 columns in Hansard. When St. Laurent addressed the House last month, Hansard had to devote only nine columns to him. Yet this year is so abnormal, under the shadow of fear of thermonuclear war, that the fate of all life on this planet may hang in the balance.

It was a weak speech, an off-the-cuff speech, a lawyer's rebuttal of the arguments of his courtroom adversary, with little of the meat Parliament was entitled to expect.

* * *

Before St. Laurent left for last week's Commonwealth conference, the Conservatives pressed him to outline the government's position on the various matters which might come up at the parley. They wanted him to set aside a day to debate these matters, but the PM refused.

It's true that there are no precedents for such a debate, and that some of the questions are so delicate that a public airing of the government's views immediately preceding the conference might be unwise.

Moreover, Liberals say, the opposition had ample opportunity to present its views during the Throne Speech debate. But the PM failed to take the Commons into his confidence when he spoke early in the debate, and subsequently refused even to tell the House just what, aside from Formosa and GATT, he expected to talk about in London. Thus the House couldn't address itself to conference issues and send the PM to London armed with its guiding advice.

* * *

St. Laurent might as well have said that if any thinking needed to be done, he'd do it.

The Packsack

Handling Lesser Tycoons

GETTING tough, several of our Canadian cities have recently decided to double the fine for parking in prohibited and restricted sections of downtown streets. Doubling fines, however, won't really solve the problem, for there are people to whom fines mean nothing. And prominent among them are the big-shot businessmen who simply put their fines on their expense accounts. They never feel it personally.

A few days ago I was driven to a meeting by one of these lesser tycoons. He is a man for whom I have the highest respect as a fly fisherman and a business bulldozer. But his social attitude leaves much to be desired. He drove to the door of the building we were to visit. It was 4.10 p.m., and the signs on the lamp posts clearly indicated there was no parking allowed after 4.30 p.m. I called his attention to the fact.

"Don't give it a thought," he assured me, as we left the car.

* * *

Our meeting lasted until well after 5 o'clock, and several times I reminded my friend of his car parked outside in a prohibited area.

"Look," he said, as we put on our coats to depart. "We go out. There's a ticket on the windshield. Five bucks! Suppose they have doubled the fine. Ten bucks! I give the ticket to my secretary. She sends a cheque in, and charges it to my expense account. It's charged to car operation."

* * *

"But that," I protested hotly, "is defeating the whole principle of traffic management. And besides, you are charging your fines back on the public. That's who pays your expense account, in the goods they buy . . ."

"Son," said my friend, "when you've been in business as long as I have . . ." We went outside. My friend's car was gone.

He strode up to the traffic constable at the corner and reported it.

"That?" said the constable, waving his arms to the traffic. "The police tow-truck took it away about 4.45. You'll have to go out to the police garage, at the west end of the city . . ."

My irate friend telephoned aldermen, local members of parliament, several ward heelers.

They just laughed at him. It's the only way to handle lesser tycoons.

Actions on Impulse

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

PERHAPS the chief difficulty in creating a successful American foreign policy is that American public opinion and the leadership that reflects it are hostile to the mental approach required for correct diagnosis.

The prerequisite for all successful action is accurate analysis. Every situation must be diagnosed before it can be dealt with. And in such diagnosis there is no place for prejudices, desires, attachments, or even ideals.

A physician examining a patient cannot allow the operation of such influences. The patient may be his best friend. The condition he discovers may spell bad news. But he cannot choose to act as though the condition did not exist because he wishes it did not, and, ideally, it shouldn't.

In considering political actions a diagnosis may be correct or incorrect, according to the scope and reliability of available information and the logical capacities of the diagnostician. But if likes or dislikes enter into the process, the diagnosis will certainly be incorrect.

* * *

The diagnostician does not create events. He analyzes them as a basis for forecasting the probable outcome of alternative actions. But public opinion tends to treat the analysis as a "view" motivated by the prejudices of the analyst.

Thus, those who observed that the truncation and dismemberment of Germany and her elimination as a power factor would hand the hegemony of Europe to Russia were denounced as "pro-German," which was sufficient to suppress the analysis.

Thus, reporters and diplomats in China who made the diagnosis that the Communists would win because they commanded the more loyal and disciplined troops, had the abler intellectual leadership, were successfully exploiting popular grievances, and alone had a synthesized plan for political and military conquest, were accused of wanting them to win, of being "pro-Communist."

If their diagnosis, however distasteful, was correct, the appropriate action for the United States would have been to cultivate as good relations as possible with the revolutionaries, or, at least, under no condition to involve the United States on the losing side of a civil war, at a moment when all Asia was anti-Western. But opinion in and out of government would not accept a diagnosis counter to their hopes and desires.

* * *

Those who advocate from desire and feeling are usually eloquent; they may be profoundly sincere in their support for the good and the just; but they are poor counsellors, for they initiate impulsive actions heavily weighted against the probability of success.

The crisis over Formosa has arisen out of unwillingness to face two disagreeable facts: (1) that the Communists had won and the Chiang government had lost the civil war in China, and that post facto recriminations regarding what should or should not have been done would not change that situation by an iota; and (2) that continued support for the aspirations of the loser would sooner or later, and inevitably, involve the U.S. in precisely this present crisis, whose alternative outcome would be to back out or accept war of unpredictable scope and duration.

The U.N. has no tools for averting this war. All it may conceivably achieve is a means whereby each side can back down with the least loss of prestige.

* * *

The Chinese Reds may decide to postpone the "liberation" of Formosa, in return for concessions that will constitute another political victory of the kind they won in Geneva. Thereby more favorable conditions for a future military showdown will be created for them, or for a succession of further political victories, each one granted to avoid such a showdown.

This is a diagnosis. We hope it is incorrect. We hope there are factors in the situation which, if we knew them, would modify the diagnosis. But whether it is correct or incorrect, events not hopes, will decide.

Letters to the Editor

Fight Cleanly

Each day I pick up the paper these days, when the session is on, I wonder what has happened to the one-time good old Liberal Party. The Opposition member, Mr. Gibbs, calling the former finance minister, Mr. Gunderson, "a perambulating seller of apples" just made me feel ashamed of that party which did have a few good old chaps in it at times.

I don't like insinuations like that. . . . I love to see a good, clean scrap, but I do hate to see a member from a once good old party get up and "blast full steam ahead," nasty personal remarks which really have no bearing on the case.

That is not what members are sent to parliament for. I am quite aware of the fact that it is hard to take a licking, but is is good for any party when they get too cocky to get it.

It should give the defeated ones a chance to recuperate and come back in a good Canadian war-like fashion into a clean scrap again. I say Canadian because I mean it, and as an old-timer here I think the time is long over-due for us to be straight Canadian.

I trust the ghost of old John Oliver will appear to his hasty follower and tell him to step easy so as not to stub his toes.

10c Butter

With reference to the 70,000,000 lbs. of surplus butter, I would suggest that with every pound of ordinary butter sold, an extra pound of surplus butter be given for 10 cents per lb.

After all it is the taxpayers of Canada who have paid the subsidies on butter, eggs, meats and feed and they should have the benefit of using their money to purchase surpluses.

Dairy farmers would benefit, because many people who have forgotten the taste of butter might acquire a new taste. This butter if stored too long, will eventually be made into soap and we cannot eat that.

Yours truly,
C. Q. FARMER.

Bobby Helmets

I have read with serious consideration the letter of J. H. Gray, Royal Oak, chastising me for views recently expressed in your paper regard "bobby helmets."

Firstly, I fail to recall any incident during recent years of a local policeman having been handed "a knock-out blow" on the head by "some ruffian" armed with a club or strategically aimed brick—although, undoubtedly, many "bricks" are "dropped" in your fair city.

I concede the point that "the bobby helmet has stood the efficiency test" and it may give "a man a dignified appearance," but what could be more dignified than a knight in a suit of armor, another type of protective clothing which "stood the efficiency test" of many bygone centuries.

This bring me to J. H. Gray's reference to the issue of "tin helmets," in wartime.

For myself and on behalf of all the servicemen and civilians who received the protection of those helmets during both world wars, allow me to express our sincere appreciation to J.H.G. for the timely letter to Ottawa during the First World War. Many of us wondered who could have thought of such a smart idea, and no one ever told us it originated from a suggestion from J. H. Gray, of Royal Oak, B.C.

In conclusion I would console J.H.G. with the possibility that maybe our school children are not "ingrained with a fear of the police;" perhaps it's just the thought of the "bobby helmet" which scares them!

Crime and Pay

With reference to the letter by Mrs. Noyes in Sunday's Colonist:

I do not think one can possibly place Robin Hood in the same category with the modern criminal. The former lived at a time when life was very different from what it is today. In those days there was one law for the rich and powerful, and another for the poor and helpless. Also, the sheriff of Nottingham, if I remember rightly, was a pretty bad egg himself!

As for Jesse James, I forget how his career ended. It does seem bad taste to make a film of a man like that; but we all know that movie-makers are concerned mostly with their box office returns.

There was nothing in my letter to suggest that I thought every criminal should spend "most of his natural life in prison behind bars." All criminals (except the vicious and the depraved) who have been convicted, and have finished their term in prison should be encouraged to rehabilitate themselves. That is only humane.

But it would be interesting to know the thoughts of this man (whose story we are discussing), while he was writing the account of his crimes and his associates (perhaps creating a best-seller), and incidentally entertaining "99 per cent" of the Colonist readers. Perhaps he said to himself: "Crime does not pay . . . or does it—sometimes."

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Now I know how old Noah must have felt when the floods came! For the first time in my clerical career, I've had to stoke the rectory furnace with trousers rolled to knees and in bare feet.

There is an old liturgical custom wherewith one approaches a sanctuary with shoes cast off.

But this, again, is the first time my furnace has resembled the god Molech.

And it is not because the parson's house is built upon sand.

No, indeed, for there is a great out-cropping of rock in the cellar.

This parlous condition is brought about by living in an exclusive residential district in Saanich. Perhaps this is why it is so exclusive! If not, it ought to be.

I suppose that some would say that the parson's basement is flooded through an act of God.

It's true that we can't turn off the rain, but we can plan and devise our drainage systems to take care of the excesses of one Jupiter Pluvius.

* * *

Away back in 1947, the rectory was one of two houses on Sherwood Road.

At that time, the road itself was little more than a trail leading into the back of Queenswood Drive. It was beautiful in its state of undeveloped nature.

What ditches there were (and there were two) were quite adequate for drainage.

But since that time, houses have gone up almost overnight. The woods have been cut down and the natural holding basins for the rain have, of course, been destroyed.

Now a score of roofs cascade the rain into the eaves, the eaves into the drain-pipes, the drain pipes into the ditch, and the ditch into my basement and others as well.

In summer, these self-same ditches are open sewers redolent with the effluent of detergent-destroyed septic tanks.

The trouble is that the municipal authorities are allowing the district to grow up like Topsy, or (as they used to say of the British Empire) in a fit of absent-mindedness.

* * *

Of couse, the first floor of the rectory is a considerable height above the engorged level of water in the ditch, but the furnace and the washing-machine, the treasured magazines and the dry wood and the dog's bed are down in the basement.

I'm thankful, for example, that I'm not leaning out of the upstairs window frantically waving a flag of distress.

But what an awful mess will have to be cleaned up when the Saanich ditch is able to carry away the water it put (all uninvited) into the parson's cellar.

And this, too, after the recent assessment notices have hiked the figures.

My friend Reeve Casey is, I hope, high and dry—but, at the moment of writing, I'm all wet!

Careless Driver Pays Three Fines

Four men were fined a total of $265 in city police court yesterday for traffic law violations.

Dennis W. Delane, Sooke Road, was fined $135, with the option of 19 days in jail, on three charges before Magistrate H. C. Hall.

Delane was convicted of careless driving January 6, following a Douglas Street accident in which he was involved. He pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident and to driving while his license was suspended.

Edwin S. Young, 850 Admirals Road, who told police he was lighting a cigarette when his car struck a parked vehicle on Cook near Pandora, pleaded guilty to careless driving. He was fined $35.

James E. Cronin, HMCS Naden, was fined $60 when he pleaded guilty to driving without a license and to careless driving on Lewis Street near Dallas Road, where his vehicle struck a parked car.

Sam Johnny, Brentwood Bay, pleaded guilty to careless driving. He failed to stop for a traffic light and was involved in a collision at Bay and Government.

He was fined $35 and restricted to business driving for one month.

Michael J. Hoore, 21, no fixed address, was remanded until Friday by magistrate [illegible] pleading guilty to a vagrancy charge.

Police said Hoore was arrested after he ordered a meal costing $2.21 and had only 40 cents to pay.

Mrs. Lois B. Spallin, Esquimalt, was remanded in Sidney police court until February 14 for trial after pleading not guilty to a charge of securing goods by false pretenses.

Defense counsel is Herbert L. Matthews.

Elliott Pelkey was fined $10 and $6.50 costs on an intoxication charge.

Four Civic Employees' Groups Negotiating for Pay Increases

City policemen, one of four groups seeking higher pay in negotiations with the city at present, will meet Friday with W. T. McLaughlin, recently appointed conciliator in their dispute with the police commission.

Delegates from the Victoria Police Federal Union (TLC) were told by Commissioner W. J. Hamilton on January 26, they were wasting time discussing their request for a 10 per cent increase in pay, since the union had already applied for conciliation.

The Operating Engineers' Union, representing two janitors at the police station in their request for another $10 a month, service pay and Medical Service Association coverage, also has applied for conciliation.

Wage increases of four cents an hour annually over the next five years for the city's 240 outside workers were rejected recently by City Manager C. C. Wyatt, and the negotiating committee of the Civic Employees' Protective Association (TLC) will take the rejection to a general meeting of the employees Tuesday.

Public health nurses employed by the city have asked for wage increases of $17.50 a month for each of five professional categories and $10 a month for the starting registered nurse category. So far, no progress toward settlement of their demands has been reported.

Plans Now Under Way For Waterworks System

NORTH COWICHAN—Plans and specifications are being prepared for a waterworks system to serve the Lakes Road area from Janes Corner north to Wicks Road.

The area includes the Moose Home subdivision, development of which has been delayed two years by lack of an adequate water supply, and the Beevor-Potts subdivision, approved at the last council meeting.

Source of supply for the new water system will be Quamichan Lake.

★ ★ ★

COURTENAY—Plan to stage a united appeal for health and welfare agencies was endorsed this week at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce executive.

Public reaction to the plan will be tested today and Friday by the executive in a special telephone poll.

If public favor is indicated, a brief will be prepared for presentation to the regular meeting of the chamber February 23.

Consideration for the one appeal system was asked by J. E. Underhill, chairman of the welfare committee.

★ ★ ★

PARKSVILLE—A plea for more volunteers for the fire department has been made by Fire Chief Arthur H. Butler, recently re-elected head of Parksville's volunteer fire department for 1955.

He also stressed the importance of having chimneys swept regularly in the spring and fall each year.

The public was requested by Chief Butler not to rush to fires when an alarm is sounded because this impedes work of the fire crew.

Other officers re-elected were Eric Parsley, secretary, and William Wheeler, treasurer.

The department's annual report showed 12 fire calls answered in 1954, but no property loss or damage as a result of fire.

A fully equipped stretcher has been purchased and is now carried on the fire truck for any emergency.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN—Mrs. I. P. Dobbyn was elected president of the Duncan branch of the Red Cross at a recent meeting. Other officials named include Mrs. William Bullock, vice-president; C. A. Stone, treasurer; T. Van Shindler, chairman of canvassing committee; B. Thorsteinsson, chairman of junior Red Cross; Peter Thornton, chairman of disaster committee.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN—A panel discussion of the school curriculum will be held at 8 p.m. today in the Cowichan High school cafeteria. Making up the panel will be four teachers, four parents and one former student, a graduate of the high school.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN—Little interest was shown by appellants in sittings of the assessment appeal board in School District 65. Only six persons appeared to press claims though a total of 43 appeals were reviewed by the board.

Nearly all appeals involved improvement assessments resulting from application of new equalization regulations. Most assessments were confirmed.

The board was composed of R. H. Green, government appointee, A. W. Jack and D. K. McAdam, court secretary. Mr. Green will sit today at Lake Cowichan as a one-man board to hear 31 appeals.

Magistrate Issues Warning to Speeders

NANAIMO—Jack Pytrashuk, Vancouver, was fined $25 and costs in police court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to a careless driving charge.

Carl Ojas, of Cedar, was fined $15 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of driving 80 mph in a 50-mile zone. He was warned by Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts that such speeds would not be tolerated.

Don McGee was fined $10 and costs for speeding on the highway near Ladysmith.

Ron Daly, Nanaimo, paid separate fines of $10 each after pleading guilty to two charges of overloading his gravel trucks. He said he had applied for an extra license to carry the extra load.

★ ★ ★

PARKSVILLE — Commission chairman W. A. Paterson will be Parksville representative to the Vancouver Island Regional Library Board for this year.

Frank Shortreid was appointed chairman of public works for the village. Permission will be granted the Pythian Sisters of Qualicum Beach to conduct a tag day in Parksville June 11. The 1954 council is still carrying on the business of the village until an election mix-up can be straightened out.

★ ★ ★

NANAIMO — Implementation of a herd law is planned by the Northfield Ratepayers' Association because of the large number of animals running at large.

The association learned Monday that Northfield is the only district in Greater Nanaimo without such a law. Main problem is employment of a poundkeeper.

G. H. Dobbs was renamed association representative on the Fire Protection Board of Trustees.

★ ★ ★

DUNCAN—Preparation of a sewer extension by-law referendum was ordered by a special meeting of city council Wednesday.

Date for the proposed ratepayer vote was tentatively set for March 9.

The extension program covers three areas, north and east Duncan and part of the townsite area adjoining North Cowichan. Alternations will be made to the pump house to handle an anticipated heavy increase of sewage.

Development of some low-lying sections of the city has been blocked because the water table does not permit installation of septic tanks to give year-round service.

Before the by-law goes to the ratepayers, council will tour the city to plan the 1955 works program and study necessary street repairs.

★ ★ ★

NANAIMO — The B.C. Power Commission has completed installation of 10 new street lights on the Indian Reserve near here.

Demands Slated for Badly-Needed Floats

CAMPBELL RIVER—Village commissioners decided at a meeting Tuesday to ask the federal public works department to install two urgently-required floats at fishermen's wharf.

Commissioners disagreed with a recent ruling of Hugh Hart, sanitary inspector, prohibiting installation of steel septic tanks.

Commissioners Carl Thulin and Sid Waterfield said a village by-law permits use of steel tanks, adding that their experience showed metal tanks to be most satisfactory in this district.

Application of P. C. McPhatter to build a small warehouse to hold scrap metal was approved, subject to confirmation by the town planning commission.

PARKSVILLE — A gala Valentine dance will be held Saturday, February 12, at Parksville Community Hall by the Community Society. Dancing will start at 9 p.m. with the Troubadours orchestra providing the music.

DUNCAN—Peter Andreef, 24, was committed for trial in higher court when he appeared in district police court yesterday charged with receiving stolen property.

Bail was set at $1,000.

Victor Andreef, 18-year-old brother of the accused, was sentenced to six months definite and 18 months indefinite on a theft charge.

Two juveniles will appear for sentence February 21 for participating in thefts committed by the 18-year-old.

TACKLE BLOCK STOLEN

Charges involved the theft of a tackle block used in logging operations, worth $50, which police allege was turned over to the older Andreef. The block was the property of Taylor Logging Co. Ltd.

On a second charge of theft of welding equipment and electric wire, the younger Andreef was sentenced to six months definite and 18 months indefinite, concurrent with the first sentence.

Stolen articles were the property of B.C. Forest Products, Youbou.

NEW YORK (AP) — A Supreme Court jury Wednesday awarded $350,000 to Mrs. Clara Levine, 56, struck and seriously injured by a police car in 1953. Mrs. Levine, a widow, has been a hospital patient virtually all the time since then and was taken into court on a stretcher.

The school board plans to meet the recreation commission to discuss plans for the proposed recreation centre and swimming pool.

Princess Royal PTA asked the board to consider building an auditorium at the school.

Port Alberni Prepares

Trailer Park Soon Ready For Construction Workers

PORT ALBERNI — Site recommended to council for proposed development of a trailer park lies on the north side of Bayonet Street, from Mons Street east to the city boundary.

The trailer park will be developed to accommodate trailer homes of workers expected to flock to the district with the start of new industrial construction.

William Crowshaw, city superintendent, told council the proposed site is close to school, sewer, water, power and playground facilities and should be easily drained.

ONE-DAY JOB

Most of the area is cleared and it is reported less than one day would be needed to put the land in shape for the park.

Mr. Crowshaw recommended that 12 trailer lots, each 33 feet by 125 feet, be laid out with sewer and water connections on every second lot line. Two trailer lots would share common sewer and water lines, and services could later be used for one 66-foot lot when the area is developed for home sites.

Details of the layout of the trailer park have been left to Mr. Crowshaw and Fire Chief William Venables.

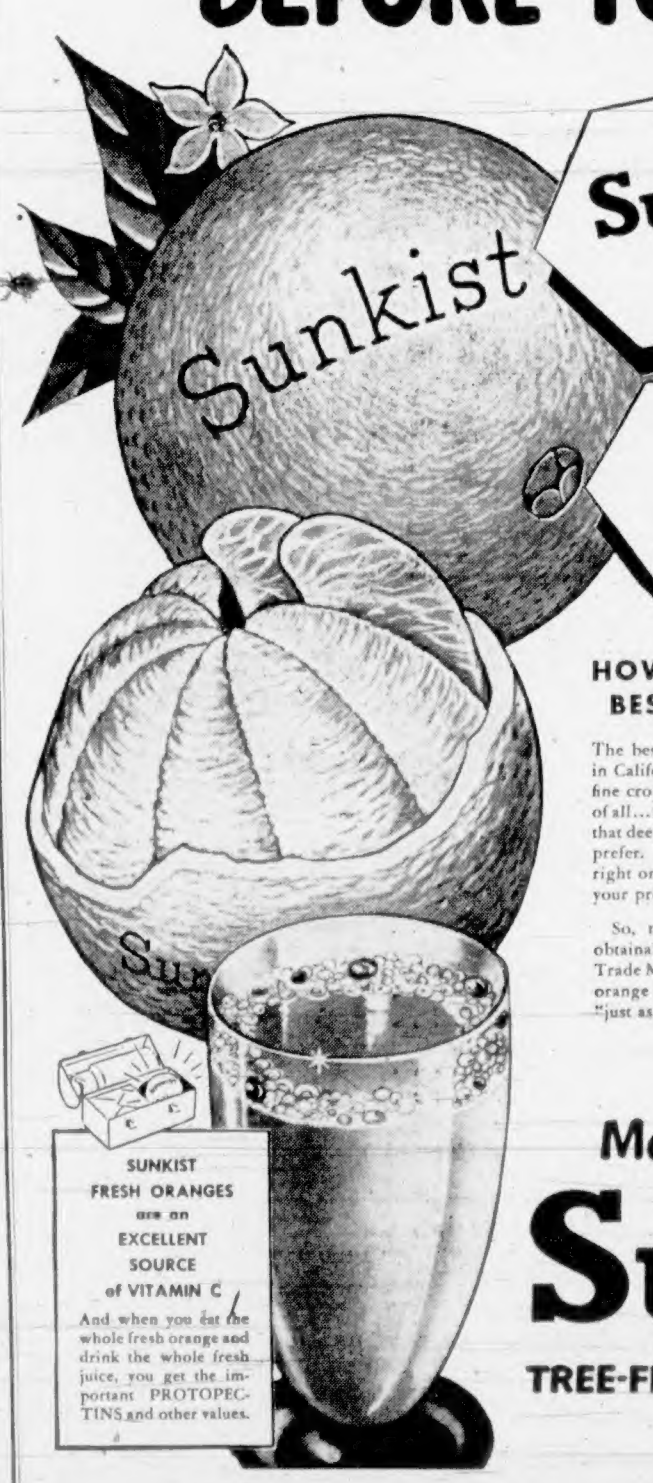
for better eating— for better flavoured juice...
CHECK EVERY ORANGE BEFORE YOU BUY!



LOOK FOR THE Sunkist* NAME on the skin of the orange. It's your GUARANTEE OF QUALITY!
* If it's not stamped Sunkist, it isn't a Sunkist Orange!
THE NAVEL means NO SEEDS!
• EASIER TO PEEL • EASIER TO SECTION
• RICHER FLAVOUR • BRIGHTER COLOUR
SUNKIST FRESH ORANGES are an EXCELLENT SOURCE of VITAMIN C
And when you eat the whole fresh orange and drink the whole fresh juice, you get the important PROTOPECTINS and other values.
HOW TO BUY THE BEST ORANGES—
The best oranges in the world grow in California and Arizona. From these fine crops we select the finest oranges of all...tree-fresh, bright skinned, with that deep full-bodied flavour Canadians prefer. We stamp these Sunkist . . . right on the skin of the orange . . . for your protection as a guide in buying.
So, to get the very best quality obtainable, always look for the Sunkist Trade Mark. Accept nothing less. If an orange is not stamped Sunkist, it is not "just as good".

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans firmed on the board of trade Wednesday, but the rest of the market failed to establish any definite trend.

Wheat was quite weak, particularly the nearby months. Lack of exports and slow flour business were behind the selling. New crop wheat futures held steady.

SPORTS REVUE

By Jimmy Cannon

There is in Kid Gavilan's style the suggestion of street-corner wizardry. Some hicks have such talents and so do big-city guys who come from poor neighborhoods. There is the feeling Gavilan knows all the pool-hall tricks and can run a rack full of balls and bank the last one.

Dance, he can, and he did it on stages in the ruffled lace blouse of the mambo hooters. [illegible] the first guy on the block who steals the new steps from the ballroom teams and shows off in parlor recitals.

It is all a little flashy and somewhat forced. But this is a guy who wears pink-trimmed black shoes in the street. He laughs a lot and gives the impression he understands humor. The car he drives goes fast and his hair, glossy and carefully parted, is also the tip-off.

You find such guys in the villages and the big towns in every country of the world. They are the candy-store beaus, the saloon dandies, the dance-hall peacocks, the big-talkers, the joke-crackers, the backslappers, the guys who memorize the lyrics of the popular songs and talk them into a partner's ear. They compete in charleston contests and tango tournaments and they win the cups.

All this was there Friday night as Gavilan beat Ernie Durando in a spryly tough fight in the Garden here.

Guys like Gavilan, who in different eras were finale-hoppers, cake-eaters and hep gees and cats, usually can handle themselves. They're full of con, but they can fight when they're pressed and Gavilan had more exuberance Friday than he had in a long time. Always Gavilan suggests he is fighting with a hazardous recklessness. This he does deliberately, creating the impression of undisciplined anger. But Gavilan resembles the pool shark with a mark. He sets it up from knowledge of his business, and then musses up the caution with the tricks.

* * *

It was an exciting fight because Durando followed Gavilan with a lunging awkwardness. He made Gavilan, who enjoys stalling, bustle, but it wasn't close.

There never was a time when Gavilan was in jeopardy although Durando has made a reputation as a puncher who can take a guy out with one shot. There were times, as Gavilan moved in a big-circled prance and paused in cuff with left hooks, when it was obvious that Durando was lost in this maze of showmanship.

Sometimes, inside, when they punched, Durando struck Gavilan in the body. But most of the time Gavilan was under Durando's rights and they curled about his thick neck, spent and useless.

The left hand was all that Gavilan needed although occasionally he used the right. Sometimes the right was flung in silly bolos and now and then he led with it solidly or threw it into a sequence of left hands. But it was the hook and the left uppercut that beat Durando.

The right, injured and useless when he fought Bobo Olson, is healing and Gavilan thinks it will be in good condition in a couple more fights. There were glimpses, as they struggled in clinches, of Gavilan's concealed skill. The hand would move up and the elbow would be there to block Durando's punch. He was agile and quick-handed. He taunted Durando with bellows and grunts. He also slapped his feet hard on the canvas to add another sound of intimidation.

* * *

The old champion, who thinks he was fleeced in his fight with Johnny Saxton in Philadelphia, sat on his sweat-blotched gold-trimmed green robe in the dressing room afterward and talked.

"How do you feel?" a reported asked him.

"Good," Gavilan replied. "No tired. He throw so many long right hands, I can plan the fight after the fourth round. To stay inside, I plan for that. He move his hand slow. He show the right hand. You get close, he no hit you with right hand."

The hooks, a boxing journalist said, were perfectly timed.

"I time my lefts every time he try to deliver the right hand," Gavilan said. "It don't feel so good, the right hand. It needs a little more treatment. I don't want to kill the right hand, so I no use too much."

Gavilan, who was speaking cheerfully, suddenly became sombre.

"I want to prove I no lost with Saxton," he said. "I feel myself like anyone who is 21."

"You let him jab you," a reporter said.

"I let him jab," the fighter explained, "because it is better taking jabs than the right hand."

He coughed and tried to smother the coughing with a towel.

"I have the bad cold," he said. "With the bad cold, I no tired."

Flyers Clear as Cougars Threaten

Edmonton Flyers got out of this spot in second period as Victoria Cougars sought to exploit a manpower edge in last night's scoreless Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena. That's Colin Kilburn of the Cougars directly in front of Edmonton goalie Glen Hall and Steve Hyrmnak of Flyers clearing as Victoria's Doug Macauley slaps at puck. Ed Dorohoy is directly behind Macauley. It was sixth shutout for Marcel Pelletier of Cougars and fourth for Edmonton's Glen Hall, who leaves today to join Detroit Red Wings.

BY JIM TANG

Victoria Cougars and Edmonton Eskimos proved to the satisfaction of more than 3,300 fans attending a Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena last night that a flurry of goals is not at all needed to produce the best in hockey entertainment.

Skating hard from the drop of the first puck, the two clubs battled through 60 minutes of thrilling spectator hockey without scoring, producing one of the best games of this or any other season.

SECOND IN WHL

It was only the second scoreless tie in the history of the league—the first coming at Tacoma on February 24, 1951, with Vancouver Canucks providing the opposition for the Rockets.

The hard-earned point, coming against the league leaders playing in top form, boosted the Cougars nine points ahead of the Canucks, who were 7-1 victims of the Flyers Tuesday night, and moved the Victoria club within three points of third place and within four of the runner-up spot.

It was the sixth shutout of the season for Pelletier, putting him within one of the league record, and the fouth for Hall, who has been called up by Detroit Red Wings and leaves today for some NHL action.

That neither club scored was a bit amazing in view of the wide-open action. This one was no centre-ice shinny but end-to-end hockey in which both defenses and the opposing goalkeepers played steady, often brilliant hockey, and all forward lines came back as fast as they went up.

Both goals had a number of miraculous escapes and it was evident early that the team which scored first would almost certainly win it. [illegible] had slightly the better of the exchanges in the first two periods — at least they came close more often. The Flyers came on strong in the third period and for a while it looked as if the Cougars were weakening but Billy Reay's hard-fighting crew rallied and was carrying the play at the finish.

Narrow escapes were too many to enumerate but Ray Hannigan of the Flyers missed on two clean breaks early in the second period and again in the third period. Marcel Pelletier moved out to get a piece of a blazing shot the first time and then had help from Bill Davidson in stopping Hannigan's second try.

Cougars, who had three shots in as many seconds late in the first period to come particularly close, were dangerous when Eddie Stankiewicz served the second of three penalties early in the second period. Doug Macauley made an opportunity for himself late in the second period and Gene Achtymichuk and Bill Bucyk slapped hard shots, which had Hall beaten, just past an upright.

After Hannigan's second miss, Pelletier made a great save when Jerry Melnyk deflected a hard passout from John Bucyk, taking the puck on his chest and making sure there was no rebound. It was a surprise play and Pelletier had to move fast.

And to add to the mounting tension, both clubs almost scored on their own goal. The Flyers came closest, in the dying minutes, when a passout hit an Edmonton skate and just missed going in with Hall on the ice.

GOAL DISALLOWED

The puck did find the net once, Andy Hebenton batting in a high flip with his hands, but referee Eddie Powers correctly ruled no goal.

Powers did a fine job with the whistle and was always in charge. He clamped down hard in the second period when tempers began to fray and maintained control by calling eight of the game's 12 penalties in a 14-minute period.

Cougars play tonight at New Westminster, then host the Canucks Saturday. Canucks play the Flyers at Vancouver tomorrow night.

By The Canadian Press

A fluke first-period goal ignited Toronto Maple Leafs Wednesday night and they went on to score two clean-cut counters and defeat the league-leading Montreal Canadiens 3-1 in a National Hockey League game before 13,874 fans in Toronto.

New York Rangers couldn't overcome the Chicago jinx in the other NHL game Wednesday night, coming from behind to tie Black Hawks 2-2 before 4,219 spectators at New York. The draw was the third in six meetings between the two clubs in Madison Square Garden, Hawks having won the others.

CANADIENS LEAD

Canadiens took the lead in the Toronto game at the eight-minute mark of the first period and Toronto tied the score about three minutes later on a freak bounce that eluded goalie Jacques Plante.

Dickie Moore was the Montreal marksman, beating goalie Harry Lumley of Leafs from about 10 feet out. Leaf defenseman Tim Horton fired near the Montreal blue line. The puck landed at Plante's feet in the goal crease and bounced over his stick into the net.

The fluke seemed to ignite Leafs who took over the play from there on with Rudy Migay counting once in the second period and again in the third for the victory.

HOCKEY RARITY

One of hockey's rarities occurred just before the second period got under way. Referee Frank Udvari asked to inspect Lumley's goal stick and found the blade half an inch over regulation width. Lumley was given a two-minute penalty for "playing with an over-sized stick." Centre Brian Cullen served the sentence.

It was later learned that Canadiens' coach Dick Irvin had requested the check.

At New York, the fifth-place Rangers took the lead late in the first period, then fell behind 2-1 before Dean Prentice tied it up at 16.29 of the last period.

An unassisted goal by Andy Bathgate gave the Blue Shirts the lead but just 42 seconds later, George Sullivan finished off a play with Harry Watson and Bucky Hollingworth to knot the count. Sullivan scored again early in the third to set the stage for Prentice's tying goal.

Rookie goalie Hank Bassen of Hawks kicked out 28 shots in running his NHL record to eight games with only two losses.

Hall Moves to Wings As Sawchuk Benched

DETROIT (AP)—Goalie Terry Sawchuk of Detroit Red Wings, the only netminder to perform without relief this season, was benched Wednesday for the first time in his brilliant five-year career in the National Hockey League.

General manager Jack Adams of the Red Wings said Sawchuk, riddled for 10 goals in the last two games, will be given a three-game "rest" and that he will be replaced by 23-year-old Glenn Hall of Edmonton Flyers, Detroit's Western Hockey League farm club.

AT TORONTO SATURDAY

Hall will step into the nets at Toronto Saturday when the Red Wings meet the third-place Maple Leafs. Hall's replacement at Edmonton will be Dave Gatherum, who has been with Quebec Aces of the Quebec Hockey League.

In making the announcement of the sudden switch, Adams said, "we're giving Terry a rest —nothing more." Some observers think, however, that Sawchuk, at 25, is slipping as a major league goalie.

The Red Wings, whose hopes for a seventh straight championship have been steadily fading, have won only one of their last six games, tying four and losing one. This slump cost them first place and they now trail the league-leading Montreal Canadiens by five points.

Statistically, Sawchuk ranks second among the league's goalies. He has allowed 109 goals in 54 games for a 2.02 average, which is topped only by Toronto's Harry Lumley.

Sawchuk, who won the Vezina Trophy as the league's best goalie in the 1952-53 season, has been a regular with the Red Wings for the last five seasons. In this time he has allowed an average of fewer than two goals per game.

Hall has played brilliantly for the league-leading Edmonton team this season and had a brief stint with Detroit in the 1952-53 season.

Victoria High Totems chalked up their second straight victory and moved into first place in the Inter-high school senior boys' basketball league by whipping Oak Bay High, 55-27, at the Fernwood gym last night.

In junior boys' league play Oak Bay High won its second straight game and climbed to within four points of league-leading Esquimalt by trimming Victoria High, 38-25.

The senior girls' league got under way yesterday with Mount View topping Esquimalt, 24-19, at Mount View and Crysta Ivings sparking Oak Bay to a 50-10 victory over Mount Douglas by scoring 20 points. Victoria high, the fifth team in the league, received a bye.

Totems had little trouble against the less experienced Oak Bay squad, which had only two holdovers in the lineup, although they were forced to overcome a nine-point deficit in the opening quarter.

PERRY SETS PACE

Sparked by centre Den Perry, Totems outscored their traditional rivals, 13-9, in the second quarter to hold a 21-18 half-time lead. But the winners ran wild in the final half, dropping in 23 unanswered points at one stage in outscoring Oak Bay 16-2 in the third quarter and 18-7 in the final frame.

Perry topped the winners with 14 points although the scoring was well divided with all but one player getting at least two points.

Oak Bay senior—Willis 2, Harvey 4, Fairley, Peden 4, Horwood 8, Watchorn, Gregory, Clarke. Total 27.

Victoria High Totems—Rutherford 8, Perry 14, Leask 2, Lore 2, Abbott 2, Jones, McCullough 5, Wooldridge 5, Kowalyk 2, Skillings 4, English 5, Tomlinson 6. Total 55.

Oak Bay juniors—Johnston 2, Street 1, Showers 19, Hawes 10, Hallock 2, Mitchell 2, Wilks 2. Total 38.

Victoria High — Austin 2, Bond 8, Ilott 1, Vickery 3, Lee 9, McKee, Wilson. Total 25.

Gutoski, Karjala Score in Consols

KAMLOOPS (Special)—Tony Gutoski of Victoria and Bill Karjala of Nanaimo, Vancouver Island entries in the provincial British Consols final, both won their first games Wednesday night as play started in the B.C. curling finals.

Gutoski, scoring five in the first end and taking a 10-0 lead, had a romp against Len Evans of Smithers. Only eight of the 12 ends were played as the Victorians recorded a 16-5 triumph.

Meanwhile, Karjala won his seventh consecutive game by besting Clarence Larson of Chilliwack, 11-8, in his first game in the Consols finals.

SAME SYSTEM

Play in the Consols will be under the same system as used in previous years, competing skips deciding at a meeting Wednesday to play round-robin series in two sections of eight rinks. The section winners will meet in the final to decide which rink will represent the province in the Dominion curling championships at Regina early next month.

Gutoski's section includes Scotty Ross of Trail, Ray Ottem of Kamloops, Bill Croft of Summerland, Claire Miller of Vancouver, Bill Speers of Creston, Milt Ryalls of Nelson, and Evans.

Karjala will play in a round-robin with Reg Stone of Trail, Frank Avery of Vancouver, Len Harper of Quesnel, Art Chesser of Trail, Russ Bowles of Kamloops, Alex Caldwell of Kimberley, and Larson.

Other Consols results saw Ottem hand Ross his first defeat of the bonspiel, 9-5; Miller edge out Croft, 7-6, and Ryalls trim Speers, 12-7. In Karjala's section, Avery sneaked by Stone, 11-10, in 13 ends; Caldwell beat Bowles, 9-5, and Chesser edged Harper in another 13-ender.

Gutoski plays twice Thursday morning, at 8 in the "B" section of the bonspiel and at 10.15 in the Consols.

BREAKS EVEN

In other games Wednesday, Gutoski was eliminated from the Grand Challenge by Ross, losing out 10-6, but he advanced to the eights of "B" competition by handing Joe McKinnon's Kamloops rink its first loss, 11-8.

Gutoski was slightly off form against Ross, missing two or three key shots, but curled strongly in his other games. He has won six of the seven games he has played, including his one Consols outing.

Karjala's rink has been in top form throughout and reached the eights in both the Grand Challenge and the "B" competition. The Nanaimo rink downed Pat Dolson of Kelowna, 9-6, in the Grand Challenge and Mel Strickland of Prince George, 10-4, in the "B" event before winning its first Consols start.

Victoria's other two bonspiel entries didn't fare too well Wednesday, both losing to Consols rinks. Max Zahel was taken out of the "C" event by Ross, 12-6, and Glen Walkey also was eliminated from the same event, losing to Bowles, 6-3. Both Victoria rinks still have chances in the "E" and "F" competitions.

Dick Topping of Oliver became the first skip to reach the prize-bracket, moving into the semi-finals of the "B" competition.

Chemainus Team At Sooke Tonight

Chemainus will carry a 22-point lead into the second game of a two-game, total-point semi-final series in the Lower Island juvenile boys basketball playdowns when it meets McMorrans at Sooke tonight.

The up-Island team got the jump Tuesday night when it whipped McMorrans, 62-40, at Chemainus. The winner will meet Ace Plumbers for the lower Island title.

Cordova Bay and Sooke pre-midget boys will meet in an exhibition game at 7 while Brentwood and Sooke tangle in a bantam boys' game at 8. Feature gets under way at 9.

Vancouver Eilers girls' baseball team has raised $1,700 of the $3,500 needed to send it to the Pan-American games in Mexico City.

Baker Blasts James

BALTIMORE (UP)—Big Bob Baker of Pittsburgh, fourth-ranking heavyweight contender, floored tall Willie James of Roxbury, Mass., with a right to the chin for a full-count knockout last night at 2.50 of the second round.

James, out-weighted 219¼ pounds to his opponent's 207¾, was forcing the fight when Baker suddenly hit him on the chin with a straight right. James staggered backwards. Baker followed with a left hook to the chin, and another right and then a terrific right to the jaw dropped Long Willie near a corner for the fifth defeat and fourth knockout of his career.

Although Baker was favored at 3-1, the crowd of 2,300 in the Coliseum had expected more competition from James.

Because of his quick victory, Baker may be matched for a contenders battle with big Nino Valdes of Cuba at Madison Square Garden in March. Valdes is the top-rated contender.

Minnie's Love of Cars, Chisox Grows Dearer

CHICAGO (AP) — Minnie Minoso, Chicago White Sox star outfielder, and his papa No. 2 are at it again.

"This year we win the peanut. I live and die for Chicago," says Minoso in asking for a $20,000 raise.

Minnie's papa No. 2—better known as Frank Lane, general manager of the Sox—looked over a letter from Minoso asking for the increase and said he doesn't know whether to laugh or weep.

The hilarious palaver between Minnie and his boss comes up every year about contract time.

Minnie is asking a boost which would bring his pay to an estimated $47,000.

"I talked to Minnie on the phone a couple of weeks ago," said Lane, "and asked if he had received the contract. He told me yes but refused to discuss it until I got his letter.

"The letter was well typed and when I saw what he was asking I was convinced only that he was trying to impress whoever typed the letter.

"Minnie is a great player and we offered him a substantial raise but the White Sox are not going to pay for the cars his friends ride around in."

Lane recalled last year when he went to Havana to talk contract to Minoso and was told he could find Minnie at the ball park.

"I heard talk about a car being given away and I thought Minnie was being honored. Imagine my surprise when I learned it was Minnie who was giving the car away.

"I asked him not to do such things since I figure he'll only ask for more money, so now he's asking me if he can buy a white Cadillac because he's tired of the green one."

MINNIE MINOSO

The green Cadillac caused some commotion last year when Minoso bought it. Minnie not only had it decked like a cruiser, flying the flags of the United States and Cuba, but he also plastered his picture on the windshield.

"I've told Minnie over and over again never to discuss his finances with anyone," says Lane.

"Then I go to Havana last year to talk contract with him a clubhouse boy tells me Minnie's looking for me and wants a $10,000 raise.

"I was ready to raise cain with Minnie but he firmly said he hadn't told the boy a thing. He just guessed the boy overheard him talking to someone else."

The word exclusive has always been a puzzle to Minoso.

He once endorsed baseball gloves with a firm in St. Louis on an exclusive basis and then did the same thing with a Chicago glove company.

"I tried to explain the word exclusive to Minnie," Lane says, "and all he told me was one was exclusive in St. Louis and the other was exclusive in Chicago."

"I'll tell you, though," continued Lane, "I wish the guy were twins even if it cost the White Sox a lot of money. He's kind, humble and a colorful individual. He's forever scouting players for us in Cuba and he just can't say no to anyone. He's the only scout we have for whom we have to have other scouts scout his scouting."

Minoso, who is 31, was the Sox leading batter last season. He batted .320, hit 19 home runs and batted in 115 runs.

Young British Golfers Learn from U.S. Pros

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Canadian and British golfers are using the winter tournament circuit as a post-graduate school of golf.

They are more interested in knowledge and experience than money. Most agree they are getting something money could not buy.

British golfers here for the first time are impressed with two aspects of the U.S. game: The hard work put in by the pros and their superiority from within 150 yards of the hole.

The group of five Englishmen will play through the Houston, Texas, tournament and then head for home, their eyes opened by U.S. methods.

The young English players were called upon to play an 18-hole qualifying round before being admitted to the Tucson open tourney proper, which starts Thursday. John Pritchett and John Jacob qualified Tuesday with three-under-par 69s. Tony Harmon made it easily with 70. Peter Allis and Herman Hunt were exempt from qualifying as Ryder Cup players.

THREE CANADIANS MISS

The eight Canadians didn't fare as well. Gerry Kesselring, Kitchener, Ont.; Al Balding, Robert Dean, Eddie Nizuleck, all of Toronto, and Jack Kay, Montreal, all qualified.

Bob Wylie, Calgary; Hal Butler, Toronto, and Jim Walker, Halifax, missed.

Pritchett, 23, said: "The trip has definitely been worthwhile. We couldn't have obtained the experience hitting a ball in London. It would be quite proper to say we have been attending a post-graduate school."

Jack Solomons Denies Reports Title Bout Set

LONDON (UP) — Promoter Jack Solomons Wednesday denied reports that he had already secretly arranged a world heavyweight title bout between title holder Rocky Marciano of Brockton, Mass., and British champion Don Cockell, in the United States.

"I can assure you nothing has been done," Solomons said. "Don Cockell, himself has been on the phone to me to know what it's all about, and I have given him the same assurance."

Solomons said he had "made an offer to Marciano and to Cockell's manager, John Simpson, and nothing more will be known until Marciano has had his trial workout on February 15th."

Referring to the scheduled trip of Cockell and Simpson and himself to the United States on February 19, the promoter said, "we are going there to be on the spot when something is done."

Television Plays Part In O.C. Soccer Crisis

LONDON (CP) — British soccer's financial crisis by-product of a sharp drop in attendances—appears to be becoming still more acute as hardship reports pour in from small-time English and Scottish clubs.

In the English third division, 37 of 48 clubs say they're losing money and only four claim a profit. The others say they break even.

In Scotland, the story is much the same. A recent spell of icy weather made things worse by cancelling many games. The problem of a relatively small population, supporting a large number of Scottish clubs, is a big factor.

Other difficulties are entertainment tax, nibbling away a third of the take, television and meagre fan accommodation.

Most losing clubs claim they paid more in taxes to the government last year than they lost on the whole. One club, Northampton Town, for example, reported a 1953-54 seasonal loss of £4,300 while paying £7,500 in tax.

Television is blamed on two counts.

One is for the transmission of top games Saturday afternoons, enticing fair-weather fans to sit and view in the comfort of their own homes. Most of those who do attend watch the hard way—standing on open-air terraces for the 90-minute game and 15-minute interval.

On the second count, F. A. Davis, chairman of third-division Brentford, comments:

"There is only a limited amount of spending money today. People cut out football to pay for TV sets."

On Sunday, defending champion Victoria West, which also received a first-round bye, clashes with Wood Motors, who eliminated Duncan Native Sons last week end. The teams will meet at Heywood Avenue Park and all games will start at 2.

If the clubs are deadlocked after regulation time, a 30-minute overtime period will be played. If the score is still tied, the clubs will continue for another 30 minutes.

AFL-CIO Merger Tops IWA Agenda

BY BILL MAVOR

The merger of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations announced yesterday, is expected to have a top place on the agenda of the annual coast district convention next week of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL).

About 100 delegates from 12 IWA locals, representing 32,000 members, are expected for the meeting next week in Vancouver.

Slated as guest speakers are A. F. Hartung, IWA international president, and [illegible] and Adolph Germer, elder labor statesman and western director of the CIO.

They are expected to comment on the merger's effect on the IWA and other Canadian unions affiliated with the AFL and CIO.

BROKE AWAY

The woodworkers' union was originally part of the carpenters' union but broke away in 1937 as an industrial union.

Since that time the IWA on an international basis has become the premier bargaining agency for workers in lumbering and wood manufacturing centres in the United States, Canada and Alaska, with a membership in excess of 10,000.

Discussions on the merger may even overshadow the debates on proposed stronger control of leftists in the membership of the union's B.C. district.

OTHER TOPICS

Among other resolutions from the locals will be those in support of further social security legislation by provincial and federal governments, low-cost and low-rental housing, national health services and 1955 contract demands.

Provincial legislation will be discussed by Labor Minister Lyle Wicks.

The IWA district this year also holds its biennial elections. President is Joe Morris, formerly of the Duncan local and now working from Vancouver headquarters.

The Board of Industrial Relations is expected to hold its Victoria hearing on the question of revising minimum wage rates in the construction industry, at the end of the month.

A definite date is to be announced soon.

In hearings held this week at Vancouver, most building trades unions were agreed that minimum wages should be 90 per cent of the going union scale. Minimum rates would thus be automatically adjusted with any advance or decrease of union pay rates.

The unions also suggested a 40-hour work week and tightening of the act against infractions.

It was reported employers have voiced opposition to a 40-hour work week for the road and heavy construction industries, affected much by weather conditions.

One management group agreed to a 40-hour work week where such a policy is now accepted in an area. Another group opposed any reduction from a 44-hour week and any change in minimum rates.

The Labor Relations Board has ruled that an agreement between a union and the Workmen's Compensation Board is not within the competence of the Labor Relations Act.

The LRB ruled that the act does not apply to the compensation board. The ruling emerged from a question by the Building Service Employees' Union, local 244 (AFL-TLC) as to whether an agreement between the two parties was a collective agreement as defined by the act.

NEW YORK (AP)—Theft of almost $50,000 worth of jewels and furs from a room at the Hotel Roosevelt was reported by police Wednesday. The room of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Odum of Orange, Texas, was robbed while they were out.

Black Stresses Red Strength, Aims In Calling for Civil Defense Effort

BY RAY BAINES
Colonist Legislative Reporter

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black turned his attention to the troubled world situation yesterday and urged British Columbians to "defeat indifference" by joining in civil defense programs.

The provincial government, he said, "should not be called upon to enact legislation forcing people to do these things which their own common sense should tell them to do for their own protection."

He called on municipalities considering dropping civil defense budgets to accept responsibilities.

With the advent of the hydrogen bomb, he said, "no a square inch of this province can dissociate itself from the fact that because of the immense areas of damage that are now possible mutual aid between the smallest and the largest community is not only desirable and a decent act of neighborliness, but an absolute necessity."

[illegible] would be the main targets of enemy weapons [illegible] no part of B.C. would be completely immune from severe [illegible] by jet-propelled bombers, reaching aircraft and of missiles fitted with [illegible] warheads and radioactive fall out.

But, he said, B.C. has no intention "of putting its head in the sand."

"We shall continue [illegible] went on "with our preparations and stress [illegible] the desirability for training [illegible] the [illegible] woman and teen-ager in some form of civil defense . . ."

WORLD DOMINATION

He said reports show the world is in a state of turmoil and that Russia with advanced nuclear weapons is aiming at world domination.

"We have to believe this, but we have yet to be told officially by the government of Canada," Mr. Black said. "We feel that in spite of lack of this authentic information that the people of B.C. should . . . prepare themselves for any eventuality."

He said that as a province B.C. has no part in international discussions "which are solely the responsibility of the government of Canada and in which the provinces are not consulted" and therefore the federal government should assume the greatest proportion of costs for "organizing the people of Canada to cope with the result of an attack by an enemy power on the civil population.

NOT BEING IDLE

The minister said that even though this is the considered opinion of B.C. "we are not being idle."

Mr. Black urged people not to be "hypnotized by the H-bomb" for "to accept the hopeless attitude of defeat is not Canadian and is certainly not British Columbian."

He said that civil defense was a vital part of military defense because "unless a country is organized so that it can survive such an attack no sustained effective counter military effort would be possible."

Waterfront Equipment Called For

[illegible] equipment are considered inadequate to meet a major emergency [illegible] in peace or war on Victoria waterfront.

Victoria Harbor Civil Defense Committee yesterday reached these further conclusions:

Employees of waterfront industries should be [illegible] in the protection of [illegible] and [illegible] in the event of peacetime or wartime emergency.

Auxiliary equipment to fight waterfront fire must be essential in the event of attack.

For more than two hours the defense group discussed the waterfront problems in emergency.

It recommended appointment of an instructor for industrial employees.

STUDY NEEDED

Although present fire-fighting equipment is adequate for ordinary emergency, its effectiveness would be seriously disrupted by air raids or fire of large dimensions.

The committee discussed the need of auxiliary equipment and of study by industries concerned.

Full-Size Model for City Park

Old Salts Hope To Recreate Vancouver's Ship

BY G. E. MORTIMORE

A full-sized replica of Capt. George Vancouver's ship, the 330-ton Discovery, may stand in a Victoria park if Capt. W[illegible] Gregory gets his wish.

Captain Gregory last night asked the Thermopylae Club [illegible] organization of old salts and [illegible] shiplovers to support a plan to [illegible] build a model of the tiny sailing vessel in which Vancouver made his voyages to this coast. He won unanimous support.

A one-time mariner in sailing ships, Captain Gregory will ask the support of such organizations as Victoria Chamber of Commerce. He suggests that timber firms be asked to give materials for the hull.

Detailed plans of the vessel [illegible] George [illegible] Vancouver entered the Royal Navy at 13 and sailed with Captain Cook on his second and third voyages.

On his own voyages, Vancouver carefully examined the Pacific Coast of North America from California to Alaska, discovered Burrard Inlet and was the first man to circumnavigate the Island that was named after him.

The original name of the Island was Quadra's and Vancouver's Island. It was named jointly for Vancouver and the courtly envoy of Spain, Don Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra.

The two met at Nootka and bargained on behalf of their respective countries for the disposal of an empire.

The negotiations ended in stalemate, but Vancouver and Quadra become friends.

They both [illegible] their names [illegible] to the Island [illegible] meeting. But the "Quadra" portion has fallen into disuse.

[illegible] Discovery ended her days as a convict hulk at Deptford.

Irwin Hits Apathy About Government

Public apathy about government was decried by speaker of the House Thomas Irwin when he addressed Victoria College and Normal School students yesterday.

"Most people divorce themselves from government," he said. "It is merely a nebulous [illegible] and not a part of their lives."

Mr. Irwin spoke on parliamentary procedure and said that whereas the Speaker used to be a [illegible] of the crown, he is now an elected representative of the people.

Court Holds Shortest, Merriest Session

Unworried Appellant Brightens Revision Hearing

The three-man court of revision hearing appeals on assessments in Greater Victoria had its briefest and merriest session yet when it visited Esquimalt yesterday.

The court heard only three appeals from two appellants.

Happy tenor of the proceedings was set by appellant A. G. English of 463 Constance who was asked by Reeve Joseph Casey of Saanich, a member of the court, "You're worrying about taxes more than assessments aren't you?"

"Oh, I'm not worrying about anything," Mr. English shot back. "When you've lived and worked as long as I have, you learn not to worry."

Both of Mr. English's appeals were dismissed.

In his first appeal he said another house nearby of the same calibre as his was assessed for $[illegible] less. But then telling about the houses he said the other house had no basement and his had. The court laughed.

Mr. English questioned the wording of the assessment notice which mentioned both general purpose and school assessments.

"The old boy has nothing," he said. "Why should I at my age pay school taxes? Men who have children get enough family allowance to pay the taxes."

"You were born 30 years too soon," said W. L. W[illegible], another court member.

Mr. English's second appeal was against the assessment on a house at [illegible] June, which he said was assessed twice [illegible]

Assessor F. Foucher told the court a large number of Esquimalt homes were assessed too low that a complete reassessment was to be made and that reducing the assessment would not correct the situation.

Reeve Casey, seeking the value of the house, asked Mr. English what price he had asked for the house when he tried to sell it.

"There was no selling price. I always ask people what they [illegible]"

[illegible] Mr. English said.

"If I said 'Here's the cash, what will you sell it for?' what would you say?" said Forrest L. [illegible] chairman of the court.

"It's not for sale today," replied Mr. English.

"It's just like happened on the farms on the Prairies," he said, complaining of the tax situation. "The old men will lose their homes and the young men will buy them back from the [illegible]."

"Never mind," said Reeve Casey. "You'll soon get the old [illegible]"

[illegible] said Mr. English. "I didn't get any baby bonus."

In the only other appeal before the court John N. Fraser of the [illegible] Trust Co. claimed [illegible] house on Admirals Road, converted into apartments, was overassessed at $30,000.

Mr. Foucher said the house was not just an ordinary old house but "a fine residence, one of the finest in Victoria."

After viewing the property, the court reduced the assessment by $5,000.

Valentine Cake of the month

so high! so rich! so fresh!

...pink lace valentine with a chocolate heart

Say "I love you" with the cake he loves most — a tall, dark and handsome Shirriff's Chocolate Cake Mix cake. The Shirriff's Kitchens have dreamed up a quick way to put Valentine frills on this quick chocolate cake. It's done with lacey shredded coconut — tinted to a sentimental rose-bud pink. And for real heart-warming chocolate charm, use the chocolate cake mix that's blended with real imported Dutch Chocolate — a Shirriff's Chocolate Cake Mix. When you add the extra richness of dairy fresh milk to this real chocolate mix — you can't help but get a moister, richer-tasting chocolate cake . . . a cake he'll know you've put your heart into!

VALENTINE CAKE

Fill and frost a Shirriff's Chocolate Cake Mix layer cake with 7-minute frosting. Then sprinkle generously with pink-tinted shredded coconut.

To tint coconut: Soak coconut in water to which a few drops of Shirriff's Red Food Colouring has been added. Drain and dry.

Problem of Accommodation Faces New YWCA Board of Directors

"Without the benefit of Christian ethics we would be like screaming apes in a jungle of a world," said Rev. William Hills in an address to members and friends at the annual meeting of the board of directors of the YWCA Wednesday evening. Introduced by the president, Mrs. H. J. Sceats, as "a man without a past, but with a brilliant future," Rev. Hills de[illegible] make it their concern to irritate Christians. "It seems to be the novel and intellectual thing," he said, "to cast scorn on things accepted by the majority simply because the majority accepts them.

"We who are Christians are so because we are convinced that a shepherd and a humble carpenter ... was the most unique revelation of eternity the world has ever seen and will ever see. We are not trying to ram Christianity down anyone's throat," he added.

CHANGE NEEDED

He continued by pointing out that the church in all its various factions is the greatest centre of good living in the community. He praised the YWCA for its humble enthusiasm for work and for the valuable service it renders. He concluded by saying that he hoped to see a change of attitude towards the YWCA and the YMCA on the part of many Victorians who hitherto have been hypercritical.

At a special board meeting the following were elected to serve for the coming terms: president, Mrs. H. J. Sceats; first vice-president, Mrs. H. C. Small; second vice-president, Mrs. William Blair; treasurer, Mrs. F. McClement; recording secretary, Mrs. R. F. Foster; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. G. Hamilton.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN NAMED

The committee chairmen will be Mrs. P. J. Mulcahy, finance; Mrs. H. C. Small, program; Mrs. F. Bliss, residence and dining room; Mrs. A. C. Brand, travelers' aid; Mrs. H. C. Sceats, personnel; Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, world service; Mrs. R. F. Foster, nominating; Mrs. H. C. Small, young adults; Mrs. R. F. Foster, publicity; Mrs. A. G. H. Tisdall, membership.

Mrs. P. J. Mulcahy announced that the following had been chosen to serve on the board for a three-year term: Mrs. H. Hoadsworth, Mrs. A. H. Sheard and Mrs. E. F. Livesey. Appointed for a two-year term to fill unexpired terms were Mrs. A. D. McKenzie and Mrs. K. MacDonald. Mrs. A. C. Brand, Mrs. R. F. Foster, Mrs. F. A. Lindsay and Mrs. H. C. Small were re-elected for a three-year term.

In his invocation Rev. Douglas Pilkey told members that although the centenary of the YWCA is a time for recalling past achievements, it is only by forgetting the past and laying hold on the future with a vigilant and eternal freshness that new and greater strides can be made.

INADEQUATE ACCOMMODATION

In her president's report Mrs. Sceats paid tribute to the many volunteer leaders and teachers [illegible] the present accommodation at the YWCA due to the growth of the craft classes.

The executive director, Miss Mae I. Brown, reported that she had interviewed 89 young women and girls in the past year. She said that the building had been used by approximately 11,500 persons attending the meetings of 11 outside organizations. The desk staff performed [illegible] services to [illegible] transients and [illegible] to non-residents.

Mrs. K. A. [illegible], treasurer, stated that disbursements had amounted to $[illegible]. Other reports were given by Miss Marion Bishop, program director; Mrs. H. C. Small, young adult committee; Miss Dinah Hewson, dietitian and residence director; Mrs. [illegible], travelers aid; Mrs. H. C. Small, world service committee; Mrs. William Blair, membership committee; Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, public affairs committee and the publicity committee.

Greetings from the city were received by His Worship Mayor C. J. Harrison and during the evening [illegible] selections were presented by Miss Beverley Holman and the twilight singers.

Three developments, expected soon, will improve Victoria's TV dial even more, before the year is out.

One is an announcement about the fate of Seattle's Channel 7, [illegible] has been hotly contested [illegible] radio stations there. The decision is to be handed down by the Federal Communications Commission in the near future.

Present bets in Seattle are that Channel 7 will be on the air this fall even if the decision is contested by the two losing stations.

Channel 7 is important to Victoria because it will likely be one of our best received outlets. It is the first channel inside the "high band" of TV stations, hence it should have greater coverage than the other high band stations on Channels 9, 11, 12 and 13.

Reception on this channel is less critical too.

Another advantage is the fact that the forthcoming Seattle outlet will be permitted a power of 316,000 watts.

KVOS-TV is going right ahead with its plans to improve its service. The Bellingham transmitter is going to receive a complete overhaul right away. New equipment is also being added to greatly improve the quality of pictures received here. And another microwave link to Orcas Island is being installed to prevent those annoying breakdowns.

KVOS-TV is trying to solve the power problem caused by the [illegible] of electricity in the island [illegible] plant. [illegible] the station [illegible] to [illegible] matter [illegible] KVOS-TV to the mainland power supply.

Third development now overdue is a power boost and possible change of location for KTVW Channel 13. The Tacoma station is making a strong bid for the Seattle market.

Although new spacious studios have been recently completed in "Television Row" in Seattle, there has been no further word of any change in power, as yet.

If KTVW does go to 316,000 watts as predicted it should be clearly received everywhere in Victoria.

One of today's finest interpreters of art songs, baritone Gerald Souzay of France, will be the CBC-TV Concert Hour featured artist on CBUT at 8.30 tonight. The famous Swan Lake Ballet, by Tschaikowski, will be performed, with a corps of 16 dancers, on the same program.

Jeffrey Lynn and Linda Carroll star in "Doorway to Suspense" on KVOS-TV at 10.

Late show on KTNT-TV is "Scandal in Paris," a comedy with Carole Landis and George Sanders, at 10.45.

Eddie Cantor stars in his Comedy Hour on CBUT at 11.

KOMO-TV presents the story of Jack London at the same time, 11 p.m.

"Murder on Diamond Row" is the Channel 5 Playhouse feature at 11.

Experimental Station Notes

Selection of Trees for Home Depends on Appearance, Use

With the establishment of new homes and gardens there comes the problem of what to plant. Varieties of ornamental trees and shrubs are selected because of form, foliage or flower or all three.

A suitable location is found for each plant depending on its character. In our garden fruits there is a hidden factor determining the amount and quality of fruit produced.

It is important for the gardener to know something of the performance of the various varieties in order that a wise selection may be made. Dependable information on suitable varieties of tree and small fruits for planting is contained in Circular No. 156—Varieties of Fruits for Vancouver Island. This publication has been prepared by staff members of the provincial department of agriculture, Victoria, and of the Dominion Experimental Station, Saanichton.

In addition to the varieties listed, a certain amount of information is given on planting, when to pick, season for use, pollen requirements, etc. Free copies may be had upon application.

HOLLY VARIETIES

Preparing the way for more holly varieties, selections and species, another section of the Arboretum has been cleared of trees and shrubs during the last few weeks. Holly specimens that will eventually be planted in the newly-cleared area are [illegible] because the plants are still quite small and the soil in which they will be permanently located needs considerable preparation, the newly-acquired plants will be kept in nursery rows where they will be given special attention for a season or two.

In general this means ample watering during the dry season and careful feeding, especially of commercial fertilizer. Experience shows that one can easily be overly generous in feeding chemical fertilizer to small newly planted hollies. Probably the best way of handling young holly trees when first setting them out is to avoid the use of any quick acting chemical fertilizer the first year.

LIBERAL COMPOST

Instead incorporate fairly liberal quantities of well-decomposed compost in the soil in the vicinity of the root zone before planting. A two or three-inch layer of the same material left on the surface for a distance of two or three feet around the trunk is also a good practice.

The following year a light dressing of nitrophoska or ammonium sulphate in March will likely be advisable. If the leaves show signs of turning pale in midsummer, and growth has been slight, this is an indication that a summer feeding is needed.

Fall feedings are not advisable due to the fact that they stimulate late growth.

'Escape Artist' Chained For Court Appearance

A leg-shackled prisoner lost his argument against conviction for armed robbery and kidnapping in B.C. Court of Appeal yesterday.

Gordon Albert Thompson, 28, Vancouver, shuffled slowly into the courthouse, his legs hobbled with chains. Police took precautions because of his escape from Vancouver courthouse last year. He was recaptured several weeks later.

Application for appeal from his 15-year sentence was allowed and the case adjourned until February 16.

Truck operators protested enforcement of a by-law calling for a maximum load limit of 6,000 pounds, stating the average unloaded truck weighed 9,200 pounds.

New restrictions will call for a limit of three-fifths of limits required by the Public Utilities Commission which vary according to the size of trucks and the type of loads carried.

Application from the North and South Saanich Agricultural Society for a grant was referred to the finance committee. President Albert Doney, V. E. Virgin and Robert Godfrey appeared for the society. Council has refused such requests in past years.

The council learned that it has no legal power to limit the number of books its residents borrow from the Victoria Public Library.

Council agreed with Clr. John Windsor, who attended the last meeting of the Victoria Public Library Board, that it would be a backward step to relinquish library services unless as a last resort.

It was estimated that Central Saanich library costs will total $6,100 in 1955.

Councillor Ward estimated that if every resident of Central Saanich borrowed four books every two weeks, it would cost the municipality some $300,000 a year under the present book rental arrangement.

NEW FREEDOM FROM IRREGULARITY

—you owe it to yourself to try this safe natural way to overcome irregularity

In recent years great strides in medical science have been made in the field of nutrition as it affects health.

Naturally many research scientists have turned their attention to one of man's most universal complaints—"common constipation." Why are some people troubled with it while others are not? And why is it so often a progressive ailment—hastened in its course from occasional, to common, to chronic by the unwise use of drug-type laxatives?

In natural foods, lifelong avoidance of common constipation

It has long been a medically recognized fact that nature has provided—in the foods men were intended to eat—all the elements necessary for avoidance of common constipation.

One of these elements, natural fibrous bulk, is ideally found in the outer layers, or bran, of the whole wheat kernel. Unfortunately this portion is often lost in modern milling.

W. K. Kellogg's Original Whole Wheat Bran Cereal

The known value of bran in promoting regularity prompted W. K. Kellogg in 1916 to develop a complete, whole bran cereal. He insisted that nothing be taken away from the bran that would lessen its effectiveness.

Proof that this natural laxative cereal is effective is provided by its widespread acceptance and use. Kellogg's All-Bran has literally helped millions.

Clinical evidence of the value of All-Bran has also been demonstrated by a series of studies reported in leading medical journals. In one such study, 135 people with known delayed bowel function were given an ounce of All-Bran daily for one week. Of these, 107 showed definite clinical improvement in bowel activity in just 7 days.

Why All-Bran proves so effective

The greatest advantage of All-Bran is that it corrects the cause of irregularity due to insufficient bulk. Chemical or drug-type laxatives, on the other hand, are intended only for overnight relief of a temporary stoppage. If you feel you must use them, read the instructions carefully and avoid excessive use.

But for natural and lasting relief, put your trust in nature and give All-Bran a try. Eaten daily, All-Bran can help improve your "intestinal tone" so necessary to comfortable, natural regularity.

A delicious, wholesome dish

Kellogg's All-Bran has an appealing, nut-like flavor. Whether you prefer it with hot milk or cold, you'll find it retains much of its original crispness even after liquid is added.

But remember this: be sure you get the original, the one and only All-Bran—Kellogg's. Kellogg's has been making and improving All-Bran for nearly 40 years. And Kellogg's stands squarely behind it.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran for 10 days. Drink plenty of water. If you do not enjoy gentle, effective relief from constipation, simply return the empty carton and we will send you double your money back. That's a promise from Kellogg's, London, Ontario.

READ HOW KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN HAS HELPED TYPICAL SUFFERERS FROM CONSTIPATION (due to lack of bulk)

From Mrs. W. Beaucage of Sherbrooke, Que. "I had taken a home remedy and many costly medicines to keep regular. Then I tried Kellogg's All-Bran. I have never been bothered with irregularity since."

A letter from Mr. H. W. Farmer of Windsor, states: "After suffering for over 10 years I'm free from irregularity thanks to Kellogg's All-Bran. I tried everything ... costly foods and laxatives ... only to find your inexpensive cereal did the trick."

Mrs. E. Pulley of Ottawa, Ontario, relates: "Taking laxatives for months left me tired, nervous and miserable. But Kellogg's All-Bran has helped me to happiness. Now I feel like myself again."

Writes Mr. J. G. Hillis, of Halifax, N.S. "It's a pleasure to be rid of harsh laxatives. I've had no trouble with irregularity for 18 months, since taking your gentle but effective laxative cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran."

Socreds Vote Down Critics

A CCF motion of non-confidence in the Social Credit government proposed by Robert Strachan (CCF Cowichan-Newcastle) was defeated yesterday by an unspectacular 26-20 division after little debate.

Government members lined up solidly against the motion in the form of an amendment to the budget, and CCF, Liberal and independent members all supported it.

A similar motion proposed Monday by CCF leader Arnold Webster was ruled out of order.

In stating the government's position, Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the Webster-Strachan proposals would mean "vast extra expenses." The Opposition was inconsistent in calling, at the same time, for further economies.

The proposed amendment called the budget inadequate because of a reduction in agriculture estimates, failure to eliminate [illegible] payments to hospitals, failure to reduce real property taxes and failure to use the highway development fund for toll-free bridges.

NO SUGGESTION

It also deplored the budget's failure to propose changes in federal-provincial tax agreement to correct the wage differential between government employees and those in private industry, and to provide for chronic hospital care, housing for senior citizens and relief of unemployment.

In a two-hour preamble to the motion, Mr. Strachan attacked the government for its earlier secrecy on the new school financing formula. He praised it as "a ray of sunshine for education" but "not necessarily a benefit for the municipalities."

He said the new formula was as confusing to municipalities as the ill-fated Rolston formula.

SHOULD PAY COSTS

He suggested the government provide a legal defense fund for "the many court cases which will arise out of the assessment equalization. The [illegible] case' to clear the air."

The reference in the budget speech to extravagant expenditures by rural school boards which bore only eight mills of their costs was termed "an outrageous and libelous charge against the people in the rural areas."

He charged also that the government paid too high a price for the Lions Gate Bridge (about $6,000,000) twice in sterling what its British owners paid for it in 1938.

"If you are not careful someone will sell you the Brooklyn Bridge," Mr. Strachan warned the government.

He called the government's attention to the recent appointment of former finance minister Einar Gunderson to the board of directors of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. For believers in monetary reform Mr. Gunderson was "now sitting in the camp of the enemy."

He wondered if it were "mere coincidence" that the Bank of Commerce is the one which handles most of the provincial government's banking business.

FLYING MINISTER REPLIES

British Columbia's airborne public works minister [illegible] filed answers to four more Liberal questions yesterday concerning his flying activities.

In answer to P. A. Gibbs (Liberal-Oak Bay) and Liberal leader Arthur Laing, Public Works Minister P. A. Gaglardi said his department now owns two planes, a Grumman and an Anson costing about $10,000 each.

He reported that the new Grumman Widgeon required a $39,635 refit job in addition.

Mr. Gaglardi said he had logged 136 hours of flying time while he was the sole passenger on government business, at a cost of $59 an hour.

The minister said the planes are housed in rented hangars at Patricia Bay at a cost of $766 a month and that the government had made efforts to purchase its own storage space.

He said 95 per cent of repair and maintenance work was done by government mechanics and the average monthly payroll for [illegible] was $[illegible].

* * *

"FAIREST TREATMENT"

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black yesterday defended his government's treatment of its civil servants as the "most liberal and fairest" in the whole of Canada.

He said the average monthly wage of 8,487 government employees was $253.93, only 9.4 per cent less than the average for all workers in B.C. of $277.94 and only 6.10 of 1 per cent under the Canadian average of $255.41. The B.C. Government Employees Association has claimed a 12 per cent differential in B.C.

But Mr. Black said the averages for industry did not include the generous civil service fringe benefits.

Reduction of the work week from 44 to 40 hours for most civil servants was equivalent to a 10 per cent wage increase. Of the 13 per cent of government employees who must still work a longer week, he said, most will get compensating salary increases.

The Social Credit government [illegible] has done more in two years "to better working conditions and ameliorate inequities suffered by civil servants than any other government in [illegible] years."

DELEGATION IGNORED

Robert Strachan (CCF Cowichan-Newcastle) charged that the cabinet refused to see a delegation from the B.C. Federation of Labor, provincial branch of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

The federation claimed it had urgently requested a meeting before February [illegible].

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black, who handles appointments for the cabinet, said the cabinet did not have time to meet the group at the time requested.

Tall Stack Gets Spruce-Up

Here's crane's-eye view of steeplejack Al Moseley, 130-foot-up chimney of the Phoenix (Lucky Lager) Brewery yesterday. He's there to chip, paint and repair the big stack, went aloft on small platform hitched by crane with extra span attached to the top of the towering chimney.

Canada Merger Likely

After CIO-AFL Join in U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A developing move for amalgamation of Canada's two biggest labor congresses got impetus Wednesday from a long step toward AFL-CIO unification in the United States.

Spokesman for the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labor, which have a combined membership of 855,000, said the action of U.S. associates of the Canadian bodies will speed eventual amalgamation on this side of the border.

The U.S. action was taken at Miami Beach, Fla., where committees of the AFL and CIO agreed to a merge into a single 15,000,000 member federation subject to later convention ratification.

In the view of qualified observers here, this may come about finally in the spring of 1956 and could be followed by organic unity of the TLC and CCL later that year.

In Toronto Claude Jodoin, TLC president, and A. R. Mosher, CCL president, both expressed jubilation over the move.

Victoria trade unionists also believe a Canadian merger is due.

"It's the greatest step labor has taken for years," said F. W. Staley, secretary of the Provincial Council of Carpenters (AFL-TLC). "I think it will lead to greater cooperation between the AFL and CIO in Canada."

"There is more feeling in Canada for unification than in the U.S.," he added.

James Moffat, carpenters local business agent, said that "if it works there it can work here."

CONCERTED EFFORT

Jack MacKenzie, International Woodworkers of America Local 1-118 (CIO-CCL) president, declared: "Organized labor will now be in a position to make a concerted effort at improving labor conditions in North America."

Charles Peck, business agent for Victoria local International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL-TLC), expressed the hope that "the Trades and Labor Congress and Canadian Congress of Labor can now get together."

Some expressed doubt however that some international union presidents and other officers who might lose jobs by the merger would be willing to throw their hats into election rings and take their chances.

RCMP Check Exploding Fuel

Royal Canadian Mounted Police will investigate this strange and highly inflammable gadget picked up on Weir Beach, near William Head, by James O'Connor, shown eyeing his find. Mr. O'Connor, paymaster at Victoria Machinery Depot, picked the contrivance up on the beach and took it home to burn in his fireplace. One of its four sections burned furiously and immediately, sending out a stream of flame like a distress flare. There is a lead weight at one end of the wood casing which indicates it is some sort of marine distress mechanism, says Mr. O'Connor.

Mental Unit To Be Built Outside City

Space for 1,500 Included in Plans

BY RAY BAINES
Colonist Legislative Reporter

The provincial government plans to build a 1,500-bed mental hospital near Victoria, primarily for the treatment of mentally ill persons on Vancouver Island.

This decision was announced yesterday by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black.

Although no location was mentioned, it was learned by The Daily Colonist that a site has been purchased about 15 miles outside the city.

Plans call for a "maximum security" section in the proposed hospital. This will mean eventual abandonment of the present inadequate Wilkinson Road institution.

PLANS ON BOARD

Mr. Black carefully worded his remarks to avoid appearance of a definite announcement, but later the Colonist learned plans are already on the drawing boards and the property is in the hands of the government.

In a speech in the legislature Mr. Black said property is available and "preliminary planning has been undertaken toward the possible construction of a 1,500-bed institution for the treatment of the mentally ill of this area.

"For some time it has been felt that the citizens of Vancouver Island and adjacent islands should have mental hospital facilities closer to their place of residence," the minister told the house.

He had said earlier that Essondale had "reached its maximum for efficient operation."

Officials say the Island institution would be complete in itself, in a way a smaller-scale Essondale.

WINCH TRIUMPH

It was a triumphant day for F. E. Winch, CCF MLA for Burnaby, who for years has been advocating better mental home accommodation.

When Mr. Black disclosed plans for the hospital, the veteran member nodded approval.

"Good, good," he said.

CCF leader Arnold Webster said: "It was a very welcome announcement. It came as a surprise to us. If it is true as announced it certainly meets with our approval."

AGED NEED CARE

Dr. D. F. Alcorn, city psychiatrist, expressed hope that the plan would include accommodation for the aged.

"A mental hospital particularly for the care of certain patients over 70 years of age is most necessary in this area," he said.

"I hope that such a place would prevent such a situation as obtains at the present time, where patients who are over 70 and seriously mentally ill, cannot obtain hospitalization except after their names have been on the waiting lists for the homes for the aged for some time, or if they are wealthy enough to afford expensive private accommodation."

It is expected the old section of Westholme Hospital will be used as a mental hospital, as the buildings are not considered suitable for a hospital, another Victoria psychiatrist said.

Flames Sweep Home

Baby Dies in Fire, Three Others Safe

(Special to the Colonist)

NANAIMO — A baby died and three others escaped injury in a raring flash fire that destroyed a home on the No. 1 Indian reservation about 5 p.m. yesterday.

Lost in the blaze was the eight month old daughter of Mrs. Virginia Fraser, whose home was gutted.

The other children, a second daughter and a son of Mrs. Fraser, about four and five years old, and an unidentified child of a neighbor, managed to escape from the five-room house.

The children were alone in the house when the fire started apparently from a faulty stove.

Douglas White, Jr., son of a neighbor, saw the fire first and called the Indian reserve fire department. Dick and Don White rushed equipment to the scene, but the fire swept through the house so quickly their fire-fighting efforts were in vain.

A call was brought the Nanaimo fire department to the scene, but the baby could not be saved.

No one saw the other children leave the house and it isn't yet known how they escaped the flames.

The Fraser children are being sheltered by the Alfred Wise family. Other neighbors are looking after the mother.

An inquest will be held.

$127,600,000 Loss

Provincial Taxes Would Hit Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government said Wednesday it would lose an estimated $127,600,000 annually if all other provinces ditched the federal-provincial tax rental agreements and followed Quebec's lead in imposing a provincial income tax.

The theoretical figure was based on a 10-per-cent reduction in federal income tax in all 10 provinces.

On January 11 Prime Minister St. Laurent announced the governments proposed a decision to make a 10-per-cent reduction in federal personal income tax for taxpayers of Quebec only, provided with a provincial tax of the kind and only one outside the tax rental agreements.

RETROACTIVE

The cut will apply in 1955 and 1956 and was made retroactive to 1951, the year in which Quebec started its tax, which amounts to about 15 per cent of federal levies.

At the same time the government made the 10-per-cent cut available to other provinces as an alternative to the agreements. None has yet indicated it intends to exercise the option.

Hazen Argue, CCF Assiniboia, asked what a 10-per-cent reduction in federal income tax in Quebec and the other nine provinces would represent in lost federal revenue.

In a return tabled Wednesday in the Commons the government gave these loss figures by provinces on the basis of collections in the 1953-54 fiscal year:

Ontario, $62,300,000; Quebec, $26,400,000; British Columbia, $12,700,000; Alberta, $8,100,000; Manitoba, $6,000,000; Saskatchewan, $4,500,000; Nova Scotia, $2,100,000; New Brunswick, $1,300,000; Newfoundland, $3,200,000; Prince Edward Island, $200,000.

Compensation Possible In Tax-Sale House Case

Although the new bill will not cover Mrs. Booth's case, it is reported the government may arrange compensation for her, anyway.

Socred Thinks So

Rhodes Scholars Socialistic?

OTTAWA (CP) — John Black, more outspoken Social Credit member from Lethbridge, Alta., indicted Wednesday he has little regard for Oxford's Rhodes scholars and graduates of Cambridge and the London school of economics.

"Generally speaking," he said, "when a man has graduated from any one of these he is a socialist in his ideas, he is a centralizer and he thinks no one knows how to govern a country except his own particular class."

Mr. Blackmore attacked Rhodes scholars during a Commons debate on the question of federal assistance to public education.

He said Citizenship Minister Pickersgill's opposition to the proposal, on the ground that it would encroach provincial authority, is typical of Rhodes scholars.

Mr. Pickersgill, who studied at Oxford on a scholarship offered by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, interjected to say he was not a Rhodes scholar, a socialist or a centralizer.

Mr. Blackmore replied that Mr. Pickersgill acted like an Oxford graduate.

Routed from Homes in Blinding Rain

Gun-Prodded Negroes Shifted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Under the guns and spears of 2,500 policemen and soldiers, hundreds of sullen Congress Wednesday were herded from their shantytown homes to a new life in a government segregation project 14 miles outside the city.

But many others who were to have been evacuated Wednesday were tipped off by a hooded mystery man and bid out with friends and relatives.

Many of these regard the government built meadowlands project as a device for entrenching segregation more deeply and preferred to stay in their old Sophiatown slum area.

About 240 families were scheduled for removal from Sophiatown's worst slums Wednesday at the beginning of South Africa's biggest population shift. Just over 100 families went.

The man who tipped off the holdouts during Tuesday night's driving rain apparently was a leader in the African National Congress who is wanted by police for helping organize a resistance campaign.

At dawn police and troops surrounded Sophiatown, long a centre for race riots. The Negroes were moved in army trucks in the blinding rain.

Feeling ran high among the holdouts. But they appeared to be fighting a losing battle since the government had doomed their shanties to make way for white residences and factories in the advancing white suburb of Westdene.

Big Four Talks At Future Date Backed in U.K.

(Compiled from AP and CP Dispatches)

Prime Minister Churchill yesterday said he still favors Big Four talks with the Russians, while U.S. officials expressed cautious interest in a Soviet peace-promoting plan.

On the Russian proposal that parliamentary groups of the various nations exchange visits, the U.S. state department officially had no comment. This was largely because it had nothing to go on beyond London dispatches reporting that the Supreme Soviet parliament had adopted a declaration calling for the exchange of legislators.

Responding to labor demands that he invite the new Soviet premier, Marshal Nikojai Bulganin, to join in Big Four talks soon, Churchill declared:

"The policy of the government is to seek a four-power conference at a time when it seems likely to yield genuine results, but that occasion is not likely to occur until after the ratification of the London-Paris agreements."

The Churchill government hopes the accords to free and rearm the West Germans will go through the parliamentary mills of all nine nations involved within a couple of months.

The Kremlin shake-up was accompanied by a renewed declaration from Foreign Minister Molotov that ratification of the Paris accords would doom hopes for fruitful East-West talks. The tough Molotov speech led some Labor MPs to proclaim Churchill lost his chance for Big Four talks with the ouster of Georgi Malenkov.

Churchill gave no indication that the reshuffle in the Soviet hierarchy has undermined his hopes that a Big Four meeting can be arranged.

A spokesman said the U.S. state department has heard nothing yet from the U.S. embassy in Moscow and would like to see an invitation from the Soviets before taking a stand.

The Soviet declaration, addressed to "the peoples and parliaments of all countries of the world," drew restrained optimism from several senators. Several suggested the proposal might do some good—if it was a genuine gesture of goodwill.

City Approves Drafting Lease For Racetrack

City council yesterday authorized City Solicitor A. J. Patton to draw up a lease of property between Elk and Beaver Lakes for the Island Turf Company Limited.

Planned for the site is a $350,000 horse racing establishment to include a five-eighths of a mile track and enclosed grandstand to seat 5,000 persons.

Representatives of the firm, it was learned, will meet the city solicitor today to negotiate terms of the lease.

Last summer William Lochead and Stanley Hoskin, of the West Coast Horsemen's Association, chief promoters of the track, were granted a six-month lease "for exploratory purposes" with the right to renewal for a further period of not more than 30 years, subject to terms agreed on at the end of the six-month period.

G. Max Bell, prominent western newspaper publisher and horseman, and Ralph Farris, Vancouver investment house head, have been named among the backers of the Island Turf Club Ltd., formed to operate the race track.

Island Turf Club has been incorporated as a company under the Companies Act, the Colonist learned yesterday.

Mr. Lochead was named president and Mr. Hoskin secretary.

Caribbean Swim Relaxes Princess

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP)—Princess Margaret Thursday donned a one-piece silver-grey bathing suit and relaxed in the blue-green Caribbean.

The princess was taking a free afternoon and evening as a break from the exacting duties of her royal tour of the British West Indies. She paddled in the cool water at a beach near Holetown.

Cheering crowds stood along the roadside as the princess motored to Holetown and into a local estate where police guards stopped all but special guests.

Police also stood guard several hundred yards up the beach and a police boat circled off shore to give the princess a quiet afternoon.

Almost immediately she donned her bathing suit, white cap and white sandals and strolled to the beach which is almost in the courtyard of the estate.

Ottawa Claims B.C. Selling Out Water Power

JEAN LESAGE

Winch Says Project Difficult To Stop

OTTAWA (CP)—Resources Minister Lesage Thursday accused the British Columbia government of "selling out" its water resources for "peanuts—and peanuts that are not even guaranteed."

Harold Winch (CCF, Vancouver East) joining the debate that followed the minister's remarks, doubted that the federal government could stop work on the dam once it starts even if B.C. Lands Minister Sommers were put in jail. He said B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett plans to go ahead with the Kaiser project regardless of federal action.

Mr. Lesage referred vaguely to the B.C. agreement with the Kaiser Corp. of the United States for construction of a water storage dam on the Arrow Lakes in B.C. as a "fire-sale," "sell-out" and a "steal."

Another Liberal in the Commons called out "a robbery."

Power needs of the U.S. should not be the criterion "when we decide what to do with our natural resources," Mr. Lesage said.

He read a section from the B.C. Kaiser agreement which would guarantee B.C. 20 per cent of additional power generated at Bonneville, Idaho, by possible additions to the Arrow Lakes dam in later years.

Mr. Lesage said the U.S. federal power commission owns and operates Bonneville and decides how its power will be allotted. But the power commission was not a signatory to the agreement.

"There is no guarantee at all," he said, waving a copy of the agreement. "I never saw anything so childish."

All B.C. would get out of the agreement would be a small cash payment.

Mr. Lesage spoke during Commons debate on a bill which would give the federal government stricter control over use of international river waters.

The bill also would enable the federal government to block the B.C. Kaiser contract. Mr. Lesage said the contract is not good business for B.C. or Canada.

Social Credit members who opposed the bill and spoke in favor of the B.C. Kaiser agreement were taking a short-sighted view.

'Islands Not Worth It'

U.S. Risking War, Says Ex-Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—A former Liberal cabinet minister said Thursday the Formosan policy of the United States may result in a third world war.

Senator William Euler (L., Ontario) said during the Senate Throne Speech debate it is "far-fetched" to say control of Formosa is necessary for U.S. defense.

"I fear that out of this policy of the United States there is a risk of getting into another war," he said.

It was not worth the risk of war to challenge China's claim to Formosa and other islands off the China coast, he said. These islands, including Formosa, "inherently belong to China."

"If we support the policy proposed by the United States, we are literally playing with fire," he said.

SEN. WILLIAM EULER

No Surpluses

Twenty years ago other provinces had thought they had water power surpluses to export to the U.S. But now there were no surpluses. Canada could not afford to part easily with its power resources.

The Kaiser dam would store in the Arrow Lakes 3,000,000 acre feet of water enough to cover that many acres of land to a depth of one foot. From the lakes which are a widening of the Columbia river, water would be fed down to Bonneville as needed to generate power there.

John Blackmore (SC-Lethbridge) said the B.C.-Ottawa dispute over the Kaiser agreement presented a "dangerous situation." The federal government could override the province but in so doing it would destroy the Dominion.

To hear "some reckless people," one would think the B.C. government had bartered away half the province.

He maintained the Kaiser agreement is "iron-clad" and that it was worked out very carefully. Everything had been done to protect the interests of British Columbians.

B.C. would get $1,000,000 "clear profit" annually from Kaiser to help reduce the provincial debt.

Mr. Blackmore said the federal government should withdraw the bill and apologize to B.C.

Harold E. Winch (CCF, Vancouver East) raised the constitutional problem involved in the bill.

He said he was told by Premier Bennett of B.C. that the province intended to go ahead with the Kaiser project no matter what the federal government did and that the province would be legally correct in doing so.

Hard To Stop

Suppose Mr. Winch said that Ottawa did obtain an injunction against B.C. to stop construction of the dam. How would it be served? If Lands Minister Sommers of B.C. were put in jail, that would not stop the gravel trucks working on the dam.

The matter might eventually have to go to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Winch said he supports the bill 100 per cent in principle.

Mr. Lesage said action which affects the flow of an international river in another country cannot be confined solely to provincial jurisdiction. It was a matter of national and international concern.

"There can be no doubt about the constitutional validity of the bill," he said.

James A. Byrne (L., Kootenay East) said the B.C.-Kaiser agreement jeopardizes Canadian use of the entire Columbia River basin.

To stretch provincial rights to the point where a private company could make a deal concerning national resources was "nothing short of pillage."

Bert Leboe (SC, Cariboo) said he can see no reason for the federal government to block a deal profitable to the people of B.C. The West Kootenay region of B.C. had more power potential than it could put to work.

Mr. Leboe said it appears the federal administration wants to prevent the B.C. government competing with the West Kootenay Light and Power Co., owned by Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

At the night sitting, A. B. Patterson (SC, Fraser Valley) said B.C. can look after its own affairs better than an aggregation of politicians 3,000 miles away.

He accused Mr. Lesage of taking a dog-in-the-manger attitude which held that Canada didn't need the power now and wouldn't let anybody else use it.

'Evidence Seems Definite'

Tobacco Blamed In Heart Damage

CHICAGO (AP) — The Journal of the American Medical Association says "there seems now to be definite evidence" that smoking can damage th heart muscle.

An editorial sets forth:

"There seems now to be definite evidence that smoking, even though it may not directly affect the corony arteries, can have a damaging effect on the myocardium (muscular part of the wall of the heart.)

"No patient with coronary disease should incur the added risk to his heart imposed by smoking without first discussing thoroughly the problem with his physician."

'WAIT AND SEE'

In reply, Timothy V. Hartnett, chairman of the tobacco industry research committee, said in New York that his group is "convinced the vast majority of the American public agrees that all questions of tobacco in relation to human health need much more thorough and complete investigation, than has been made up to now."

Four doctors said in the Journal that cigarette smoking produces definite and immediate effect on the action of the heart in both normal persons and those with heart disease.

The doctors recommended that heart disease sufferers quit smoking entirely.

The doctors said significant increases in heart rate and blood pressure followed the smoking of regular cigarettes in 65 persons tested. The test group included both normal persons and those with heart disease.

Nationalists Scorch Earth Of Tachens

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters)—Fierce flames from demolition fires flickered high above the East China Sea early today, consuming the Chinese Nationalists' last defenses in the now almost-deserted Tachen Islands.

The light blazing from the islands was so brilliant that Communist troops waiting on the mainland and nearby islands to take over the Tachens could clearly see their waiting prize.

Tiny Vial of Powder May Be Worth Million

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A tiny vial of radioactive powder, snug in the radium-vault of Port Arthur hospital, was the subject of widespread speculation Thursday.

Angus MacDonald, a Second World War veteran, turned the powder over to police after he tested it and reported he found radioactive reaction on his instruments.

A police constable said he put a geiger counter near the material and it went "crazy."

It was believed the material, which MacDonald said glowed green in the dark, was radium. If so, officials estimated its value at about $1,000,000. The two-ounce vial is about three-quarters full. The world's supply of radium is between four and five pounds.

If the material is uranium, it would be worth "several hundred dollars a pound," officials said.

MacDonald said the powder has been in his possession 11 years. He said it was obtained in 1944 from the laboratory of some German scientists in Holland. A member of the Dutch underground gave it to him.

Police said the laxative pills contained strychnine and cascara.

Armed Patrols Sent to Border

PORTO ALEGRE (Reuters)—Police rushed armed patrols to the Brazil-Argentine border Thursday after the Argentine police crossed the border in search of a horse thief. Brazilian villagers opened fire on them, killing one and wounding two others.

Chiang Decried

LONDON (Reuters)—Leaders of Britain's 700,000-strong National Union of Mine Workers declared in a resolution yesterday that Chiang Kai-shek, president of Nationalist China, should be exiled.

At an executive meeting they passed a resolution "enthusiastically endorsing" statements made by Clement Attlee, leader of Britain's Labor Party, on the Formosa crisis.

Ship Deal Turned Down

OTTAWA (CP)—The trade department has rejected an application by the East-West Trading Company of Vancouver for a permit to build and export cargo ships to Russia.

A spokesman said Thursday the application was rejected on the grounds specifications indicated the vessels would be of strategic value to the Soviet in the event of war.

Two Royal Representatives Described as Lawbreakers

B.C.'s lieutenant-governor and the former governor-general of Canada both broke the law by offering Frank Calder (CCF, Atlin) drinks, a CCF member told the House yesterday.

Frank Howard (CCF, Skeena) cited the two incidents as examples of the "ridiculous restrictions" which prevent native Indians from consuming liquor anywhere but in public licensed premises.

He said Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace broke the law at the recent state dinner for MLAs by having Mr. Calder, Canada's only native Indian MLA, in Government House where liquor was served and by offering it to him. He said Mr. Calder also broke the law by accepting it.

Mr. Howard also recalled a visit of Viscount Alexander of Tunis to Prince Rupert where Mr. Calder drank with the former governor-general at a civic function.

BOTH IN WRONG

He said if he invited Mr. Calder to his room and there was a bottle present, "both of us could be pinched." Legally, he said, native Indians cannot take a drink in the home of a friend.

He urged the government to press for a change in the Indian Act which would allow Indians to buy liquor in a government liquor store and take it home like anyone else.

CF-100 Arrives at Comox

Jet Almost Ahead of Itself

An RCAF jet en route from Edmonton to Comox air station last night flew so fast that it landed at the same time as it started.

One of the two long-awaited all-weather CF-100s, it arrived at 5.30 p.m. (PST), after leaving Edmonton at 5.30 p.m. (MST).

Piloted by Sqdn.-Ldr. Frank Haley, the jet took just 60 minutes to wing its way from Namao, near Edmonton. A second CF-100 is expected hourly.

The station turned out to a man to meet the plane.

Speed Limit To Rise

B.C. Cars Can 'Go Like 60' Soon

The 50-mile-an-hour speed limit in British Columbia will be boosted to 60 miles an hour in certain unrestricted areas of good highway.

Public Works Minister P. A. Gaglardi said yesterday his department has been working with the RCMP for several weeks gathering data on suitable areas for the increase.

The change will be made this year by order in council but Mr. Gaglardi said that if a change in legislation is needed it will be brought in this session.

B.C. motorists will probably be able to take advantage of the increased limit this summer. It is expected that certain sections of the Island Highway on Vancouver Island will be included in the speed-up.

Mr. Gaglardi, who will take over the newly formed highways department when the legislature approves amendments to the Constitution Act, announced the speed boost while reviewing an estimated $35,000,000 Lower Mainland highway program.

The program, to be extended over 10 or 12 years, will include a new highway through the Fraser Valley to Hope and another on the other side of the Fraser River to Hague.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

MORE than 95 per cent of serious road accidents involve cars that are in perfect mechanical condition.

Some 98 per cent of fatal and near-fatal accidents involve cars that apparently have nothing wrong with their machinery, it says in the American accident summary issued by The Travelers' Insurance Co.

Is a vehicle-testing station a real means of preventing accidents? Or is it simply another way for someone to make a profit at the expense of the poor motorist?

* * *

The motorist ranks with the smoker and the drinker as a prime victim of assorted taxes and forced payments. "Soak the motorist" has been the slogan of governments at all levels since the automobile age began.

Vehicle-testing stations cost the car-owner money. Why add another tax to the grievous burden he already bears?

Do the authorities really want to cut down the serious total of highway accidents—or do they merely want to make a loud political noise while filching another dollar from the automobile owner's pocket?

If they really want to cut down accidents, they should focus their attention on the real culprit—the automobile manufacturer.

While the chronic viewers-with-alarm try to place the blame on whisky and mechanical defects, automobile factories keep turning out bigger and faster cars.

Aside from catering to the contemptible vanity of cowboys-on-wheels who (mentally) never grow out of their teens, what earthly use is a vehicle shaped like a giant enamelled cockroach, and driven by a power plant sufficient to propel a locomotive?

The common factor in the overwhelming majority of accidents is high speed. Car manufacturers are competing savagely to give the driver more and more speed each year.

* * *

Any driver who is silly enough to try keeping within the speed limit can see how much [illegible] the power that the manufacturers hand them.

Drive along at 30 miles an hour, and cars keep whizzing past as though you were standing still. The same happens in a 50-mile zone. Not only do drivers whizz past, but they glower at you sideways with a most aggrieved expression and shatter your eardrums with a shriek from the horn.

This is where the motorist sheds the Jekyl side of his nature (poor tax victim), and takes on the Hyde personality (road menace).

Whatever the speed limit may be, it's too slow for him. Even if the limit were 100, numbers of motorists would still be going 110, and the manufacturers would give them engines capable of going 200.

* * *

Much of the blame for accidents can be divided between manufacturers and speed-mad drivers.

Find a means to tax the manufacturers a large sum for each horsepower above a rational amount, and you would wipe out many accidents.

Send great fleets of "ghost cars" to patrol the roads for speeders and road hogs, and you would wipe out a great many more.

King of the Safecrackers

Old Restlessness, Urge To Travel Results in South Seas Wandering

(The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became King of the Safecrackers in the United States, now lives quietly, having paid for his years of wrong doing, right among us on Vancouver Island. He continues his story in Chapter 22 today.)

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

[illegible]

The restlessness I've told you about, that urge to keep moving, caught up with me again in 1947 and I sold my Brisbane shop. Made a good profit, too, although it cost me a little extra to transfer the lease.

Taking ship once more, I visited New Zealand for a time, then spent three or four months wandering through the South Seas. There were no regular routes to follow or ships to take, so I traveled from one island to another that caught my fancy and remained until another ship arrived to carry me on my way.

Suva in the Fiji Islands I remember particularly. The woman who owned the hotel where I stayed told me she had nursed Jack London when he visited there some years before. We talked about him at length, for he is one of my favorite authors.

[illegible] it seemed arrived at [illegible] Stevenson's [illegible] This [illegible] him back to [illegible] at the hotel then owned by her father.

From Suva I journeyed to Samoa, where I talked with people who had known Robert Louis Stevenson in his last days on that island. Natives aged when I met them told me they'd sung and danced for Stevenson when they were children.

Visiting the great author's tomb, I copied its famous inscription: "... Home is the Hunter ..."

Further sailings through the South Seas took me to Pitcairn, where the Bounty mutineers settled; to Tonga, where I had a fruit salad tea with Queen Salote; to another lonely isle which held a cable-link tying Victoria to New Zealand. The man in charge, and his wife, told me of their life—two years on the island, then six months "out" in the world.

There were other islands, then back to [illegible] where I received a cable from Dean Jennings, a San Francisco newspaper man. He said he had talked to Collier's magazine about a series of articles on my crime career, and would I come back and talk it over with him?

In 1948, then, I embarked on a sugar boat bound for Vancouver. Jennings and I got together that fall and worked on the articles until about Christmas.

All this time I was still uneasy about city life. Too many people; too many chances of meeting someone from the past. Consequently, I bought a bit of land at the north end of Salt Spring Island, and once again cut timber and built a home.

[illegible] after the Collier's articles appeared in mid-1949 [illegible] My new home I traded for a store on West [illegible] It was a [illegible] was run much like the store I'd had in Brisbane.

This proved to be my final experience in the business world, and I see the chances it did well for me. I still chuckle over the deal I made getting rid of it, for the buyer was a man with a wide reputation [illegible]

By this time I felt I had been in one place too long. More and more often it seemed to me I was being tailed—whether by someone from the underworld or by detectives I could not tell.

By their way of thinking there could have been good reason to keep track of me. For one thing, there was the threat of my former mob-members as they went off to jail.

"I'll kill you yet, Herb, if the cops at San Quentin don't get you first."

Two of them had promised that, and even if they couldn't do it themselves, some of their friends might take on the job.

There was a bigger but entirely false reason for taking me. Many crooks, and perhaps many honest people, thought I must surely have kept a big part of the huge sums I had made as "king of the safecrackers." Some [illegible] I must be [illegible] away in a cache—and somewhere or other I must have hid them too.

Little did they know that every cent I had put by from those big hauls was gone, spent in vain attempts to escape, spent in useless bribes, spent for my defense.

There was nothing left at [illegible] live.

No doubt the law was also keeping an eye on me. That would be natural for an ex-con with a history like mine might [illegible] was even likely to go back to a life in which he had made so much money so easily.

I had two concrete proofs that I had not been forgotten.

Soviet Tank New Challenge

BERLIN (NANA)—Russia is developing a new tank which will be able to outrange the U.S. Army's Patton M-48 and the British Centurion.

Western intelligence officials are in possession of nearly all the details of the new tank, named the Taran. It is a development of Stalin's wartime [illegible] weapon against the West.

The new tank weighs around 40 tons and is powered by a diesel engine capable of propelling it over all kinds of country at high speeds. Maximum speed is unknown, but it is estimated the T-54 can travel over the [illegible] country at a steady 35 miles an hour.

The accent is on heavy armor plating to withstand high velocity [illegible] The main armament is an 85 millimetre gun as in the T-34, but with a longer barrel and higher velocity.

Only one question remains completely unanswered. Is the T-54 equipped with stabilizing machinery like the Centurion and Patton tank? This machinery keeps the gun steadily trained on the target however much the tank rolls or plunges.

Take It Easy On Old Clumps

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.

The next three or four weeks will be a good time to divide and replant old clumps of perennials in the perennial border [illegible]

[illegible]

NOT FOR MODERNS

The modern large-flowered varieties of lupins and delphiniums don't lend themselves to division in this way as the older and smaller flowered kinds did. The new ones are best increased by cuttings.

The book says that these should be cut off just above soil level, when the young shoots are a few inches high and before the stalks become hollow. Personally, I always cheat a little bit here and take what are called "Irishman's cuttings," which are shoots cut off well below ground level and which have already made a few small roots.

As soon as the new spring growth can be seen, I clear away the soil at the edge of the clump very carefully with a pointed label [illegible]

DON'T NEGLECT IT

The perennial border all too often suffers considerable neglect at this time of the year.

May Remarry—But Not in Church

Church of England Eases Divorce Stand

LONDON (Reuters) — The Church of England Thursday enunciated a slight moderation in its attitude to divorce adding fresh material to a controversy which has smouldered in Britain for years.

Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury and spiritual head of the Church, issued a pamphlet conceding that there are cases where remarriage after divorce has been "abundantly blessed." But he upheld the church's refusal to allow divorced persons, even "innocent parties", to marry in church.

Dr. Fisher wrote: "Let me say quite frankly that in some cases where a first marriage has ended in tragedy, a second marriage has, by every test of the Holy Spirit that we are able to recognize, been abundantly blessed."

But, he added, if divorced persons remarry they can never again "bear a full and clear witness to our Lord's declaration of what marriage is. They must decide whether this lasting spiritual loss is in their judgment outweighed by a call of God to seek spiritual gain in a second marriage."

He said the church cannot compromise its standards by remarrying them, but "if they feel penal of a church marriage to be a cross of suffering, they should bear it for the church so that it may not in its official acts of marrying, compromise the [illegible]

The prelate contended that in this way "the Christian standard is being saved; the church is doing its necessary work and making people think more seriously before embarking on marriage."

Immediate criticism of the archbishop's views came from the Modern Churchmen's Union, a body of Anglican churchmen who call for an interpretation of the Gospel in the light of modern events.

The union's director, Rev. C. O. Rhodes, said it was impossible to reconcile Dr. Fisher's attitude to remarriage with the idea that such marriages are in any way sinful, or fall short of Christian ideal.

"We can therefore see no reason why the church should withhold its full blessing from them."

Atomic scientist Dr. Ralph Lapp said yesterday in Chicago that 28 well-placed H-bomb hits on the United States could "atomize" with deadly radioactive fall-out a vast region containing two-thirds of the country's industrial centres and 50,000,000 inhabitants. He said a single H-bomb exploded close to the ground, would coat an area the size of Maryland (about 10,000 square miles) with a potential death mantle of radioactivity.

Workmanlike Formula

LIKE the new pattern of financial relations in general between the province and the municipalities outlined in Finance Minister Bennett's budget speech, the order-in-council revising the provincial system of school grants will need much detailed study before its effects can be fully understood. No doubt school board officials everywhere are now busy with pencils and paper figuring out just what the changes will mean in the individual school districts. First impression of the apparently sensible formula is that they will find the new scheme mainly to their advantage, both financially and through the simplification of office procedures and annual estimation.

Education Minister Williston has stated in the House that school boards will have to use restraint in expenditures, a requirement with which taxpayers in general will be in full accord. However, there is no suggestion in the new formula or the minister's exposition of it that the government intends to be unduly restrictive. On the contrary assistance to be forthcoming from the Province appears to be much more liberal than heretofore, and the system covering all elements of school costs allows considerable flexibility to those in closest contact with them, the school boards.

This is illustrated in the formula for computing provincial grants towards teachers' salaries. The government has wisely discarded the former salary schedule, now nine years old, and substituted one that is realistic. School boards will not be bound by it, however. Instead it will form the basis for provincial grants; individual boards may pay their teachers higher rates, but must cover them through local taxes. This principle recognizes the fact that salary needs vary according to economic conditions in different parts of the province. Supplementary grants will be made to assist boards in covering other essential expenditures, and local ability to pay will be a consideration in apportionment of the share the government will accept.

It has always been acknowledged that while school financing remains shared by the Province and the municipalities, no formula could ever be devised that would satisfy everyone. The new assessment rules no doubt will continue to raise complaint in some quarters for a while, until the difficulties usually attending changes of this kind have been ironed out. So far as the cost apportionment system is concerned the government appears to have come closer to a workable solution than any B.C. administration has done in the past, and everyone having a hand in the complex revision deserves full marks on that score.

Trade Union Merger

THE biggest trade union movement for many years is the contemplated merger across the line of the widespread AFL and CIO organizations. This is a move long sought by U.S. labor leaders and now brought near to fruition by the agreement signed this week to proceed with amalgamation, a complicated process which will of necessity take about a year to complete. It will mean bringing together under one big union some 15,000,000 American workers, undoubtedly strengthening their bargaining power and the united front brought to bear on all questions affecting their interests.

As a corollary while such a merger will place vast powers in the hands of the eventual new leadership it will also involve the complementary obligation of great responsibility. It should invite an era of stability and continuity both on the part of the unions and of management through more concerted negotiation. A marked result expected to follow also will be the end of jurisdictional disputes that have been a sore spot on the labor front and which have been detrimental to workers and the general economy alike.

Canadian interest in this historic AFL-CIO merger is heightened by its effect on the national TLC and CCL organizations which are affiliates of the American union bodies and intermingled in many ways through international officers and boards. There is thus the likelihood that the Canadian counterparts of the AFL and CIO will also move to effect a merger since this would seem to be a natural sequel if only to facilitate the conduct of Canadian union affairs in relation to their U.S. connection. One immediate consequence of similar amalgamation in B.C. would be to smooth the procedures involved in approach to the provincial labor board, which is frequently engaged in complicated details because of the two rival union groups making representations.

One other aspect of the subject is that any TLC-CCL merger may invite again a thought often expressed, namely that the Canadian labor bodies may through their own amalgamation reach a strength that would enable them to function independently, in harmony with American labor organization but with complete autonomy in their own affairs. The day is past when cross-border authority and support are necessary to sustain the efforts and aims of Canadian labor, which in a TLC-CCL merger would represent the better part of a million workers, proportionately as strong in their own country as the AFL-CIO merger will be across the line.

A Three-Way Gain

THE move by the provincial government to merge the facilities of the Normal School and Victoria College, preserve a straight-line connection with the University of British Columbia, and prepare for future extension of the arts, science and education courses obtainable by students in residence here is a forward step. Greater Victoria homes are assured of continuing freshman and sophomore years in direct affiliation with the University, the district school board will be relieved of local costs amounting to some $20,000 per annum, and the door will be left open to natural growth in the development of both college and teacher-training divisions.

From the earliest days of its inception in affiliation with McGill University, Victoria College has always been able to offer first and second year courses to arts and science students on their way through university. When the University of British Columbia took over this arrangement was perpetuated, as under the new scheme it will be. If later the senior years can be added that would be very welcome.

The status of Normal Schools, as provincial institutions, has been changing generally in Canada. The modern trend has been definitely towards full university guidance of their functions under faculties of education. The present move is in line with that, and the more timely because exceptional opportunity was present in the facts as they concern the provincial institution in Victoria, co-quartered with Victoria College.

From the standpoint of administration the new system should prove to be a decided improvement. Neither College nor Normal School has any direct relationship with the lower school system, nor should any of their costs fall on the shoulders of local taxpayers as such. With respect to the former Greater Victoria is being freed from an obligation of long standing; one that it had been willing to assume only because its desire for first and second year university tuition was deeply rooted.

It stands to the credit of both institutions that the cultural contributions which they will take into the merger will be on a high plane. Higher standards in teacher-training under university rules should result from the move; while Victoria College clearly is on its way forward and up. Nor should it be forgotten that both institutions have in the past fulfilled an extra-territorial service of much benefit to numbers of advanced students drawn from all parts of the province.

U.S. Labor Party Due?

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

THE progress being made toward merger of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations naturally raises the question of whether the United States is to have either a de facto or a formal labor party.

The day when American labor and a political party will represent a single entity, as is the case in Britain for most practical purposes, does not seem near, but it may be approaching.

The AFL, particularly, has usually followed the policy that it would engage in politics only to the extent required by labor unionism. Led by the CIO, however, both organizations have in recent years come to the conception that unionism embraces ideology, management and market practices, federal business regulations, and almost anything that touches the economy and the state of the nation as a whole.

From endorsement of individual candidates for public office on the basis of their attitudes toward issues in which labor was most interested, political action by both gradually began to follow lines of broad general policy. This has resulted in fairly general support by labor officials for the Democratic party.

There have been predictions that a unified labor movement would take over completely the Democratic party. Others foresee that labor will gradually assume the posture of maintaining at least a show of independence of both parties, so holding a position from which the whip can be cracked at will.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE eyes of the world are on Moscow says a news item from overseas, and indeed they are. It seems to me they've been there for an unconscionable length of time. You might say Moscow has haunted the past few generations from birth. Looking back over the years it's appalling the number of hours spent by everyone wondering what's going on behind the Kremlin walls. In total they must run into numerous lifetimes and this is a sad waste of the human birthright. It makes one wonder if Napoleon in his heyday ever invited such curiosity.

* * *

There was no radio, rapid communication or widespread newspaper reading then of course and people were left in the peaceful ignorance of their own backyards, unconscious in large part of the rest of the world. Whether this was for the better or worse is problematical and I am merely noting the difference a century and a half can make. Although for that matter now I come to think of it little English children who were ill-behaved were shooed to goodness by the mention of a bogey man called "Boney" sure to get them if they didn't watch out. So Napoleon was no stranger to his betters either. He once had his eye on Moscow too as you know, an acquisitive eye, and if he is peering over my shoulder as I write it wouldn't surprise me were he a bit piqued. Stalin was never a childish bogeyman and Molotov is too big a mouthful to be a word of fright but for certain these two gentlemen together gave more people pins and needles than ever did the Little Corporal who never was a corporal.

* * *

There are days when I could think of more pleasant things to muse over than Moscow and I daresay you feel ditto on the subject. Even an enigma that's a menace tires on one in spite of H-bombs and all the rest of the paraphernalia that gobbles up our dollars although I must concede the Soviet folk have us beaten to a frazzle when it comes to quiz contests. They should be in show business, I mean a different kind of show business from the one they're in. Talking of show business as an antidote to Kremlin business there is for instance La Hutton, who could yell a Cossack to silence if she ever rendered the Volga boat song. Dear Betty retired not long ago all tears because she'd discovered it was more important to be a woman than a movie star, but alas she had things twisted and wants back again. Two children weren't enough to keep her busy she says and she got lonesome for greasepaint. Perhaps they were too much.

* * *

Funny thing we don't hear much about Soviet film stars. Well it's not funny really since we don't hear much that's confidential of any kind from Moscow, period, but if there are any and there must be I suppose they sure don't get the billing that Betty and Rita and Alva and all the Hollywood matrons get. Hollywood and the Kremlin are quite different places naturally, although similar in one respect. The latter keeps quiet and gives you the shivers, the former shouts out loud and gives you the shivers too. However I think if you had the choice you'd pick Betty rather than Vyacheslav for a variety of reasons.

* * *

Vyacheslav is Molotov's first name in case you don't know it, familiar though you might be with this gentleman's surname. It's been a bit of nightmare itself as long now, it almost seems, as one can remember. A chap who was at the UN founding in San Francisco 10 years ago says he formed the impression that Molotov was the implacable enemy of the west, which perhaps isn't news exactly since he's not been what you'd call very friendly, has he? He hasn't been out of his game like La Hutton was, briefly, out of hers, but the new Kremlin shift shows him up again in a fresh light. Not that his light has ever been under a bushel, he's one Moscow laddie who seems to know how to manipulate the strings. Incidentally, I haven't noticed much attention paid to Malenkov's resignation from the angle of peace abdication. Hitherto a public confession has been forerunner to drastic denouement, so maybe there's a new slant to the wind in Moscow.

* * *

Nobody knows, on our side I mean, which is the exasperating part of the whole Kremlin business, not even our prime ministers. This is the one subject on which the guess of the dunce is as good as that of the pundit. Maybe of course the mandarins of Moscow don't always know themselves where they're heading, which wouldn't be surprising either; the authors of quiz contests aren't always as learned as they might appear. But as I said at the beginning it gets boring looking at enigmas wrapped in mystery, so let's drop the subject for the meantime anyway. If the sun shines over the week-end take your eyes off Moscow and rest them more peacefully on the Victoria waterfront.

Status of a Protectorate

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

WHAT has really happened is that the United States has, in effect, claimed a provisional protectorate over the former Japanese possession of Formosa and the Pescadores, pending their ultimate disposal.

This should have been done at the end of the war. It would have avoided the dilemma of "two Chinas," one embracing a territory of continental size and a population estimated at half a billion, and one governing an island with hardly more than one per cent of that population.

Chou En-lai knows perfectly well that protection of former Japanese territories taken in battle is not at all the same thing as armed intervention on Chinese territory.

The principle was plainly admitted by the Russians, who contributed nothing to winning the war against Japan, but demanded and received certain rights in former Japanese ports and made a great show of "giving back" Port Arthur to Communist China. The Russians certainly would not have relinquished it to a hostile China.

* * *

No American protectorate, established over former enemy territory after a victorious war, has ever been permanent. The Philippines which became a protectorate after the Spanish-American War are a sovereign independent state and Puerto Rico is free to become one by her own will.

The principle of temporary protectorate, the real international rule invoked here, has never been contested. It does not involve annexation, imperialism or colonialism.

What it does forbid is that the protector grant permission to anyone else to use the protected territory as a base for political ambitions and military actions against another power which the protector itself has no intention or possibility to subdue. The worst role for a great power is to become the puppet of a puppet.

If Formosa is to be defended by the United States, the United States cannot delegate responsibility to the Chinese Nationalists. It cannot entrust the fate of America, in the issue of peace or war, to anyone else whatsoever.

* * *

Chou En-lai also knows perfectly well that China is not the only country involved in Pacific defense in the Formosa area. Unarmed Japan and the Philippines are both involved. The United States by becoming the temporary heir to the Japanese power which it was the prime factor in destroying, also inherited the temporary responsibility for Japan's defense, and is associated in a defense pact with the Philippines.

The only thing that Chou En-lai stands to lose by recognizing and accepting such a temporary status is a propaganda weapon of great power among the unthinking masses of his own people. This weapon — irredentism — always has a wild sensational appeal useful to struggling and not fully stabilized governments, and distracting attention from lots of unpleasant brass tacks, but it is one that Chou En-lai should be ashamed to invoke.

Hitler used it with disastrous consequences, but Chou is not a "walking somnambulist" like Hitler but a rational mind. Lenin never used it. After the First World War he gave up the lost territories on Russia's peripheries, the fruits, like Formosa, of former imperial conquests. His successors won them back a generation later in a more favorable combination of circumstances.

A cease-fire—which Chou and the Communists have urged for in every other conflict but this one—is highly desirable and all the nations should line up to get it.

But in the long run the only way of relaxing international tensions and creating rational settlements uncolored by security fears is universal and total disarmament, the only solution combining realistic diagnosis with the highest idealism.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

WHILE I was sitting in my doctor's office, waiting for him to get through his work and come to a movie with me to see Disney's "The Vanishing Prairie," four patients passed into the inner sanctum. One was a young man with his arm in a sling, two were middle-aged ladies with tight lips and far-away expressions, and the last was an elderly man smoking a cigar and rapidly flopping through the tattered pages of the magazines.

When the doctor came out from the last of his patients he heaved a big sigh.

"Serious?" I enquired.

"No. The two ladies were merely middle-aged. Nothing else wrong with them. Just middle-aged. The boy had broken his arm skiing. Coming along fine. The man with the cigar — well, he's been dead scared of dying for the past 10 years. Every time he eats something even a goat shouldn't have, or whenever he has a fight with his wife or family, he comes in to be assured he isn't going to drop dead."

"And you reassure him?"

"I remind him he's going to be dead some day, but not necessarily right now. I warn him against eating moose meat or pickled herring. I tell him his wife and children are far more agreeable people than he is."

The doctor put his coat and hat on and we headed out the side door to avoid late-comers.

"The boy with the broken arm," he said, "is the happiest of those four. I wish I knew how to persuade people to have some physical interest in life. Some activity, some sport, that won't decline with their changing conditions as they grow older. Those two women were identical in their symptoms though perfect strangers. Modern housekeeping has become so simplified, so mechanized, that they sit around most of the day without anything to do, physically. The man is too old to start taking up any sport. You must have an interest, a recreation that involves the body. It must be a recreation you indulge in all the time."

"Such as?"

"Well," said the doctor, "walking, for instance."

So we walked 11 blocks to the movie.

Too Big for Their Boots

(From The Vancouver Province)

FAR too many city councils, police commissions and school boards are going into private huddles whenever they encounter controversial problems. Far too much of the taxpayers' business is being done behind closed doors. Elected representatives seem to be forgetting that they are spending public money, not their own money, and that the public has a right to know everything about the expenditure of that money.

Civic and municipal leaders make a great show of wringing their hands at election time when there is a poor turnout of voters. We don't suggest that abolishing private meetings would cure public apathy in municipal affairs. But we are certain that there would be less apathy if the most interesting and important discussions were held in the open.

It is far too easy for municipal leaders to get into the habit of "holing-up" when they have to handle a fast political grounder. It is much easier for them to wash dirty linen in private than to bare it to public gaze. A "hand-out" to the public leaves less risk of being misunderstood.

All this is nothing more or less than unauthorized censorship. No doubt these self-appointed censors imagine they are doing the right and proper thing. But what are their qualifications for this judicial task? That they know more about what is good for the public than the public does itself?

That was the fine, specious argument advanced by men like Hitler and Mussolini. It is the doctrine preached by men in the Kremlin today. It is the attitude taken by dictators, or would-be dictators, at every stage of history.

In the dictionary of such men the business of government is too intricate for the poor, stupid, ignorant public. Only the high priests of office can be entrusted with these secrets.

These jacks-in-office should be reminded, and reminded vigorously, that they are public servants and that servants don't tell their masters when they can or cannot sit in on the transaction of their own business.

Most dangerous of all is the public's tendency meekly to accept this situation. The longer it accepts it the greater will be the amount of public business carried on in private. It is high time for the public and the press to crack down on this petty censorship.

With the Classics

Beauty have pity, for the strong have power,
The rich their wealth, the beautiful their grace,
Summer of man its sunlight and its flower,
Spring time of man all April in a face.
Only, as in the jostling in the Strand,
Where the mob thrusts or loiters or is loud,
The beggar with the saucer in his hand
Asks only a penny from the passing crowd,
So from this glittering world with all its fashion,
Its fire and play of men, its stir, its march,
Let me have wisdom, Beauty, wisdom and passion,
Bread to the soul, rain where the summers parch.
Give me but these, and though the darkness close
Even the night will blossom as the rose.

They got tired of going around in circles on Lac La Biche and in 1951 Father McGrane and four cadets took their boat a Fairmane to England where for almost two months they sailed over the inland waterways and canals.

They even sailed across the English Channel to France.

PUBLICITY STUNT: New York Rangers, who aren't expecting anything better this season than the fifth place they now occupy, called on Bill Ezinicki only in the hope that he could be expected to do enough wise to keep fans coming for those last mean [illegible] Bill is hired to spark a resurgence which would bring them a playoff berth.

Ezinicki got a lot of publicity around the WHL after joining Vancouver Canucks and was generously credited with a Vancouver spurt which coincided more or less loosely, with his acquisition. But while he did stir things up here and there, Ezinicki wasn't a really big help to the Canucks and if the Rangers send a player in return the Vancouver club will profit by the exchange.

Ezinicki, it is true, had a nuisance value as he was a threat every time he was on the ice—an injury threat. But those who watch their hockey closely noticed that he seldom, if ever, bumped an opponent who was looking and that he had a pronounced aversion to carrying the puck so that he was seldom a target for a bodycheck. Ezinicki went a long way on limited talent but most of all he was skating proof of how much hockey has changed. He got by for a long time as a "tough guy" but he couldn't have lasted the season when the Shores, Johnsons and Hitchmans were hitting them.

* * *

A PAT ON THE BACK: Victoria Cougars haven't been getting the same fan support this season as in the past but Billy Reay and his club have been playing the most interesting spectator hockey of the six seasons the club has been in the league.

There haven't been many bad games at Memorial Arena this season as the Cougars compiled a 17-8-2 record for city fans. Only three times—twice by 5-2 and once by 4-1—have the Cougars lost by more than two goals. Three setbacks were by one goal and two by two goals.

On the other hand, the Cougars have allowed more than two goals only once in their 17 winning games, that one a 7-1 romp over Vancouver. There were four shutouts, six one-goal and six two-goal games as the Cougars outscored their opponents 89-22 in their 17 winning games. Late and 11-362 for the 27 games played to date at Memorial Arena.

And while the Cougars are only fourth in a six-team league they are within shooting distance of second place. A possible [illegible] they would certainly be heading today at the very worst, but [illegible] the loss of Wayne Brown a [illegible] games. When [illegible] close from here this hockey season has certainly been no loss for Victoria fans.

* * *

A HIGH RATING: Culled from the Vancouver hockey program for the game which followed a 5-2 loss to Saskatoon Quakers was this excuse: "Vancouver had to pass without Bill Ezinicki and Rick Dea Tuesday. We wonder how Victoria would rate without Ed Dorohov and Kilburn of New Westminster without Max McNab and Gordie Fashoway."

Not very good. Leo but before you can trade for those two combinations you mention, you'd have to toss in the six other Canuck forwards to even get a hearing. I presume however that the reason the Canucks haven't done better is that Ezinicki and Dea mean as much to them as Dorohov and Kilburn and McNab and Fashoway mean to the Cougars and Royals.

* * *

ROSS' ALL-STARS: Asked to select his all-time hockey team, Art Ross, former general manager of the Boston Bruins, leaned heavily to ex-Bruins and oldtimers.

He picked Frank "Mr. Zero" Brimsek for goal, Eddie Shore for one defense post, and couldn't make up his mind between Hod Stuart and Si Griffiths for the other.

At centre, he chose Milt Schmidt over Howie Morenz, Cyclone Taylor, Bill Cowley, Syl Apps. Bill Cook was his right winger and Tom Phillips his leftwinger. Honorable mention went to Taylor, Apps and Bobby Bauer but neither Maurice Richard or Gordie Howe got a tumble.

* * *

THE FINAL WHISTLE: Under the heading of "minor officials" Vancouver's hockey program lists referees Eddie Powers, Paul Bozak and George Cullen who resigned last week . . . loss of Doug Anderson who had been playing his finest hockey was a tough blow for the Cougars and a particularly bitter pill as Paul Bozak who watched the play all the way must have seen Gus Kyle hook the Victoria centre, then ride him into the boards hard. But Bozak no bargain as referees go, didn't think it was worth a penalty . . . this week's Hockey News has a fine story on Jean Beliveau soon to outrank Gordie Howe and Maurice Richard as hockey's outstanding performer . . . Bill Quackenbush, Boston defenseman is playing his 13th NHL season and has drawn only one major penalty, that for a short tussle with Gaye Stewart during the 1947-48 season . . . Winnipeg, which hopes to return to the senior hockey picture next season as a WHL club, is reportedly negotiating an agreement with Montreal Canadiens . . . Prairie clubs have won 20, lost 27 and tied 11 games with Coast clubs in WHL intersectional play this season.

Bob Rosburg, Holguin Share Tourney Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bob Rosburg of San Francisco, left a sick bed Thursday to shoot his best golf of the year and share the lead at the end of the first round of the $10,000 Tucson open golf tournament.

Rosburg came in late in the day with a 65 to tie Tony Holguin of Midlothian, Ill. Both were five under par for the 6,409-yard El Rio Golf and Country Club layout.

George Bayer and Bud Holscher shared third place with 66s. Both credited accurate putting for their sub-par rounds.

Rosburg, 28, had been in bed with the flu since he arrived earlier this week.

"I hadn't eaten for two days before I went out this morning," Rosburg said.

HEFTY DRIVE

Lack of food hadn't weakened him as he drove the 349-yard 15th hole and then two-putted for a birdie.

Holguin, former Mexican champion, had seven birdies on the first 14 holes and another in the 17th. But on the 415-yard 14th he took a two over par six.

Charles Sifford of Philadelphia, the only Negro in the tournament, was tied with four other players at 67. Included was Staff Mosel, the amateur from San Antonio, Tex.

Ed Furgol, the U.S. Open champion, played with a severe case of the flu and had his highest score of the year, 76.

Clash Between Canada and U.S. To Open World Hockey Tourney

BY HANS SCHAEFER

KREFELD, Germany (UP) — Interest among hockey fans in the opening of the sports palace here will be focused on the Russia and Canada game March 6 when the two teams battle for the 1955 world championships.

This country is staging the tournament for the first time since the Second World War and the National Ice Sports Association has spared neither money nor effort to guarantee smooth running of the show.

Defending champion Soviet Russia, Canada, the United States, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Finland, Switzerland, Poland and host Germany will compete for the championship.

IN FOUR STADIUMS

The championships which will take place in the four Rheinland stadiums of Cologne, Dusseldorf, Krefeld and Dortmund, will be run as a round-robin tournament.

The tournament will open with an important match when Canada and the United States clash at Dortmund.

Altogether, the nine teams shooting for the title will appear in a total of 36 games in the four stadiums.

All four arenas have artificial ice rinks so the competition will not depend on the weather. Both the Krefeld and Dortmund stadiums are indoor rinks. The Cologne and Dusseldorf rinks are outdoor.

Special facilities to accommodate parking officials will run to as many parking spaces as possible and have parking [illegible] a formal opening [illegible] stands were set up in the four stadiums.

When the new grandstand [illegible] have the following capacities: Krefeld 11,000, Dusseldorf 14,000, Dortmund 11,000 and Cologne 12,000.

The organizers need a record turnout for the competition as stage costs invested in arranging the championships include housing and feeding the participating teams, plus accommodating officials will run to some 7,000 marks (about $1,700).

TICKET SALES BRISK

But officials in the Krefeld organizing burgh were [illegible] "We have two sold out [illegible] orders for tickets that the expenses should be met. More [illegible] offers are still pouring in daily."

Canadian troops stationed in Germany have ordered 2,500 tickets for all games in which their compatriots play.

Bruins Down Hawks To Near Playoff Spot

HOW THEY STAND

[illegible]

Boston Bruins strengthened their hold on fourth place and barring a complete collapse, [illegible] but clinched a playoff berth in the National Hockey League by thumping Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 at Boston last night.

The result showed the Bruins 14 points ahead of the New York Rangers and put them only six points behind Toronto with two games in hand.

Counting on their first two shots of the game, the Bruins were never headed as they held a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period, made it 3-1 after two periods and held the last goal the Hawks to one goal in the final period.

QUICK GOALS

Rookie Don McKenney and Fleming Mackell connected 42 seconds apart in the first period. McKenney's goal, coming at 1:10, from Fleming's [illegible] shot deflected past rookie goalie Hank Bassen off the stick of Chicago defenseman Frank Martin, and Lorne Ferguson on the Bruins' goal on a lifted shot only 17 seconds after [illegible] Gordon Hewitt was chased off with a penalty.

Eddie Litzenberger got Chicago's first goal while Bruins were [illegible] a penalty when [illegible] drive between [illegible] Jim Henry's legs. Litzenberger assisted on Chicago's second goal which was scored by Harry Watson.

Bassen who made only eight stops in the first two periods, turned aside 14 shots in the final period as he suffered his third defeat in the nine NHL games he has played.

Cougars Down Royals, 4-1— Top Canucks by 10 Points, Only Two from Runners-Up

[illegible]

Victoria Cougars aren't waiting for help from other clubs to make setting of a Western Hockey League playoff spot.

Playing at New Westminster last night the Cougars extended their position stand to four points. Cougars won and a tie [illegible] Royals a 4-1 setback after first hosts had opened the scoring.

Victoria boosted the Victoria margin over the fifth place Vancouver Canucks to 10 points and moved the Island club within two points of second place.

Royals now share the runner-up spot with Calgary Stampeders who moved up by gaining a 2-2 tie with Saskatoon Quakers in last night's other game.

RESPOND TO THREAT

Cougars, who now have won five and tied one of their last [illegible] games to answer the threat posed by the Canucks a few weeks ago played last night's game as if they wanted to [illegible] a New Westminster club which again played [illegible].

It was the Cougars' fourth win in eight games on New Westminster ice and [illegible] Westminster [illegible] points from 2 games.

Goalie Eddie [illegible] saved the game for the visitors [illegible] his passout from behind the goal deflected in off Mickey Bentley's pads early in the last period. But the Cougars were allowed only four goals in their last four games didn't stop them.

Playing coach Billy Reay squared matters in the first minute of the period while the Cougars were staving off a Royal power play during one of Mickey Keating's three penalties. Goalie Fisher was the "goat" on the play with a bad passout from behind his own net.

Mark Marquess scored what proved to be the winner from [illegible] Doughty late in the second period.

Reay and Gerry Kobluck he put set up Alex Kaszas for the first of the two third period goals which made it safe for the Cougars. Doug Macauley got the other, his 19th on a [illegible] with Ed Dorohov and Keating.

At Calgary before a 5,500 fans [illegible] the Stampeders again took an early lead with the game's first two goals but they couldn't hold the Quakers who overcame a [illegible] against the Stamps.

Max Bentley got the game's goal late in the game while Calgary's Steve Wirchak was in the penalty box. It was the last goal of the season for the former NHL great who has played 36 games for the Royals to date.

Canucks clinched playoff berth bringing to a number [illegible] teams in tonight's only game when will be winning home coaches Hugh Barlow and veteran Bill Ezinicki.

PLAYER CHANGE

Barlow was recalled to Toronto several days ago when Ezinicki was dealt to New York Rangers yesterday. In ex-[illegible] Canucks picked up [illegible] Lockie McLeod, transferred from Saskatoon.

Doctor Errs in Diagnosis Of Son's Boxing Fortunes

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Dr. Wallace Graham, former president Truman's personal physician, attended the Golden Gloves boxing tournament to see his son, Wally Jr., fight.

Shortly before his son entered the ring for the title bout in the novice 126-pound class, Dr. Graham was called away to perform an emergency operation. When he returned, the fight was over and he asked a spectator excitedly:

"How did Wally do?"

"They carried him out," was the reply.

Dr. Graham rushed to his son—and learned that friends carried him out of the ring on their shoulders after he won the title by a knockout.

JBAA, Wanderers Open Playoff for Victoria Title

James Bay and Oak Bay Wanderers, who have both completed their schedule in Miller Cup inter-city rugby competition will open a two-game total point series for the city senior rugby championship Saturday at upper Macdonald Park at 2:15.

The Oarsmen who dropped a lose decision to the Wanderers in their only Miller Cup meeting, will be attempting to retain possession of the Barnard Cup emblematic of the city championship. James Bay also won the Rose Trophy, which goes to the league champion, and the Cowichan Cup, symbolic of the Island championship, last season.

However JBAA and the Wanderers were the only senior teams in the city this season and the Rose Trophy won't be contested. Play in the Cowichan Cup competition will open shortly and league officials are hoping that several second division teams will enter the city [illegible] series.

Winner of the city championship will clash with the Mainland winner for the Rounsfell Cup, emblematic of the British Columbia senior title.

While the James Bay-Oak Bay match will hold the spotlight, there will be plenty of action for local rugby fans Saturday with an exhibition game, two second division and two midget division matches scheduled.

Shawnigan Lake's second division squad will host St. George's School of Vancouver on the lower pitch at Macdonald Park in an exhibition game at 3:30.

In second division action, HMCS Venture will meet powerful Victoria College at the college grounds at 2:30, and JBAA and Oak Bay Wanderers meet at Windsor Park at 2:30.

University School meets Glenlyon Boys School at Windsor at 1:30 and Oak Bay tangles with Shawnigan Lake at the up Island school at 2:30 in midget division action.

Michigan Ace To Join Lions

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions announced Wednesday night they have signed Leroy Bolden, backfield ace at Michigan State, to a 1955 contract.

Optimistic Coast League Decides On Huge Park-Building Program

BY HAL WOOD

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Pacific Coast League directors Thursday voted to start a multi-million dollar park-building program aimed at giving the loop the best facilities in the country.

In their annual winter meeting, the first conducted under new president Claire V. Goodwin, the directors Thursday:

1. Voted $100,000 to San Diego Padres to help finance a $1,000,000 ball park that may be built in San Diego's Balboa Park. It would seat 20,000, having a parking space for 3,000 cars, could be enlarged to seat 30,000 or more.

2. Named Oscar Vitt, former Cleveland manager, as "trouble shooter" for the president's office. Vitt will tour the spring training camps and visit ball parks in the loop.

3. Named a committee of C. L. (Brick) Laws, Oakland; Joe Ziegler, Portland, and Fred David, Sacramento, to consider plans to hire league scouts to look for baseball talent.

Goodwin said the league was going ahead with plans to become a powerful, sound organization, ignoring major league invasion threats.

"We are greatly heartened by Commissioner Ford Frick's announcement that the big leagues should stop their talk about moving into our cities," said Goodwin. "We are proceeding on the idea that we are going to have the best ball available on the Pacific Coast."

The multi-million dollar scheme for building parks also may include Oakland, Portland and Hollywood, where the current stands are out-of-date. However, none of the owners of these clubs gave any indication they are ready yet to discuss building plans.

"We have several hundred more thousands of dollars in the treasury to help build other new parks," said Goodwin.

Court Throws Out Umphrey's Appeal

Appeal against conviction and sentence of Vernon Umphrey of Saanich on a break-in charge was thrown out by B.C. Court of Appeal yesterday.

Defense counsel J. J. Proudfoot argued that the only evidence against client was circumstantial.

Umphrey was originally sentenced to two years imprisonment in police court. Later he appeared before Judge L. B. Clearihue in County Court on a similiar charge.

He was sentenced to a year but after disclosure of the lower court's action, the trial judge recalled Umphrey and added another year to his sentence.

NOT SUFFICIENT

Mr. Proudfoot argued the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a conviction.

Umphrey's car had been seen parked on Tennyson Avenue early November 18 last. That night the premises of Brackman-Ker were entered. The milling company's premises on Douglas Street are close to Tennyson Avenue.

No one had seen Umphrey and there was nothing in his possession that had been stolen from the premises, said counsel.

Police had gone to Umphrey's home and found shoes and trousers caked with mud. But no evidence had been given that his client had been wearing the trousers and shoes the night of the break-in, continued Mr. Proudfoot.

Footprints that led to the building stopped 200 feet from the place where the convicted man's car had been seen parked.

"That is not enough evidence to convict," contended Mr. Proudfoot.

F. P. O'Grady, appearing for the Crown, argued that the evidence presented in the lower courts fully warranted a conviction.

'Nothing Serious' Says Soldier After 1,000-Foot Plunge

QUEBEC (CP) — A young paratrooper, who fell 1,000 feet when his parachute "streamered," told his mother with a sleepy smile Thursday: "It was nothing serious."

L.-Cpl. Gerard Gagnon, 23-year-old veteran of the Korean War, where he was wounded, assured his parents he suffered no paralysis—"or anything serious like that"—in Wednesday's drop.

Gagnon, who has 18 brothers and sisters, threw back the hospital covers to prove to his parents he could flex one of his legs.

Army authorities, meanwhile, said the tough soldier suffered only a broken leg and a broken spinal disc in the fall. They said he has no internal injuries and no complications have appeared.

Gagnon, under sedatives, spoke sleepily at first when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gagnon, came to see him from their home in Chicoutimi, Que.

"Gerard smiled and said: 'Hello, I didn't expect to see you, it's nothing serious'," said Mrs. Gagnon afterward.

Gagnon was one of the last group of some 300 Royal 22nd Regiment paratroopers who jumped into fields near St. Lambert de Levis, Que., Wednesday during the first phase of Exercise Breakey, an Arctic warfare-training operation.

Gagnon told friends he knew his parachute had "streamered" but kept expecting it to billow out. By the time he realized it wasn't going to, it was too late to open his reserve chute.

CHICAGO (AP)—Grains declined on the board of trade Thursday on mild liquidation and a lack of demand.

For much of the day March and May wheat displayed a firm tone, largely because some grain men felt these contracts had been oversold in the previous session. Toward the close, however, they retreated and gave up their gains.

The company's report includes for the first time the Ferguson Companies and net sales for the fiscal year are shown at $2[illegible]732,000 (including defense contract sales of $42,000,000). Net income was $7,194,000, or 76c per common share and dividends paid on the common for the year totaled 60 cents per share. A recent news item states that Massey has now acquired all the outstanding shares of H. V. McKay in which it had previously had a substantial interest. Price paid for the shares was not disclosed. The Australian company has 608 sales agencies throughout the Commonwealth and produces a wide range of farm implements and equipment. This brings to 15 the number of Massey's manufacturing plants—five in Canada, four in the U.S., two in the U.K., one in France, two in Germany and one in Australia. B.C. Forest Industry Emphasizing Pulp

VANCOUVER, CP—British Columbia's forest industry, a hulking giant that accounts for one-third of the province's dollar production annually, is undergoing a $170,000,000 face lifting.

Accelerating a trend under way more than 10 years, a huge expansion program already well past the planning stage is swinging to pulp and paper products the dominant role in the industry once held by its parent product, lumber.

The climb to the top for pulp production is taking place during one of the industry's greatest expansion periods.

MORE THAN DOUBLE

In the last 10 years, lumber production has grown from 2,055,022 board feet in 1945 to 3,850,000 feet in 1954. For pulp products the climb has been even more impressive. In 1945 production figures showed 520,[illegible] tons. Estimated output during 1954 was 1,110,000 tons.

The bureau of statistics in Victoria reports that during 1954 production from the forest industry totaled $523,000,000. Of this pulp and paper dollar value was $160,000,000, the remainder lumber production.

Within two years the statisticians predict the pulp wood total will be $220,000,000 and within four years will surpass lumber production.

A recent survey in the United States by the American forest industry indicated that the market for lumber will increase a meagre 7 per cent during the next 20 years. In the same period consumer demand for wood pulp is expected to climb 115 per cent.

NANAIMO—Possible formation of a metropolitan planning commission, to include Nanaimo, Harewood, Departure Bay and Northfield, was considered at a meeting of the town planning commission this week.

Discussions were held with trustees of Harewood Improvement District in an attempt to secure closer liaison between districts.

Tasty Beauty Reigns Behind Victoria's Coffee Urns

Victoria restaurant owners claim they employ the most beautiful waitresses in Canada. Here is one—Marion Troutman, at the Fountain Confectionery . . .

Attraction of waitresses such as Lillian Murdock at the Majorette Coffee Shop brings in as many customers as do banana cream pie and other delicacies . . .

Customers served by Donna Nicholson at the Princess Mary Restaurant Vessel don't need to be threatened by ferocious turtles and gila monsters to agree with the claim . . .

And the cup of coffee which is the basis of the restaurant business, as served by Connie Pittendrigh, Panama Cafe, needs little sweetening.

Report Scratched; Secrecy Becomes Issue Once More

Secrecy became an issue again yesterday in city council when Ald. Donald Smith asked why a report from the city solicitor on the Gordon Head airpark property had been scratched from the agenda.

He was told by the mayor that there is a rumor—perhaps more than a rumor—that Her Majesty might require this property, and that therefore there was [illegible] at this time.

At the last meeting of council Ald. Smith said city attempts to gain clear title to the airpark property were legal.

"If it is the idea of the city council that they can pay for their monies to change the title to permit sale of the property for say, a housing project, such expenditure would be beyond its authority," he said.

The mayor then asked City Solicitor A. J. Patton for a ruling.

Ald. Smith protested against deletion of the city solicitor's report from the agenda, said he could see no reason to keep it secret.

"It's not secret," the mayor told him.

NO SECONDER

When the mayor added that it was up to council whether the report should be heard, Ald. Smith moved that it should. But there was no seconder.

"May I have a look at the report myself?" asked Ald. Smith.

"Any member of the council can see it," said the mayor, and Ald. Brent Murdoch chimed in: "There's nothing secret about it."

Later Mr. Patton said the city's agreement with the federal government on the airpark property says the government [illegible] and the city has heard [illegible] for what purpose [illegible].

Council Sets Public Hearing On James Bay Zoning Issue

A public hearing was set by city council yesterday for 2 p.m., February 24, on the controversial James Bay rezoning by-law, after aldermen heard town planning commission representations from H. R. Steven and Major H. C. Holmes.

The by-law is designed to [illegible] convenience and general [illegible]

A [illegible] brief presented by Mr. Steven stated that some residents in the area affected had criticized the plan.

The basis of this criticism is mainly that in a relatively small portion of the total area affected, it is claimed property values have been devalued to facilitate future appropriation by the provincial government," Mr. Steven said.

ONLY 30 OWNERS

Of 107 persons who signed the petition of protest brought before council at its last meeting, he said, only 30 were property owners within the area rezoned from apartment to duplex by the new zoning. Forty-four were owners of lots which were not affected and 24 were owners whose zoning had been changed from single family to duplex. Eight were not registered property owners and one [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Steven said. At the same time [illegible] commission must point out that under the terms of its appointment it is instructed specifically to prepare plans for the future physical development and improvement of the city in a systematic and orderly man[illegible]

The commission, he said, has been given very definite assurance that the provincial government has actively in hand the task of preparing the future development of the government area.

MORE LOTS

In the area bounded by Dallas, Belleville, Douglas and Oswego, he said effect of the new zoning by-law would be to increase by 2½ times the number of lots zoned for apartment building.

Major Holmes reminded council of pressure to remove civil servants to the Mainland and suggested that if expansion of government buildings was not facilitated, the natural inclination would be to move government departments to Vancouver or New Westminster.

PLAN QUESTIONED

Ald. Robert Moore [illegible] pressed Major Holmes for an answer on whether the government had presented a definite plan for the development of the area south of the legislative buildings.

"I think it is impossible to prepare a plan today that is fitted to the needs of the future," said Major Holmes. The province, he added, had been growing at an unforeseen rate. A minister and his technical officers, he said, had come to the conclusion that the area would be needed.

Independent Grocers Gird for Price War

Independent grocery retailers made plans last night to meet the price competition of grocery chain stores.

A [illegible] scheme [illegible] big chain stores was [illegible] by William Palmer, president of the Independent Merchants' Co-operative Association, at a meeting last night.

A price war has started in Vancouver and is spreading to Victoria, Mr. Palmer warned.

Each independent retailer can have his own coffee mill [illegible] supplied free by wholesalers, he said. "By grinding your own coffee you can sell it cheaper."

"I am selling coffee at 99 cents a pound. Some of you are selling it cheaper," Mr. Palmer said. "If you want cheap coffee beans, let me know. I can get them for you."

He suggested [illegible] particular commodities [illegible] newspaper [illegible] and spread the benefits among members.

First [illegible] was started last night when merchants placed orders for wholesale salmon.

At the next meeting in March a plan will be outlined for purchase of [illegible] meats, lard and other commodities at prices to compete with the chain stores.

"We haven't the overhead of the chain stores," Mr. Palmer said. "We must educate the public that we can sell as low as the chains."

Drydock To Travel In Sections

A $[illegible] floating drydock being constructed at Victoria Machinery Depot will be shipped in more than 20 sections to Kootenay Lake next month, manager H. [illegible] Hammond said yesterday.

The drydock will be assembled at Nelson and will be in operation late in April, Mr. Hammond said.

VMD also [illegible] construction of 21 pressure vessels for the Imperial Oil refinery near Vancouver will begin during the next two weeks.

The $[illegible] project will keep 30 highly skilled mechanics busy for two months, company officials said.

Outside Workers' Pay

Complete Distortion Feared from Scheme

A plan of fixed yearly increases in hourly pay, as proposed recently by City Hall outside workers, "would create a tremendous amount of overlapping and would completely distort the present wage structure," City Manager Cecil Wyatt has told the employees.

The city rejected the outside workers' pay demands for this year.

But Mr. Wyatt suggested a committee might be formed at a future date, on which he would be glad to act, to explore an increment plan suitable for adoption.

The city manager said in a memorandum that hourly rates of different pay grades are so close that under the plan proposed by the union an employee in Pay Grade 1 in his fifth year for instance would receive the same rate as a first-year employee in Grade 5.

ADDED AGGRAVATION

"This circumstance could be further aggravated by the fact that it would be quite possible for one or more members of a gang to receive an hourly rate of pay higher than the employee in charge of the gang and semi-skilled workers more than tradesmen," he said.

A properly balanced increment plan, Mr. Wyatt said, would require an hourly rate differential between each grade and a two, three or four-cent differential would greatly increase costs to the city.

"If the three-cent differential was introduced it is interesting to note," Mr. Wyatt said, "that an employee in Pay Grade 13 would receive in yearly take home pay an income much in excess of the parks administrator."

Mr. Wyatt said cost was increased only slightly when the inside staff of City Hall gained an increment plan in 1944 because the minimum wage in [illegible] cases was reduced from what was being paid at the time, stayed the same in 14 cases and increased in 21 cases.

Random Survey Shows:

Victorians Blame Reds for Crisis

If the blame for the Far Eastern crisis could be fixed on one country, Victorians would put the finger on Communist China.

But some believe Communist China and the United States are equally to blame.

A random survey last night by the Colonist showed a three-to-one majority blames Communist China for the crisis.

One-fifth of the persons called blamed both countries for the trouble, while one-third offered no opinion.

Local [illegible] reversed those expressed in North Vancouver, where radio station CKLG said its opinion poll pointed the finger at the U.S. two-to-one.

In Victoria, a woman blamed the U.S. for not recognizing Red China but at the same time she said she had no use for Chiang Kai-shek.

One man blamed both countries, stating that "everyone is leaving God out too much."

A former Formosa resident blamed Communist China. She declared that Formosa is independent and the U.S. is trying to keep it independent. She said the United Nations had no right in 1945 to promise Formosa to China.

Another man blamed the U.S., stating that historically China is entitled to Formosa.

Persons who blamed both countries expressed either anti-American or anti-Communist themes without giving specific reasons.

Frozen Crabmeat

It's a lot cheaper to buy crab meat frozen instead of canned, I've discovered. The six ounce packages of frozen crab meat which I saw yesterday cost only 49 cents. If you prefer clam meat buy it similarly packaged for the same price.

Frozen chicken, cut up and ready to stew or fry, is a real time and space saver. A three-pound 6-ounce packet of stewing fowl sells for $2.40, while two pounds of the frying chicken will cost you $1.95.

Avacadoes are the lowest they've been all winter. Now priced at two for 25 cents they're a good buy for salads.

Danish ... its appearance too. It's still quite expensive, 27 cents a pound, but it will add variety to a week end meal.

Modern Etiquette

BY ROBERTA LEE

Q. Is the double-ring marriage considered proper these days?

A. Whether the man wears a wedding ring or not is entirely a matter of personal taste, and not of etiquette. He may or may not wear a ring, and in either case he will be perfectly proper.

Q. I have sometimes noticed a man holding a cigar or pipe in his mouth while talking with a woman. Isn't this considered very rude?

A. In conversation with a woman, a man of good breeding will always remove his cigar, cigarette or pipe from his mouth.

Beauty and You

By MARION MATTHEWS

Dandruff is a natural process ... the scales from your scalp ... flakes. It doesn't get to be a problem at times, however, and ... soap is oily or dry.

The embarrassment of dandruff may be eliminated with concerted work which includes daily brushing and massage. Preceding your shampoo apply hot olive oil to the scalp with sterile cotton. Wrap your head for an hour or two in a turkish towel ... overnight is excellent if you have time the next morning to shampoo and set your hair.

Then brush your hair to help remove the flakes of dandruff which have been loosened. Next wet hair using moderately hot water. Then shampoo using a liquid or cream shampoo, never apply a cake of soap to hair. Rinse thoroughly and repeat ... a second time. Rinse and soap a third time if you feel some traces of oil are still present. Use a hand spray so that all soap and oil are removed. You don't want flakes of soap to replace the dandruff you've removed!

For really bad or persistent dandruff a little sulphur ... may be rubbed into the hair after washing. Follow directions for ...

Brush your hair dry if you want to promote the shine and beauty of your tresses as well as to further combat dandruff. Massage the scalp with rotary motions of fingertips each day. Then brush.

Always use clean combs and brushes. You can soap them for a few minutes in a basin of water to which a few drops of ammonia has been added. Rinse and dry.

Check your hats. If the bands show traces of oil and soil clean them. This is as important as using clean implements on your hair!

REFURBISH HAT

There's plenty of color ... for spring ... flowers will be ... reason they can't burgeon on yours.

Civil Servant Treatment Called 'Mean, Small'

A Mainland CCFer hit hard at the provincial government's treatment of civil servants yesterday, calling it "meaner and smaller than the most reactionary employers in the province today."

Frank Howard (CCF Skeena) was speaking of the denial of arbitration rights which forces the B.C. Government Employees' Association to adopt a cap-in-hand attitude in its approach to the government.

Mr. Howard charged that six of the present cabinet ministers "broke faith with the people because they promised arbitration rights for government employees before their elections. He also said the Social Credit government had promised to look into the question when it first took office.

Premier Bennett's reaction to [illegible] Mr. Howard [illegible] debate. [illegible]

[illegible] ier had behaved exactly according to pattern during the speech.

* * *

Mr. Howard charged yesterday that the Social Credit party had replaced the Liberals as the front for big business in B.C.

"The Liberals are mad because you've replaced them as [illegible] business," he said. "You've got your arm in the pork barrel right up to your armpits."

* * *

The Liberals came out with [illegible] against a government [illegible] rights.

A CCF spokesman, however, gave notice that the official opposition intends to support the bill, which gives the PGE authority to enter on lands required for construction by paying into the Supreme Court a sum equal to double the amount offered by the railway.

If necessary, expropriation proceedings can be taken [illegible]

[illegible] rights of the people of this province.

[illegible]

He urged that $800,000 increase in liquor profits and the $2,200,000 in the hospital reserve fund should be used to build hospitals for the care of chronic patients.

[illegible]

[illegible] mage for power.

He called the Liberals "The Stop British Columbia Party" because, he said, during his 50 years in B.C. the Liberals "represent those who have, by design, stopped development of resources."

HERE'S ANSWER TO COUGHS OF COLDS PROBLEM!

Here is a new pleasant cough medicine — Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup. It's different! A combination of a new penetrating ingredient with a medicating formula. The penetrating ingredient carries the medicine to irritated crevices of the throat where the medicating ingredient can go right to work.

That's why it's named Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup. It medicates as it penetrates.

Toy Pistol, Boots Evidence

A black plastic imitation pistol and a muddy pair of shoes were the chief exhibits at the preliminary hearing of an attempted holdup charge facing an 18-year-old youth in Saanich court yesterday.

The hearing of evidence against John Nilberg, charged with the unsuccessful armed holdup attempt at Victoria Auto Court, Gorge Road West, was adjourned until next Thursday for [illegible].

Mrs. Georgina Pawels, manageress of the auto court, testified how she was sitting in her living room January 28 when she heard the office door open.

It was 10:10 p.m. and she thought it was a customer.

"At the door stood a masked man holding a gun at me," said Mrs. Pawels. "I took one look, screamed, and shouted 'Hold up'."

The man ran out of the office. Mrs. Pawels said the thug had a white cloth bag over his face and was wearing a black hat and a rough grey coat.

The police said Mrs. Pawels, arrived "surprisingly" fast.

Const. Frank Briers described how he patrolled the area immediately the holdup alarm was received. He checked several cars in the Gorge Road area and as he neared the Gorge Bridge noticed a man walking in a southerly direction. It was the accused.

[illegible] going and he said he was going home. He gave an address on Blanshard Street. He told me he had come from town about 6 p.m. to go to the outdoor theatre."

Nilberg first told the constable he had seen the show, then said it hadn't been on that night, the court was told.

As Nilberg was getting out of the police car back at the auto court, police said they noticed a black pistol sticking out of his belt.

"'What have we got here?' I asked the accused," said Const. Briers. "He replied: 'Oh that. I always carry that.'"

Later, as Nilberg was being taken to his home on Blanshard Street, Detective Joseph Armstrong asked him if he could have committed the holdup and then forgotten about it.

"Yes . . . but I don't think I did," Nilberg was alleged to have replied.

Detective Armstrong testified that if the plastic revolver was fitted with a steel barrel it could fire "very straight [illegible]."

After further evidence prosecutor Lloyd McKenzie asked for an adjournment until next Thursday.

Wiesman Rates Planning As Everybody's Business

Regional planning is necessary to make cities "livable" for everyone, to guide councils in their decisions on the use of land and to ensure a maximum return from every tax dollar spent. This is the opinion of Brahm Wiesman, Capital Region planning director who spoke to the Rotary Club yesterday.

The process of industrialization [illegible] population to cities, Mr. Wiesman said, but because of lack of planning each increase in population has brought deterioration to the way of life in the cities.

Lack of planning has resulted in increased costs of doing business, loss of time and waste of human energy, he continued. The unplanned expansion of subdivisions "helter-skelter" over the countryside has made serious inroads into good arable land.

Planning, he said, is everybody's business. Parks should be adequate [illegible] possible without [illegible] high-ways, shopping [illegible] properly located, residential areas free of dirt and noise, highways free of congestion and parking space available downtown.

Proper planning is not static, he said. Plans must be under constant review.

Big Four Talks At Future Date Backed in U.K.

(Compiled from AP and CP Dispatches)

Prime Minister Churchill yesterday said he still favors Big Four talks with the Russians, while U.S. officials expressed cautious interest in a Soviet peace-promoting plan.

On the Russian proposal that parliamentary groups of the various nations exchange visits the U.S. state department offically had no comment. This was largely because it had only line to go on, beyond London newspapers reporting that the Supreme Soviet parliament had adopted a declaration calling for the exchange of legislators.

Responding to labor demands that he invite the new Soviet premier Marshal Nikolai Bulganin to join a Big Four talks soon Churchill declared:

"The policy of the government is to seek a four-power conference at a time when it seems likely to yield genuine results, but that occasion is not likely to occur until after the ratification of the London-Paris agreements."

The Churchill government hopes the accords (before and from the West Germans will be through the parliamentary mills of all nine nations involved within a couple of months.

The Kremlin shake-up is compared by a reported declaration from Foreign Minister Molotov that ratification of the Paris accords would dash hopes for fruitful East-West talks. The tough Molotov speech led some Labor MPs to proclaim Churchill lost his chance for Big Four talks with the ouster of Georgi Malenkov.

Churchill gave no indication that the reshuffle in the Soviet hierarchy has undermined his hopes that a Big Four meeting can be arranged.

A spokesman said the U.S. state department has heard nothing yet from the U.S. embassy in Moscow and would like to see an invitation from the Soviets before taking a stand.

The Soviet declaration, addressed to the "peoples and parliaments of all countries of the world," drew restrained comment from several sources. Several suggested the proposal might do some good—if it was a genuine gesture of goodwill.

City Approves Drafting Lease For Racetrack

City council yesterday authorized City Solicitor A. J. Patton to draw up a lease of property between Elk and Beaver Lakes for the Island Turf Company Limited.

Planned for the site is a $3,000,000 horse racing establishment to include a five-eighths of a mile track and enclosed grandstand to seat 5,000 persons.

Representatives of the firm it was learned will meet the city solicitor today to negotiate terms of the lease.

Last summer William Lockhead and Stanley Hewlett of the West Coast Racing Association, chief promoters of the track, were granted a six-month lease "for exploratory purposes" with the right to renewal for a further period of not more than 30 years, subject to terms agreed on at the end of the six-month period.

G. Max Bell, prominent western newspaper publisher and horseman, and Ralph Farris, Vancouver investment house head, have been named among the backers of the Island Turf Club Ltd. formed to operate the race track.

EXHIBITION PLANS

Ten acres of the property has been set aside in company plans for an exhibition ground and the B.C. Agricultural Society has hopes to hold Class A fairs on the site.

Island Turf Club has been incorporated as a company under the Companies Act, the Colonist learned yesterday.

Mr. Lockhead was named president and Mr. Hewlett secretary.

Caribbean Swim Relaxes Princess

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP)—Princess Margaret Thursday donned a one-piece silver-grey bathing suit and relaxed in the blue-green Caribbean.

The princess was taking a free afternoon and evening as a break from the exacting duties of her royal tour of the British West Indies. She paddled in the cool water at a beach near Holetown.

Cheering crowds stood along the roadside as the princess motored to Holetown and into a local estate where police guards stopped all but special guests.

Police also stood guard several hundred yards up the beach and a police boat circled off shore to give the princess a quiet afternoon.

Almost immediately she doffed her bathing suit, white cap and white sandals and strolled to the beach which is almost in the courtyard of the estate.

Ottawa Claims B.C. Selling Out Water Power

Winch Says Project Difficult To Stop

JEAN LESAGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Resources Minister Lesage Thursday accused the British Columbia government of "selling out" its water resources for "peanuts—and peanuts that are not even guaranteed."

Harold Winch (CCF, Vancouver East) joining the debate that followed the minister's remarks, doubted that the federal government could stop work on the dam once it starts even if B.C. Lands Minister Sommers were put in jail. He said B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett plans to go ahead with the Kaiser project regardless of federal action.

He referred variously to the B.C. agreement with the Kaiser Corp. of the United States for construction of a water storage dam on the Arrow Lakes in B.C. as a "fire sale," "sell-out" and a "steal."

He read a section from the B.C. Kaiser agreement which would guarantee the 20 per cent of additional power generated at Revelstoke Canyon to be made available to the Arrow Lakes dam in later years.

Mr. Lesage said the U.S. federal power commission owns and operates Bonneville and decides how its power will be allotted. But the power commission was not a signatory to the agreement.

Mr. Lesage spoke during the second reading of a bill which would set up the federal government's [illegible] with [illegible] of international river waters, Mr. Lesage said.

The bill also would enable the federal government to block the B.C. Kaiser contract. Mr. Lesage said the contract is not good business for B.C. or Canada.

[illegible] members who opposed the bill did not speak in favor of the B.C. Kaiser agreement were taking a short-sighted view.

'Islands Not Worth It'

U.S. Risking War, Says Ex-Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—A former Liberal cabinet minister said Thursday the Formosan policy of the United States may result in a third world war.

Senator William Euler, D., Ontario, said during the senate Throne Speech debate that [illegible] forward in any [illegible] of Formosa is necessary for [illegible] defence.

"I fear [illegible] of [illegible] policy of the United States [illegible] there is a risk of getting into another war," he said.

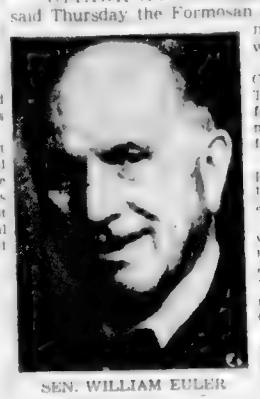
If we support the policy proposed by the United States we are literally playing with fire, he said.



SEN. WILLIAM EULER

No Surpluses

Twenty years ago other provinces said they had water power surpluses to export to the U.S. But now there were no surpluses. Canada could not afford to part easily with its power resources.

The Kaiser dam would store in the Arrow Lakes [illegible] acre-feet of water enough to cover that many acres of land to a depth of one foot. From the lakes which are a widening of the Columbia river, water would be led down to Rossland to be used as needed to generate power there.

John Blackmore (SC Lethbridge) said the B.C. Ottawa dispute over the Kaiser agreement presented a "dangerous situation." The federal government could override the province but in so doing it would destroy the Dominion.

To hear some progress people, one would think the B.C. government had bartered away half the province.

He criticized the Kaiser agreement as "[illegible]" and that it was worked out very carefully by Kaiser [illegible] had been [illegible] to protect the interests of British Columbians.

B.C. will get $1,000,000 clear profit annually from Kaiser to help reduce the provincial debt.

Mr. Blackmore said the federal government should withdraw the bill and apologize to B.C.

Harold E. Winch (CCF, Vancouver East) treated the constitutional problem involved in the bill.

He said he was told by Premier Bennett of B.C. that the province intended to go ahead with the Kaiser project no matter what the federal government did and that the province would be legally correct in doing so.

Tiny Vial of Powder May Be Worth Million

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A tiny vial of radioactive powder, snug in the radium-vault of Port Arthur hospital, was the subject of widespread speculation Thursday.

Angus MacDonald, a Second World War veteran, turned the powder over to police after he tested it and reported he found radioactive reaction on his instruments.

A police constable said he put a geiger counter near the material and it went "crazy."

It was believed the material which MacDonald said glowed green in the dark was radium. If so, officials estimated its value at about $1,000,000. The bottle vial is about three-quarters full. The world's supply of radium is between four and five pounds.

If the material is uranium it would be worth "several hundred dollars a pound," officials said.

MacDonald said the powder has been in his possession 11 years. He said it was obtained in 1944 from the laboratory of some German scientists in Holland. A member of the Dutch underground gave it to him.

'Evidence Seems Definite'

Tobacco Blamed In Heart Damage

CHICAGO (AP)—The [illegible] of the American Medical Association says there seems now to be definite evidence that smoking even though it may not directly affect the heart, nicotine can have a damaging effect on the myocardium (muscular part of the wall of the heart.)

Four doctors said in the Journal that cigarette smoking produces definite and immediate ill effect on the action of the heart in both normal persons and those with heart disease.

The doctors recommended that heart disease sufferers quit smoking entirely.

The doctors said significant increases in heart rate and blood pressure followed the smoking of regular cigarettes in 65 persons tested. The test group included both normal persons and those with heart disease.

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters)—Fierce flames from demolition fires flickered high above the East China Sea early today consuming the Chinese Nationalists' last defenses in the now almost deserted Tachen Islands.

Ship Deal Turned Down

OTTAWA (CP)—The trade department has rejected an application by the East-West Trading Company of Vancouver for a permit to build and export cargo ships to Russia.

A spokesman said Thursday the application was rejected on the grounds specifications indicated the vessels would be of strategic value to the Soviet in the event of war.

Hard To Stop

Suppose, Mr. Winch said that the point where a private company could make a decision concerning national resources was "nothing short of [illegible]."

Ron Lebeau (CCF, Cariboo) said he can see no reason for the federal government to block a deal profitable to the people of B.C. The West Kootenay region of B.C. had more power potential than it could put to work.

Mr. Lebeau said it appears the federal administration wants to prevent the B.C. government competing with the West Kootenay Light and Power Co., owned by Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

At the night sitting, A. B. Patterson (SC, Fraser Valley) said B.C. can look after its own affairs better than an aggregation of politicians 3,000 miles away.

He accused Mr. Lesage of taking a dog in the manger attitude which held that Canada didn't need the power now and wouldn't let anybody else use it.

Suppose Ottawa did obtain an injunction against B.C. to stop construction of the dam. How would it be served? If Lands Minister Sommers of B.C. were put in jail the next would not stop the crews working on the dam.

The matter might eventually have to go to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Winch said he supports the bill 100 per cent in principle.

Mr. Lesage said action which affects the flow of an international river in another country cannot be confined solely to provincial jurisdiction. It was a matter of national and international concern.

"There can be no doubt about the constitutional validity of the bill," he said.

James A. Byrne (L, Kootenay East) said the B.C. Kaiser agreement jeopardizes Canadian use of the entire Columbia River basin.

To stretch provincial rights to the point where a province could make a deal affecting the Columbia River would be to deny the province of British Columbia the right to make a deal affecting the Fraser River, he said.

Two Royal Representatives Described as Lawbreakers

B.C.'s lieutenant-governor and the former governor-general of Canada both broke the law by offering Frank Calder (CCF, Atlin) drink, a CCF member told the House yesterday.

Frank Howard (CCF, Skeena) cited the two Liberals as examples of the inconsistencies in laws which prevent native Indians from consuming liquor anywhere but in public licensed premises.

He said Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace broke the law at the recent state dinner for MLAs by having Mr. Calder, Canada's only native Indian MLA in Government House where liquor was served and by offering it to him. He said Mr. Calder also broke the law by accepting it.

Mr. Howard also recalled a visit of Viscount Alexander of Tunis to Prince Rupert where Mr. Calder drank with the former governor-general at a civic function.

BOTH IN WRONG

He said if he invited Mr. Calder to his room and there was a bottle present "both of us could be pinched." Legally he said native Indians cannot take a drink in the home of a friend.

He urged the government to press for a change in the Indian Act which would allow Indians to buy liquor in a government liquor store and take it home like anyone else.

Speed Limit To Rise

B.C. Cars Can 'Go Like 60' Soon

The 50 mile an hour speed limit in British Columbia will be boosted to 60 miles an hour in certain unrestricted areas of good highway.

Public Works Minister P. A. Gagiardi said yesterday his department has been working with the RCMP for several weeks gathering data on suitable areas for the increase.

The change will be made this year by order in council, but if a change in legislation is needed it will be brought in this session.

B.C. motorists will probably be able to take advantage of the increased limit this summer. It is expected that certain sections of the Island Highway on Vancouver Island will be included in the speed-up.

Mr. Gagiardi who will take over the newly formed highways department when the legislature approves amendments to the Constitution Act, announced the speed boost while revealing an estimated $35,000,000 Lower Mainland highway program.

The program, to be extended over 10 or 12 years, will include a new highway through the Fraser Valley to Hope and another on the other side of the Fraser River to Hague.

Resources Given for Peanuts, Lesage Says in Sharp Debate

OTTAWA (CP) Resources Minister Lesage Thursday accused the British Columbia government of "selling out" its water resources for "peanuts—and peanuts that are not even guaranteed."

Another Liberal in the Commons called out "a robbery."

Power needs of the U.S. should not be the criterion "when we decide what to do with our natural resources," Mr. Lesage said.

He read a section from the B.C. Kaiser agreement which would guarantee B.C. 20 per cent of additional power generated at Bonneville, Idaho, by possible additions to the Arrow Lakes dam in later years.

Mr. Lesage said the U.S. federal power commission owns and operates Bonneville and decides how its power will be allotted. But the power commission was not a signatory to the agreement.

"There is no guarantee at all," he said waving a copy of the agreement. "I never saw anything so childish."

An B.C. would get out of the agreement would be a small cash payment.

Mr. Lesage spoke during Commons debate on a bill which would give the federal government stricter control over use of international river waters.

The bill also would enable the federal government to block the B.C. Kaiser contract. Mr. Lesage said the contract is not good business for B.C. or Canada.

Big Four Talks At Future Date Backed in U.K.

(Compiled from AP and CP Dispatches)

Prime Minister Churchill yesterday said he still favors Big Four talks with the Russians while U.S. officials expressed cautious interest in a Soviet peace promoting plan.

On the Russian proposal that parliamentarians gather at the various capitals exchange views, the U.S. state department said today had no comment. It was largely because it had nothing to go on, beyond London newspaper reports reporting that the purpose of Parliaments had adopted a decision of aiming for the exchange of opinions.

Responding to labor demands that he decide the new "crisis" premier Marshal Nikolai Bulganin to join at Big Four talks soon, Churchill declared:

"The policy of the government is to seek a four-power conference at a time when it seems likely to yield genuine results, but that occasion is not likely to occur until after the ratification of the London-Paris agreements."

The Churchill government hopes the accords to free and rearm the West Germans will be through the parliaments of nine nations involved within a couple of months.

The Kremlin shake-up was accompanied by a special declaration from Foreign Minister Molotov that satisfaction of the Paris accords would destroy hopes for fruitful East-West talks. The tough Molotov speech led some Labor MPs to proclaim Churchill had lost chance for Big Four talks with the master of Georgi Malenkov.

Churchill gave no indication that the reshuffle in the Soviet hierarchy has undermined his hopes that a Big Four meeting can be arranged.

A spokesman said the U.S. state department has heard nothing yet from the U.S. embassy in Moscow and would like to see an invitation from the Soviets before taking a stand.

The Soviet declaration addressed to the peoples and not governments of all countries of the world, drew restrained praise from several senators. Several suggested the proposal do some good if it is a genuine gesture of goodwill.

Hoist Motion Killed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Friday night defeated by a vote of 118 to 14 a Social Credit attempt to kill legislation giving the government tighter control over use of international river waters.

Only Fernand Gerard (Ind Lapointe) supported the Social Credit group.

The Liberal, Progressive Conservative and CCF groups voted solidly against the proposal of Solon Low, Social Credit leader, to delay the legislation for six months. This would have killed the bill for this session.

Social Credit had been fighting tooth and nail against the measure which, it claims, is an invasion of provincial rights.

A filibuster appeared in the making. Social Credit has used up 10 of its 14 speakers on the government's main motion to give the bill second reading approval in principle. But each member can speak again on any amendment to the motion.

RETURN TO BILL

John Blackmore (SC Lethbridge) was the only speaker on Mr. Low's amendment. After the vote on this Fred Shaw (SC Red Deer) returned to the bill itself.

The "short" motion was the second Mr. Low proposed Friday night.

He first moved that the bill be referred to a federal-provincial conference for consideration before it receives second reading.

This proposal was ruled out of order by Speaker Rene Beaudoin.

The issue concerns mainly the agreement between the British Columbia Social Credit administration and the Kaiser Corp. to build a water storage dam on the Lower Arrow Lakes in B.C.

WASTE OF RESOURCES

The federal government claims the project is a waste of B.C. water resources and jeopardizes future plans for bigger power projects in the Columbia River basin.

The legislation now before the Commons would enable the government to block the project.

Socred leader Low said the bill should be withdrawn until the federal and B.C. governments can get together on the issue.

Little Girl Falls Against Stove

Second Child Dies of Burns; First Death Found Negligent

NANAIMO—The second Indian child to suffer fatal burns in separate mishaps during the past two days died last night while a coroner's jury was bringing in a verdict of death through negligence in the case of the first.

Dead is Myra Jones, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremy Jones of the Lead Island reserve. The little girl fell against a stove while her parents were camping at Gabriola Island and her clothes burst into flame.

Monday a coroner's jury recommended that the two surviving children of Mrs. Virginia Fraser be taken care of by the child welfare after an inquest into the death of four-months-old Earl Anthony Fraser, who died in a house blaze Wednesday.

Mrs. Fraser, mother of the baby, was absent from her home when the fire broke out. Her eldest child, Rodney, aged five, saved the lives of his sister Ramona, three, and another child Carl, and not being his baby brother.

The jury ruled that Anthony died through negligence.

It is believed a coroner's inquiry will be held into the fatal burning of Myra Jones.

Mr. Jones brought the child by boat to Nanaimo at dusk yesterday and was attended by Dr. John Cooper. There were serious burns over the child's entire body except her face.

Only Need To Ask

Irwin Won't Deny MLAs Beer, Wine

If MLAs want beer and wine with their meals in the provincial parliament they certainly are. They have to do is ask and in appropriation will be made for a license.

This came yesterday from Speaker Thomas Irwin under whose jurisdiction the restaurant falls during the session.

Mr. Irwin said he was not quoted as saying that he would have to be out of office before drinks would be served in the members' dining room.

He said if enough members ask for beer and wine with meals he will apply for a dining-room license.

Pflimlin Set To Attempt Government

PARIS (Reuters) — Pierre Pflimlin agreed Friday night after a busy day of political soundings to accept the task of trying to form France's 21st post-war government.

The tall reserved premier-designate is expected to present his new cabinet to the National Assembly for approval Monday or Tuesday in succession to the government of Pierre Mendes-France.

Pflimlin, second man this week to try to form a government, announced his decision through a spokesman before giving his official acceptance to President Rene Coty.

Pflimlin went through a trying day featured by a rebuff from the powerful Socialist Party, strongest single party in the assembly. Although he had been conceded only a 50-50 chance of success, he gamely continued his talks with party leaders in search of support for a broadly-based coalition.

CBC Dispute Progressing

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor department troubleshooters Friday stepped into the CBC's strike-threatening dispute with its technicians' union and Friday night indicated progress toward averting a radio-TV walkout.

"I hope we will get pretty far tomorrow," said M. M. Maclean, head of the industrial relations division, after a day of long separate discussions.

He said he will confer again today with the CBC and probably also with the union negotiating committee.

Race Track Near Sidney Wins Zoning Approval

Plan for New Fair Gets Little Support

BY ALEC MERRIMAN

Approval was given last night for the rezoning of Sandown Park on the Patricia Bay Highway near Sidney for a commercial horse racing track.

In bringing down the decision, forming a policy bearing the stamp of approval for the South Saanich regional area, said the board members were to observe letters were received by the surrounding and adjacent property owners. Has he commended to the minister of municipal affairs that the property be rezoned for horse racing purposes.

William Randall, president of Colwood Park Limited, owner of Sandown track, said last night contracts will be let as soon as final word is received from the minister of municipal affairs.

Plans call for a $100,000 expenditure to bring the racing plant up to standard including stables to house 250 horses and a grandstand to seat 1,500 people.

Mr. Randall said it is doubtful if the work will be completed in time to hold the planned race meet between May 21 and June 4, but that a meet would be held at Sandown in September.

Overwhelming support for horse racing at Sandown was given earlier last night by North Saanich residents during the public hearing.

But they were cool to a proposal to hold a Class A fair on the same site, claiming that the present 87-year-old North and South Saanich Agricultural Society fair adequately served the Sidney, North Saanich, Central Saanich and Saanich area.

More than 200 residents crowded a room of the North Saanich High School for the public hearing.

There was standing room only and a dozen persons had to stand outside the door to listen to the proceedings.

A. W. Sharpe, Sidney municipal clerk, brought the support of the Sidney Village Commission to the meeting.

"We have a proposal that will probably be assessed at $80,000," he said and added that it would mean big tax revenues for the district.

He pointed to the benefits Sidney and district would get from the track, including $100,000 to be spent on construction, a year-round payroll, and money coming in from Victoria and Vancouver during race meets.

"We feel it is our duty to boost for the track," he said.

If Indian agitation officer at a dinner said the proposed situation has not been used in the district. "No doubt there will be a considerable amount of employment for residents of the district," he added.

Kenneth Herrington, who lives half a mile from the track site said: "I feel we should have that race track if at all possible."

Tachens Wreckage Abandoned to Reds

TAIPEI (UP)—The Tachen Islands, burned and blasted, were abandoned to the Chinese Communists today.

The last members of an American naval party left the islands at midnight Friday after completing the demolition of military installations on the former Nationalist outposts off the shore of Red China.

Only an hour before, the last Nationalist soldiers boarded an American vessel to complete the evacuation of Nationalist troops and civilians from the islands 200 miles north of Formosa.

The Washington, the state department announced, the American naval and air forces had completed their work in the evacuation and "was now returning to their normal operations but will be alert to any concern [illegible] tration or employment of Communist Chinese forces obviously undertaking to facilitate attack upon Formosa and will be prepared to take appropriate action if required."

The withdrawal was completed well ahead of schedule, with only a few civilian residents.

The Nationalist air force stood by to start bombing the Tachens. A Chinese official said they would be hit hard and often as soon as the U.S. and Nationalist ships were safely out of the way.

Red forces estimated installations which, over the American objections, at least $[illegible] were blown up. Left to go were an Anglican hospital and waterworks.

No Pledge by U.S. Nationalist Admits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitter tempest of words subsided somewhat Friday after the Chinese Nationalist foreign minister George Yeh backed away from any claim that the United States is pledged specifically to defend Quemoy and the Matsus.

Remarks Yeh made Thursday after a call on State Secretary Dulles were interpreted as a hint that he had obtained a U.S. commitment to defend Quemoy, the Matsus and other offshore islands now occupied by Nationalists.

Newspaper men understood him to say that a U.S. pledge to protect positions deemed necessary for the defense of Formosa "of course includes Quemoy and the Matsus."

But the foreign minister said Friday he never intended to leave that impression.

The United States, he said in clarification, will decide whether the offshore islands are to be treated as essential to the defense of Formosa and the Pescadores.

Neither the defend Formosa resolution passed by Congress last month nor the U.S.-Formosa mutual defense treaty, approved by the Senate Wednesday, named any territory other than Formosa and the Pescadores.

But the resolution states that President Eisenhower may use U.S. military power to defend "related positions" — in other words, offshore islands if he deems them necessary for the ultimate defense of Formosa.

Simple Family Affair for 2,500

Bluebloods Fill Village for Royal Nuptials

PRINCE ALEXANDER

CASCAIS, Portugal (UP) — The blue bloods of Europe took over this Portuguese fishing village yesterday as they assembled for the royal wedding of the year.

Princess Maria Pia of Italy and Prince Alexander of Yugoslavia whose families are heavy with titles but haven't a throne between them will be married by the parish priest at noon today in the tiny village church.

It will be a "simple family wedding" — only about 2,500 guests.

The simplicity will be limited to the ceremony itself, which will take place in a 200-year-old church that holds only 600 persons. Most of the guests will have to stand outside, mingling with fishermen and their families who will be among the uninvited spectators.

Since there is no palace around the parties which go with a wedding of such calibre are being held at the nearby Hotel Estoril, a popular tourist haven here on the "Portuguese Riviera."

The former kings, princes and dukes and the society acceptable commoners who merited invitations raised glasses in a toast last night honoring the bride and bridegroom, who arrived a couple of days ago by car from France.

Prince Alexander, 30, who is a six-foot, thin-haired former airline pilot, plans to take his bride on a honeymoon trip to Madeira before returning to Paris and his job with a navigation company.

Princess Maria Pia, 20, eldest child of exiled King Umberto of Italy, recently finished a language and stenographic course at a school in Geneva.

Their romance began last summer on the royal Mediterranean cruise of the yacht Agamemnon, when they were among the many titled guests of the king and queen of Greece.

The wedding guests here include the British Duchess of Kent, her daughter Alexandra and her son the Duke of Kent. Don Juan, pretender to the Spanish throne, the Count of Paris, pretender to the throne of France, and Archduke Franz Joseph of Austria.

None of Europe's reigning monarchs are to be present but most of them are represented.

About 1,600 of the invitations were sent to Italians drawn mostly from the monarchist movement in Italy. While the political implications of the wedding were soft-pedalled, leaders of the monarchist movement hoped it would help cement the rifts which have developed in their party in recent years.

Ex-King Umberto, having as hectic a time as any father of the bride, said he chose Cascais for the wedding because it reminds him of an Italian village.

To give the wedding a "democratic" tone, he announced that "all Italians who have come to see the wedding" would be admitted to an open house tonight at the Estoril.

It will be a big day for Cascais villagers, for there will be two weddings at the Church of Our Lady of the Assumption. Before the princess and her prince exchange vows, a Cascais stonecutter, Eusebia Goncalves, and his 19-year-old sweetheart, Maria Manuela Lourenco, will be married by the same priest.

PEOPLE We Could Do Without (Chapter 40) . . . The Man Who Enjoys His Letters Out Loud. This pest is usually found in an office. He starts to enjoy his mail even before he opens the envelope.

"I'd know that crazy handwriting anywhere," he [illegible] "Heh! Heh! Never expected to hear from that character again. [illegible] country 5,000 miles off the map. The goofy way he spells people's names. Aa-hahaha! A-ah-hoo-hoo! What an oddball! That guy's a panic."

"He is, huh?" you answer.

And then the man tears open the envelope, knocking himself out with mirth as he does so.

His expression changes to one of astonishment.

"Well, doggone," he says. "Who would have thought it? And with Marilyn Monroe, of all women!"

"What about Marilyn Monroe?" you ask, unable to rest on your curiosity. But he doesn't hear.

"Old Hank," he says. "Well, well! I never would have suspected. Old Hank. Haha! Oo-ahahaha!"

"Old Hank must be quite a card," you suggest.

"Whaddya know, he was only kidding after all," the man says.

"Well, that's a relief, at any rate," you declare.

* * *

You haven't found out much about the contents of the letter so far. But it must be good.

Now the man is helpless with laughter and red in the face.

"A-ha-ho-hoo! Right out there in the middle of the main street. I never heard anything to equal it. Great snakes and weasels! That guy'll be the death of me."

There seems to be some fear that the last statement will be literally true. The letter reader stands in grave danger of bursting a blood vessel.

* * *

Luckily for him he reads something else in the letter which sobers him up.

"Poor old Zeke," he muses. "Malaria, measles and [illegible] fever, all at the same time."

"Tough on old Zeke," you assure him. "Sad. Next week East Lynne."

But the man has come to another funny part. He doesn't laugh right away, but bottles up the mirth and slowly inflates, like an inner tube at the service station. Finally he bursts, with a great hissing bellow of merriment.

"It's crazy," he gasps, when he recovers his voice. "The policeman found out—ahaha!—that the lady really was his wife, after all! Haha! Hur! Hur!"

"It must have been a shock," you answer.

"Holy smoke, though," the man says. "Fifty thousand dollars."

That is too much for your curiosity. "Look, pal," you say wearily. "What $50,000? Who got it? And who is Hank? Who is Zeke? You get me interested in this stuff from your letter, and then you don't tell me what it's all about."

The man draws himself up to his full height, and rams the letter into his coat pocket.

"Some nerve you have, Buster," he says, "prying into my mail."

Police Remembered Master After Fabulous Brinks Job

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

One day in 1948, while I was in Vancouver, I got a letter from Dr. Jonah H. Alco, one-time San Quentin warden, former chairman of the board of prison directors, a millionaire in his own right now living in San Francisco [illegible] across the [illegible] work done in California with convicts.

I had known Dr. Alco at San Quentin and he wrote me to say he was planning a vacation at Jasper Park and would like to see me on his way through.

I met him at the station, took him to his hotel where we had our talk, then took him on a brief shopping trip before he caught his train for Jasper.

Whether Dr. Alco ever knew anything about it I can't say, but he and I had a tail following us from the time he arrived—and when he left for the resort another followed him. Meantime we had been photographed (without a flash!) at the station and in each of two stores where we shopped.

To this day I don't know what that was all about. [illegible]

A few years later there was to be another occasion when the law remembered me vividly. In Boston, a place named Brink's was knocked over to the tune of $1,500,000. I was due to have visitors.

[illegible] I read in the papers and heard on the radio was all I knew about the Brinks hold-up. Just the same, a wire that came from [illegible] New York didn't surprise me.

[illegible] representative of the RCMP, the other from the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation.

How had I managed the Brinks job, they wanted to know. I told them I hadn't; that I'd read about it, and that was all.

They proved hard to convince. A job of such a size, they argued, had all the earmarks [illegible] perhaps was very flattering, but it was not for me. Where had I been, they asked, on the night it happened?

"MASTERMIND"?

Right here in Vancouver. [illegible] in Vancouver for an [illegible].

So I told them No, No, No.

Finally they went away. Were they convinced? I guess so, because I heard no more from them.

About that Brinks job, I have one theory. Sure, it did look like a Wilson affair. As it happened a couple of years after the Colliers' articles describing my life of crime, I think it possible that someone used my story as a textbook.

[illegible]

My caravan was parked for a time at Nelson and Howe in Vancouver, waiting for the right time to travel, when one evening there was a knock on the door. Opening, I saw a nicely attired woman.

"Is [illegible] for sale?" [illegible]

[illegible]

In a moment she told me she had seen the caravan while passing with a friend, and had been attracted to the vehicle. How much would I want for it?"

Perhaps $3,000, I said.

Pre-Sprouting Speeds Spuds

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Of recent years I have become a great believer in sprouting my seed potatoes before I plant them.

This consists of exposing the tubers to plenty of air and light for about a month, so that at planting time there are [illegible] of short, sturdy, green shoots [illegible] arising. These are pale shoots [illegible] ones you get when potatoes are stored in a warm basement are no good.

The usual method of sprouting potatoes is to [illegible] spuds in shallow boxes or seed flats, just a single layer, and keep them in a cool frame, a porch, sunny window, or even out of doors, bringing them in when cool nights threaten.

SAVE SPACE

I tried a new stunt last year, though, which takes up a lot less space than the trays or seed flats.

I took lengths of stove pipe wire about four feet long and threaded my seed potatoes on the wire, selecting tubers about the size of a Grade "A" breakfast egg. With a stick at one end of the wire to keep the spuds from sliding off and a loop at the other, it was a simple matter to hang these up where they would get plenty of light and air.

In fine weather they were hung under the eaves of the house outside while at night and during bad spells they were brought indoors and hung in the kitchen window. The results at harvesting time were really outstanding.

EARLIER START

There are several advantages when you sprout your potatoes before planting. In the first place, your spuds are making growth at this time and under [illegible] conditions of light and temperature.

[illegible]

In other words, you can wait for the weather before planting without losing any growth in the meantime.

[illegible]

HORMONE TREATMENT

[illegible]

[illegible] if you plant our potatoes which can't sprout. I have seen gardens in which hardly any of the potatoes came up at all through this cause.

Pre-sprouting enables a gardener to spot these useless treated tubers before planting.

Seaway Boosts Spending

Winters Outlines Construction Jobs

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to spend about $100,000,000 more on public works projects in 1955-56 than in the current fiscal year, Works Minister Winters said Friday night.

[illegible] gram "The Nation's Business" he also said the construction industry "can look forward to a high level of activity in Canada throughout 1955." There were prospects of another exceptionally good year of house building.

The public works department, he said, is working on $1 [illegible] the projects and expects to start work on another [illegible] projects during 1955-56.

The government actually hopes to spend about $100,000,000 more on public projects in the broadest sense of the term [illegible] the current fiscal year. Some of this [illegible] expenditure in the next fiscal year will be for construction work on the St. Lawrence seaway, which is at last getting started.

Few Watts In Cat Pats

NEW YORK (AP) — When you pat a cat on a cold day, it makes electricity.

Consolidated Edison Company reported Friday it assigned an engineer to measure the power of a cat pat.

He found that to light a 75-watt bulb for a minute would take 9,200,000,000 cat pats.

Adviser Denies Link

Former provincial finance minister Einar Gunderson yesterday denied that a direct link exists between his role as a government adviser and his [illegible] of Commerce director.

He was replying to a charge made in the legislature Thursday by Robert Strachan, (CCF Cowichan-Newcastle).

Mr. Gunderson claimed the statement was made merely to cause embarrassment.

NOT CIVIL SERVANT

"I am not a civil servant," said Mr. Gunderson. "I have been retained to supervise and prepare the brief in connection with the federal-provincial tax agreement."

Since he is not connected with the government's finance department, Mr. Gunderson said he is not acting in a dual capacity by working for the government and the bank.

"The talk about the financial system and monetary policies has nothing to do with the banks," he said. "You never hear Social Credit criticize the banks," said Mr. Gunderson.

Vatican Investigates Don Juan

ROME (NANA)—Vatican officials are investigating the life of the Spaniard whose name has become synonymous with romantic conquest to determine if he reformed enough in his old age to rate recognition for sanctity.

The Vatican investigators [illegible] testimonies concerning Don Miguel de Mañara, better known as Don Juan, a rich resident of Seville in the 17th century.

Don Miguel spent the first part of his life chasing women, playing practical jokes, drinking tremendous amounts of liquor and dueling. Spanish poets and playwrights, inspired by his adventures, created a character of the famous [illegible] and re-christened him Don Juan Tenorio.

Songs were sung about him. Mozart wrote an opera about him and 200 years after he lived Byron wrote an epic poem about a fellow of the same name and with a similar way of life.

After Don Miguel killed a man in a duel, however, he saw the error of his ways and embarked on a life of penance.

Soon after his death the people of Seville glossed over his worst side and played up all the good things he had done. They asked their bishop to begin the procedure for beatification.

The probe is being carried out in Rome by the sacred congregation of rites.

Should it prove favorable the Pope would proclaim officially [illegible]

After that, if the congregation is satisfied that Don Juan was responsible for at least two miracles he would be beatified in St. Peter's.

Orange Vitamin Wonder Drug?

NEW YORK (AP)—A [illegible] wonder drug was described Friday in a report to a scientific conference.

It promises benefits in treating [illegible] fever and [illegible]

It is hesperidin, so-called vitamin P, [illegible] a true vitamin.

NOT IN JUICE

Hesperidin is found in the peel and pulp of lemons and oranges and certain other fruits. You don't get much of it by drinking fruit juices.

With [illegible] vitamin C, hesperidin strengthens the walls of the blood vessels or capillaries. [illegible] seem to weaken these blood vessels, permitting the blood fluids to leak out and this perhaps favors the spread of disease germs.

The capillary strengthening effect of hesperidin plus Vitamin C is the basis for hopes this drug will have important medical uses. It's estimated that a person weighing 150 pounds has 60,000 or more miles of capillaries.

MANY REPORTS

More than a dozen scientists have reported on hesperidin at a conference sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences.

Tablets containing both chemicals [illegible] bleeding in patients taking blood thinning drugs, said Dr. Charles Bram[illegible] of Mercy Hospital, Baltimore.

Other physicians are scheduled to report on benefits from the hesperidin-vitamin C tablets in treating rheumatic fever and [illegible] and in preventing miscarriages.

SUN LIFE OF CANADA
REPORTS TO YOU

"THE MIRACLE OF LIFE INSURANCE"

What has been called "the miracle of life insurance" enables an immediate estate to be created by men and women in all walks of life, thereby safeguarding themselves and their families against adverse circumstances arising from untimely death.... But the "miracle" does not stop there, for, in the process of planned saving through life insurance by millions of citizens across the nation, a great reservoir of creative capital is directed into vital channels of our national economy. Thus, the modest contribution of the man in the street to family security becomes an imposing investment in the nation's resources, industry and commerce, a factor of incalculable significance to the country's economic stability, and to individual and national well-being.

FROM THE SUN LIFE ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1954:

Total Sun Life insurance in force at December 31st: $6 billions

New life insurance purchased during the year: $696 millions
(Largest amount of any Canadian company)

Payments to policyholders, annuitants and beneficiaries: $134 millions including $93 millions paid to living policyholders and $41 millions to the beneficiaries of deceased policyholders.

- New Sun Life insurance written in 1954 showed an increase of $119 millions over the previous year.
- 2,039,103 Sun Life policies and group certificates are now in force.
- Since the first Sun Life policy was written in 1871, the Company has paid out in benefits more than $2,566,000,000. During 1954 an average of $529,000 was paid out each working day.
- New mortgage loans amounting to $83 millions were completed in 1954, bringing the total mortgage investment of the Company to $323 millions, mostly in individual homes.

POLICYHOLDERS DIVIDENDS
$26 millions will be distributed to Sun Life policyholders in dividends during 1955, an increase for the sixth successive year, again reducing the cost of life insurance to holders of participating policies.

Sun Life policyholders will receive a copy of the Company's Annual Report for 1954 containing full text of the President's address at the Annual Meeting, comparative charts of business in force, benefits paid, etc., and other worthwhile information. Copies of the Report may also be obtained from the Head Office of the Company, or from

The Mentally Ill

ONE of the gravest problems of the age is the increasing number of mentally ill, posing a tremendous difficultys for welfare administrators all across the country. Existing facilities for the treatment and care of these unhappy people are invariably overtaxed. British Columbia is no exception, indeed it is probably at a disadvantage in this respect in view of the continuing trek of elderly and other age groups to this province for reasons of general health. In the whole realm of health and welfare in fact British Columbia, because of its climate, falls heir to many patients more properly the responsibility of other provinces, to an extent which suggests that some day mental health will have to be recognized as a national and not a provincial problem.

In any case it has been well established that the Essondale institution is no longer adequate to cope with its ever increasing number of patients, and the announcement that a new mental unit will be built, reportedly some 15 miles from Victoria, is one to be cheered. It means a substantial addition to existing facilities, and if mainly designed to treat Vancouver Island cases it will do double duty in providing greater convenience for Island inmates and their families while at the same time easing the pressure on the mainland institution. This will be heartening news for all those devoted workers dedicated to the cure and welfare of the mentally sick.

Presumably the patients of the new unit will be of the type now housed at Essondale, a circumstance that renews attention on the Colquitz home. This building, a former jail which has been described as a dungeon and heartily condemned by all and sundry, is hopelessly ill-suited for its purpose. Provincial governments of the past repeatedly spoke of some day rehousing the inmates under conditions that would do the province credit rather than the reverse, but beyond lip service nothing was ever done. It would be an act of mercy as well as facing up to a crying need to right an intolerable situation, and one hopes that in the course of its expansion plans the present government may be able to include consideration for the lot of the unfortunates at the Wilkinson Road institution.

Milk Price Problems

MR. JUSTICE CLYNE as special commissioner to find out what regulations, if any, would be best for British Columbia's milk industry has done an extremely thorough job. Reduction of the masses of evidence he has before him into a report and recommendations for official action will take further time. The judge therefore has made an interim recommendation: that the necessary step be taken to empower fixing the price to be paid to producers; and this is to be done. From the fact that the commissioner has interrupted his work to make that recommendation it may be taken that he regards protection of the producer as an urgent need.

The probability is, therefore, that control over prices at the farm level will apply as a temporary expedient for about a year, or until the legislature meets again. The effect of this will be to restore provincial regulation to what it was after the removal of price controls at the distributors' and consumers' levels and before the recent discovery that statutory authority for fixing prices to producers did not exist. Until Mr. Justice Clyne's complete report is in, the main question —should there be any controls at all? — must remain in abeyance.

A system of guaranteed prices to producers always leads to trouble, as witness the bad fix the federal government is in again with its huge store of surplus butter. From evidence before the Clyne commission there would appear to be a somewhat parallel situation as regards milk production. The problem in the Fraser Valley is not one of keeping the public supplied but of getting rid of surpluses. In the case of butter a guaranteed, year-round price has stimulated production beyond anything Canada can hope to use or sell elsewhere. With milk also it looks as if the fixed price, when the farmers had it, encouraged uneconomical expansion. The difference is that under the federal butter scheme the producer has no worries about selling his output, whereas the milk producer may find he has many.

On the other hand supply of milk could just as easily fall below public requirements if a change in policy caused the farmers to feel that production was not financially worth while. A few years ago when the producers were dissatisfied with their margin under the milk board scale, some of them killed off their herds for beef: and that is a veiled threat which they continue to hold in reserve. It is not one that can be ignored either, for nobody can force a man to produce something if he decides not to.

This and other factors, chiefly involving relations with the distributors, make the milk price problem more complex than most of a similar nature. If the commissioner's studies result in a workable solution he will have accomplished much for the welfare of the province.

Ottawa Set the Example

IF there are difficulties ahead in the special exemption of Quebec under the federal income tax structure, the Dominion precipitated them by the nature of its compromise with that Province. The 10 per cent deduction in favor of Quebec taxpayers is double what the administration offered at the time Mr. Duplessis made his first stand. It is hindsight for Ottawa to plead now that if all of the Provinces declined to renew their tax-rental agreements, and all of them imposed provincial income taxes on top of the federal levies, the Quebec concession would have to be made uniform and that the Dominion as a result would lose $127,600,000.

The figures by provinces cited in support of the contention presumably are net. A gross federal collection of $127,000,000 implied under them for British Columbia, for example, does not appear to be in the same street with the Dominion's actual receipts here under the existing arrangement of tax leases. It is not until the federal rebates to B.C., now between $42,000,000 and $45,000,000 per annum, are added to that figure that the Dominion's gross collections within this province seem to be approximated. British Columbia has shown no disposition yet to follow Quebec or to abandon the tax lease plan. That it has reason to be conscious of the undiminished rate of these collections has long been evident. Tax collection remains one of the big businesses in the province, with the Dominion in the stellar role.

When the Dominion-Provincial conference on tax rentals is called at Ottawa shortly the Provinces will be there to speak for themselves. On the Quebec formula, however, it will be the Dominion which will be under the necessity of explaining why it made the concession in a form whose extension to 10 Provinces would cost $127,600,000. If the conference follows the expected path the Provinces are more likely to be concerned about the total extraction than the 10 per cent special remission to taxpayers in Quebec.

From the standpoint of practical politics, the Dominion knows now about what will take place. Quebec will accept the concession. Most if not all of the other Provinces will renew their tax leases to Ottawa, though most of them doubtless will expect more for the privilege.

Ready-Made Distraction

Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

SOVIET propagandists, following through on the prediction made in the Malenkov resignation statement, are accusing the West of sensationalizing and distorting their recent governmental shakeup.

It's doubtful if they themselves take it very seriously.

As always when important events occur behind a screen of secrecy, there has been a vast amount of speculation in the West about the meaning of the Soviet changes. Perhaps too much. It has approached the dimensions of a flop.

* * *

Governments have given out that they were surprised, and expressed inability to assess the new aspects of Soviet affairs, throwing the doors wide open to every imaginable theory.

As a matter of fact, close observers of Soviet affairs were surprised only in detail, not in general. Signs of trouble in the Kremlin have been appearing for some time. It was not a question of whether something would happen, but just what would happen. Nor is there any reason to think things are through happening.

* * *

From the beginning it was clear that Malenkov was sitting only on the steps to the throne of Stalin, and government by committee has always been an extremely unstable thing.

Under the circumstances, there is a very great deal which wild speculation can do to help the Kremlin nabobs. All they have to do is to pick out, for public consumption at home, those speculations which Russians themselves can see are foolish, and then hammer away about the "lies" distributed by Mother Russia's enemies. It offers a ready made distraction from whatever is really going on.

Loot of Lima

By FRANK KELLEY

FROM San Joseph, Costa Rica, a story in this paper a few mornings ago stated 14 California treasure-hunters were to sail from that port for Cocos Island in search of the fabulous "loot of Lima," which, so the story goes, consists of golden church ornaments, gold bullion and precious jewels.

The story couldn't help but revive recollections in the minds of old-timers in Victoria and Vancouver who were investors on several occasions in ventures promising great returns. According to the record the first expedition from these parts originated in Vancouver and sailed from the Mainland port in 1892. It was promoted by a former banker named Van Brenner. The group's ship was the steam-driven Eliza Edwards and had a crew of 12. They spent 60 days searching for the gold.

First Victoria-organized expedition to the little island southwest of Panama was skippered by Fred Hackett, with Captains Gus Whidden and Fred McDougal as first and second mates respectively. All three were pioneer pelagic sealers and their ship was the sealing schooner Aurora. Among prominent Victorians interested were William Munsie, Thomas Shotbolt, William Redfern and Simon Leiser.

The Aurora sailed south in 1897. While unsuccessful, the publicity evidently intrigued Admiral Palliser, then in charge of the Royal Navy fleet based at Esquimalt; for he took his flagship to Cocos Island, landed a work party and wasted a lot of time and gun powder altering the shape of the terrain.

The Admiralty heads were not pleased with the part Palliser played. On retiring, however, he organized an expedition in 1904, sailing from England aboard the British ship Lytton, so certain was he that the stories of the treasure were as true as Gospel.

* * *

Next Victorians were instrumental in financing an expedition aboard the brigantine Blakely. It was captained by Fred Hackett, and while Agnes Deans Cameron, local school teacher and writer, was prominent in getting the expedition under way, there were rumors that James Dunsmuir contributed a considerable sum to the venture.

Captain Whidden made his second trip to Cocos in 1924 aboard the old rum runner The Gunner. The expedition was organized by Captain Polkingthorne. It left Vancouver January 20, 1924. There were several master mariners in the ship's company—W. Kerry, J. Fletcher and P. Crawford. Nothing was found after almost a year of searching. Then in the 30's, Col. Jack Leckie organized a party that sailed from Vancouver. I forget the name of the vessel at the moment; but it was skippered by Gus Whidden, who was making his third voyage to the island of dreams.

The story of Cocos Island goes back over 300 years and involves famous filibusters, Spanish galleons and church treasures. Notorious names include Lionel Wafer, buccaneering surgeon and journalist; William Dampier, naturalist and the greatset buccaneer of the Pacific region long before the "loot of Lima" began to feature the story.

That had to do with a Peruvian revolution in 1833, when Captain Thomson of the British vessel, Mary Dear, forgot the best traditions of the British merchant service when Peruvian officials got him to load golden church equipment, jewels and bullion, which he agreed to land at Callao. Pending the Mary Dear's departure, the guard of soldiers placed on the ship were murdered by Thompson and his crew as the ship headed for Cocos Island, where the treasure sparked the local expeditions.

In the meantime, geologists suggest that while treasure may have been buried there volcanic action altered the location.

Reports from Ottawa

WHEN Dr. Horace King, a British Labor MP who is an expert on parliamentary procedure, visited Ottawa recently he was entertained by Commons Speaker Rene Beaudoin and met a number of our MPs.

Among them were opposition MPs who are wont to gripe that while the rules of the British Commons are the quintessence of democracy, ours enable an autocratic government to beat MPs about the ears any time it chooses.

Dr. King, who had been in the Commons to see how our Parliament conducts its business, didn't agree that British parliamentary fields were more lush for MPs in opposition. As he told the Canadian MPs, in London the opposition couldn't get away with the inquisitorial tactics our opposition uses during the daily question period. He pointed out that at Westminster all questions must be submitted in writing. When they're answered — which is when the government gets around to them; no sooner — the questioners are allowed two supplementary questions each. Then they have to shut up.

Here the rule is that all questions save those of immediate urgency must be "put on the order paper," which means they must be submitted in writing. This rule is greatly abused. Opposition MPs spring up during the question period with queries which often are of no pressing urgency and frequently are asked for political propaganda reasons rather than to elicit information.

* * *

The usual practice is for the inquiring MP to send a copy of his question to the appropriate minister before the House meets. He's not obliged to, but the courtesy often is to his advantage, for ministers can't always answer questions off the cuff about details of their departments' activities.

If you've visited the Commons during the question period, you've probably heard ministers preface their replies with "The honorable member was kind enough to send me notice of his question." Or, if the MP failed in this courtesy, the minister might "take the question as notice" and delay answering until he could look into the matter.

Experienced cabinet members like Trade Minister Howe and Agriculture Minister Gardiner seldom beg off because they haven't received such notice. But when inexperienced, cocksure ministers try to do likewise they're apt to talk themselves and the government into embarrassing positions which they have to "clarify" next day.

* * *

Perhaps the sharpest difference between our question period and that at Westminster is the way our opposition tries to badger the government into answering. For example, Carl Nickle (PC, Calgary South) recently asked Howe why Trans-Canada Pipe Lines hadn't yet signed contracts to buy gas from western producers, and would the government step in to iron out the difficulty.

Howe coldly advised Nickle to get his information from "the people for whom he is asking the question."

Despite this rebuff, Nickle proceeded to ask three loaded supplementary questions. He got no satisfaction from Howe and drew a mild reproof from Mr. Speaker Beaudoin, but he reaped publicity with his aspersions that the government is to blame because Trans-Canada and the gas well owners can't agree on price.

The fact seems to be that for all the complaining of our opposition, the Canadian rules are much less severe than those in the Mother of Parliaments. For our national temperament, and for the sake of color and liveliness in our parliamentary proceedings, that's probably a good thing.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

IT is good to see the common ordinary red or blue bandanna handkerchief coming back into fashion with the trend towards sport shirts and informal clothing for business wear. It is too soon, I suppose, to expect business generally to escape from the old stuffy tradition of business suits. Probably nine out of 10 men in business cling religiously to the conventional sober garments that go with the phrase describing their jobs as "white collar."

But at several different levels, the breakaway has begun. You commonly encounter men who wear sport coats and grey flannels in the office. Not infrequently, a member of the brass will be wearing a blazer to work. Sport shirts are to be noted even at the presidential level of business. And this trend is most noticeable in those modern offices where the furniture and decoration are free of the mouldy tradition of walnut and of onyx pen-and-ink stands.

In the big stores, management still demands very stodgy clothes on the male clerks while allowing girls to do as they please, the prettier the better. But in smaller stores everywhere the business suit is pretty well a back number amongst clerks and merchants.

With the passing of the business suit comes not only the gay shirt and the carefree coat, but the bandanna, as the pocket handkerchief of a man. The white handkerchief has been an absurdity for generations. Nothing is more ridiculous than the sight of a man twiddling at his nose with a little white dolly. A soiled white handkerchief is the most disagreeable object in the world. But a man burying his face in a good red bandanna is a noble spectacle.

Under the Dome

By RAY BAINES

Colonist Legislative Reporter

THERE has been a considerable amount of expressed concern over the so-called unparliamentary language used in debates during the session this year.

Of course such practice is not confined to this year's session any more than it is confined to this province or this country.

The first thing to decide is what is unparliamentary language. Speaker Tom Irwin ruled out the use of the word "vicious" last year when opposition members used it in reference to the government's intentions. But this year he allowed P. A. Gibbs of Oak Bay to call the premier a liar cloaked though it was in the politer sounding terms "prevarication," "falsehood," and "deceit."

The attorney general however certainly objected to the words. In a later speech he said such language would be "offensive even in a barroom" (presumably he did not mean a bar room operating under the new Liquor Act which prohibits use of profane or obscene language) and "inexcusable" in the legislature.

* * *

We couldn't help feeling that the attorney general was being a little over-sensitive about the words themselves. They certainly would not be used in a bar room. Can you imagine a burly logger tossing down a straight whisky, hitching up his pants, throwing out his chest and then calling someone a "prevaricator?"

But what the attorney general really objected to was the charge that his chief actually deceived the public. The words could have been a lot more direct, but the meaning couldn't have been clearer.

Nobody likes to be called a liar, even politicians and advertising agents. But in a legislature people are called lots of things that they would ordinarily not accept without a fist fight.

* * *

Behavior in government assemblies varies with countries. The amusing part about the whole institution of parliamentary assembly is that it inspires some of the loftiest ideals and language, and some of the lowest.

Members of the French Chamber of Deputies scream "assassin!" at one another and have sometimes backed up their insults with a left hook. The Japanese Diet recently experienced a riot and in Italy members started shooting at each other.

But of course we have British traditions. That stuff is alright for those hot-headed Frenchmen but not for us.

Winston Churchill has been known to stick his tongue out at an opposition member while he was speaking. Once when Aneurin Bevan was holding forth and commanding attention of the whole House of Commons, Mr. Churchill stood up and began feeling in his pockets, looking under his seat and under his desk until he had the attention of the House and threw Mr. Bevan off the track. Of course, he really wasn't looking for anything.

* * *

But this sort of thing is just strategy. If you can't win an argument by straight logic, confound your opponent with a few tricks of the trade—probably the second oldest in the world.

Last year one member told a story which was a bit off color. He later apologized for it. This year he said something about Socred members from the hills who usually never wore shoes. I think the last was worse than the first.

Anything which is of a personal nature, draws attention to a member's physical defects or humble background is, to me, more unparliamentary than all the cuss-words in the world.

One of the principles of democratic assembly is that the people there are equal in the sense that they have all been elected, they all represent a portion of the general population; they all have the right to express opinions and ideas and are all human beings.

Tear apart what they say and do, but respect them personally as fellow humans. Call them liars for what they say and fools for what they believe in, but don't draw attention to the way they look, the way they talk or the way they dress. These things are their own business.

* * *

There have been some pretty rough characters holding office in democratic governments. They don't all have the polish of educators or the eloquence of lawyers.

Let the invectives fly, let the temper rise, let them damn the government and all it stands for.

Unparliamentary behavior? Only when you offend people personally. The rules of procedure are pretty flexible when it comes to open debate, but the rules of courtesy could be a little more rigid.

Three in Row Latest Mark For Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market made it three in a row Friday—three all-time high marks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained 50 cents at $159.70. That is exactly $2 above the old all-time high established September 3, 1929 and first broken last Wednesday.

A feature was the strength of a few individual issues. General Dynamics was up 9½.

The industrial component of the average was ahead 80 cents at a new high of $219.50 and utilities were up 40 cents at a new high of $71.30.

Volume was 3,260,000 shares.

Canadian stocks were mixed. International Nickel advanced ¾ and Hiram Walker was ahead ¼. Canadian Pacific eased ⅛, McIntyre dropped ¾ and Dome Mines fell ⅛.

Ahead at Close

MONTREAL (CP)—Gains ranging up to three points led the stock market ahead at the close of active trading.

General Dynamics was the feature rising eight points. Noranda advanced 3⅛. Howard Smith was up 1¼ and Price up 1¼. Ogilvie and Great Lakes each gained a point.

Industrial volume was 139,500 shares and mines 533,100.

Moderate Climb

TORONTO (CP)—The stock market climbed moderately and piled a few more big gains on top of those made Wednesday and Thursday.

A few issues shot ahead as much as eight points.

General Dynamics jumped $8.

Among industrial groups, papers, constructions, steels, foods, liquors and financial institutions gained but manufacturers eased. A dozen issues climbed $1 or more on the day.

Noranda led base metals higher with a $1.25 jump. Hudson Bay climbed 50 cents.

General Rise

VANCOUVER (CP)—Prices were generally higher in active trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. A total of 290,331 shares changed hands, with oils leading the way. United gained .18, closing at 1.40 after trading 35,600 shares.

CNR Places Order For 38 Diesels

MONTREAL—The Canadian National Railways has announced the placing of new orders for 38 diesel-electric road switching locomotives to be used on the Canadian lines of the company.

The orders were awarded to the Canadian Locomotive Company at Kingston for 10 1,200-horsepower diesels, the Montreal Locomotive Works, Montreal for five 1,000-horsepower diesels and General Motors Diesel Ltd., London for 23 1,200-horsepower switchers.

Steady Earnings Telephone Feature

KENNETH L. BOORMAN
Boorman Investment Co. Ltd.

Sound finances, steady earnings and well-assured dividends are characteristics of the telephone industry in Canada. The number of telephones in use more than doubled in the 21 years between the two wars and since 1945 has doubled again. The telephone stocks sell mostly on an investment basis and are, therefore, sensitive to the level of interest rates and the competition which fixed-income securities offer for the investor's dollar.

They have, however, the advantage that their expanding field of activity and the sizable backlog of orders for service which most telephone companies at present have on hand, together with increasing population promise gradual addition to revenues and earnings over the longer term.

New stock issued to provide funds for expansion dilute per share earnings in many cases but stockholders' subscription rights give an additional source of income or of capital gain to the shareholder.

BULK OF PHONES

Bell Telephone Co. of Canada operate in Ontario and Quebec and at the end of 1954 had more than 2,300,000 telephones in service which is about 60 per cent of all telephones in Canada. The common stock has been strong recently at $46 a share and yields 4.4 per cent on the regular $2 dividend. The issue of rights is usual and more may be expected in 1955. If the value of the rights issued is counted, the yield has been appreciably higher.

Second largest telephone company in Canada, B.C. Telephone Co. operates under a perpetual franchise in the province. Telephones in service have doubled since 1945 and there are applications on hand for nearly 12,000 additional phones. The common is selling at approximately $46 per share and also yields 4.4 per cent. The steady increase in earnings should continue on a moderate scale and both stocks would appear to be attractive for income and growth possibilities.

There are of course several attractive telephone issues and your own investment dealer should be consulted for his opinion on these and other "blue chip" equities.

WEEK'S HIGHLIGHTS

Stock market action in both Canada and the U.S. was dominated by strength in metal stocks in Canada and aircrafts in the U.S. Business news continued favorable with optimistic forecasts voiced at several annual meetings in which stress was laid upon the expanding volume of international trade.

Uranium issues monopolized public interest for a large part of the week with Gunnar Mines and Algom Uranium featuring a generally higher market for uraniums. Nickel was the most active stock in the industrials reaching new peaks on successive days. Canadian Breweries also attracted heavy buyers' interest.

Noranda on announcement [illegible] rose 3⅛ points at the week end and shared the spotlight with several Alberta oil issues, notably United, Home and Federated, which were strong on reports of an oil discovery in Central Alberta.

NEW RECORD

Steel operations continued to rise in the U.S. and automobile production set an all-time record in the past week. Chrysler Corp. sales and production were sharply ahead of last year. Canadian department store sales continued to run well ahead of comparable periods of 1954.

The bond market was featured by outstanding strength in government bonds. The advance which began early last week continued throughout the week with all maturities closing at new highs for several years.

The Canadian dollar on the other hand, was weaker and finished the week approximately three-quarters of 1 per cent lower than at the same time last week, showing a premium of about 2⅛ per cent over the U.S. dollar.

City To End Ban on Cars

End of White Rule Predicted

The days of unopposed white superiority are finished in Kenya, even though many Europeans have not realized this says former Vancouver labor leader James Bury.

The Africans in Kenya are fed up with treatment they have received from whites and no longer want to remain the hewers of wood and the drawers of water, he says. They want [illegible] as been started in the Gold Coast territory.

Mr Bury resigned from his Vancouver position with the Canadian Congress of Labor union to join the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. During the past 11 months with the ICFTU much of his time has been spent in Kenya, where he has been working with African trade unionist.

Mr Bury's information on Kenya's condition is contained in a letter to friends at Vancouver.

Expressing no sympathy for the Mau Mau Mr Bury adds that he can understand why the organization has made headway among the African population. He says a small European settler group of 40,000 has monopolized all good land in Kenya while 5,000,000 Africans are eking out an existence in native reserves.

Mr Bury adds that despite all opposition, the ICFTU is making some headway by establishing new unions and operating a number of workers schools.

WHEN MEN WERE MEN: This week's Sporting News has an interesting story on Charles "Old Hoss" Radbourne, a fabled pitcher in baseball's early days when the word "Ironman" meant [illegible]

[illegible] then compiled a 41-13 record the following season. But that was as nothing to what he did in 1884. That season he won 60 games and lost 12 and played in the outfield and infield when he wasn't on the mound or "the box" as they called it then. Radbourne pitched 27 games between August 7 and September 18 [illegible] 26 of them, 18 in a row, and followed up by pitching all three games as Providence downed New York Metropolitans, 3-0, in what was then the equivalent of the world series.

[illegible] that effort ruined Radbourne's arm, the story says. The next season he slipped to a 28-21 record and [illegible] won 125 games in his next five seasons. Just goes to show that a fellow shouldn't try to do too much.

HOCKEY RUMORS: Word reaches these ears that Vancouver Canucks this week sought the services of Don Ashbee, [illegible] who had a brief fling with the Cougars earlier this season and is now resident in the city and planning to play [illegible] this summer. It was the second time Ashbee had been approached and the report says he again said "No thanks." [illegible] take over the job as [illegible] moving up as general manager [illegible] The Commercial Hockey League [illegible] when it decided to include all four clubs in the playdowns. It was explained that it was felt that the first-place team wouldn't get enough action [illegible] by while the second and third teams decided the other [illegible] but the leading Nanaimo Clippers were originally scheduled to play [illegible] games while the other clubs were scheduled for [illegible] tonight's game at Memorial Arena between the Cougars and Canucks should be a dandy if [illegible]

REASON FOR BELLIGERENCE: [illegible]

[illegible] sportsman when Bill Okell passed away and this department extends its sympathies to his family.

* * *

IT DOESN'T MAKE SENSE: Big league baseball clubs are hollering about increasing costs but [illegible] A few [illegible] White Sox gave J. W. Porter a $[illegible] bonus to sign a contract. They later traded him to the St. Louis Browns in the deal which brought [illegible] Porter is now the property of the Detroit Tigers and it's reported that the White Sox have offered the Tigers $[illegible] to get their bonus back. [illegible] Lakers and New York Knickerbockers combined to make a [illegible] of [illegible] in a recent pro basketball game [illegible] the [illegible] last report this department had [illegible] disqualification of Mar Clementine in the Santa Anita Maturity last Saturday was the second most costly in racing history. The difference was the difference between win money of $[illegible] and place money of $[illegible] in 1952 however, Intent was disqualified in the Santa Anita Handicap and received place money of $20,000 instead of win money of $104,100 which went to Determine . . . and as Frank McCool said in his column in the Calgary Albertan, there's the amorous fellow who likes to sit and drink rum and coax.

GUESSING DEPARTMENT: Cougars, Flyers and Quakers in tonight's WHL play; Detroit and Boston in the NHL; Heaneys and JBAA in today's Jackson Cup [illegible] and JBAA and Victoria College in today's rugby play. Batting average to date: [illegible] 43 [illegible] percentage [illegible]

KAMLOOPS [illegible] — Tom [illegible] of Victoria [illegible] in a gallant [illegible] the B.C. curling championships and represent [illegible] in the Macdonald's Brier playdowns at Regina next month.

TOUGH LUCK

Gutoski spent Thursday [illegible] needed to win [illegible] to get nothing [illegible] after an extra end.

That gave the Victoria skip two defeats and made it impossible to win [illegible] "A" section [illegible] with [illegible] two games left [illegible]

BY INCHES

Gutoski was forced into the extra end against Ryalls when Ryalls counted one just by an inch or two to tie it in the 12th end. On the extra end Gutoski attempted to count with a draw shot on last rock. It was slightly heavy, went over the tee line and Ryalls, by dint of hard sweeping, managed to coax a [illegible] to give him a counter.

[illegible] Gutoski made it possible for Ryalls to win "A" section [illegible] for the final against the "B" section winner when he ended Miller's unbeaten streak, 8-7, in another 13-ender on the afternoon draw.

Ryalls meanwhile downed Ray Ottem of Kamloops 10-7 for his sixth straight victory that brought things down to the last game against Miller and the Nelson skip won on Friday's late draw, [illegible] Miller's rink was forced to play the last six draws, three Thursday and three Friday without its skip. Miller was unexpectedly called to Victoria on business and was unable to get back in time.

STONE IN PLAYOFF

Ryalls' opponent for the best-of-three final has yet to be decided. Trail's Reg Stone, defeated by Frank Avery of Vancouver, 11-10, in 13 ends in the first draw, won his last six games to tie Avery for the lead in "B" section and force a [illegible] playoff which will be held Saturday morning.

Avery remained undefeated until his last game, winning his fifth and sixth in a row yesterday with successive triumphs over Clarence Larson of [illegible] and Alex Caldwell of Kimberley. Stone stayed alive by edging Nanaimo's Bill Karasla 11-10 after an extra end and trouncing Ray Bowles of Kamloops.

Meanwhile Caldwell eliminated Trail's Art Chesser in the afternoon draw but Chesser gave his fellow townsman Stone a big boost on the late draw by handing Avery his [illegible] 12-8.

After Stone and Avery decide their section winner this morning, the survivor will play Ryalls at 3 and 8 p.m. and if needed at 11 p.m. to decide the B.C. champion.

VICTORIANS SCORE

Play continued in the Kamloops bonspiel while Consols rinks were fighting it out and Victoria rinks kept moving by winning six of the seven games they played.

Max Zabel's foursome had the best time of it by winning three times. Zabel bested Dunbar of the Pioneer Curling Club 9-5 and Bane of Prince George to reach the 16s of "E" event. He followed this with a thrilling 9-8 win over Moyers of Kamloops after trailing, 7-1 after six ends to reach the 16s of "E" event.

Glen Walkey became the first Victoria rink to get into the prize, downing McKinnon of Kamloops 9-8 to reach the semi-finals of [illegible] event. [illegible] Walkey reached [illegible] of "E" event by beating [illegible] of Kamloops 10-7.

Gutoski won and lost in bonspiel play. He was knocked out of "B" event in the quarter-finals when losing for the second time in three games to [illegible] Ross of Trail 12-5. But Gutoski came back to trim Warrington of Bralorne Curling Club 12-2 to reach the 16s in "E" event.

Karasla, who won his first seven games but two more after four straight defeats [illegible] from the Grand Challenge [illegible] to Croft [illegible] in a quarter-final match. Then he lost to Woodlands of Williams Lake 9-7 in the 32s of "E" event.

Football Pools Again Under Attack

BY JEFF RYAN

LONDON (CP)—Britain's football pools, a £61,000,000 business patronized by millions, are under renewed attack.

Complying with legislation passed last year the pools are publishing their accounts. These show, as expected, that the government takes a 30-per-cent ... per cent for expenses and profit. The wagerers get back sixpence of every shilling bet in the form of tax-free prizes ranging from £75,000 down.

Now it has been suggested the pools should contribute to sport or that they might even become government-operated.

HELP SMALLER CLUBS

The southern section of the Third Division of the English Soccer League wants the league to charge the pools £400,000 for the use of the league schedules. These serve as a basis for the pools betting system.

The pools, through the Pool Promoters Association, will fight any such move.

Behind the demand is the financial problem facing smaller clubs of the 92-team English League. Surveys indicate that ... to be paying their way ... faced with competition from television and other entertainment ...

money would be shared out to all teams ... for ground improvements required to add some comforts fans demand in the TV age.

"Sport as a whole is not benefiting as it reasonably might from the pools," says The Times, editorially listing some of the sports improvements that Sweden, Germany, Italy and Finland ... government-run pools.

Says the Yorkshire Post: "Would it be a wise plan to limit the size of prizes and to divert some of the stake money to provide sports training centres, playing fields and the like?"

The Pool Promoters Association argues that it offered the Football League £100,000 annually for three years in 1951 and that this was rejected because the FL didn't want to become connected with the pools.

Any attempt by the FL to copyright its schedule will be resisted in court. Such an attempt was defeated before the Second World War.

However, the question of offering a gratuitous payment to the league was an entirely different matter, an association spokesman said, "which the association would have to consider ..."

Bennett Claims Ottawa Stalling

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said yesterday the federal government had held up the development of the Peace River and is now attempting to delay development of the Kootenays.

The premier was commenting on attacks by Liberal MPs on the proposed Kaiser dam on the [illegible].

Federal Resources Minister Jean Lesage said Thursday in Ottawa that B.C. is selling out its water resources for "peanuts and peanuts that are not even guaranteed."

Premier Bennett said this was another Ottawa attempt "to restrict development of B.C." He said the dam would not mean that any electric power or any more water would cross the border, but it would mean increased rural electrification for the Kootenays.

Under the province's agreement with the Kaiser Aluminum Corp. B.C. [illegible] 20 per cent of additional power generated [illegible] taxes and rentals on the dam.

In the legislature yesterday Anthony Gargrave (CCF Mackenzie) [illegible] Lesage's [illegible]. The minister [illegible] the agreement [illegible] because the [illegible] Federal Power Commission, which [illegible] the power [illegible] The agreement [illegible] Kaiser [illegible].

FARMERS PANICKED

Agriculture Minister Kenneth Kiernan charged that the [illegible] grain [illegible] this winter was [illegible] off [illegible] British Columbia [illegible].

The minister was apparently referring to statements issued by Liberal leader Arthur Laing and CCF leader Arnold Webster when it was evident that heavy fall rains were delaying grain harvests.

He said telegrams and "hastily made statements to the press . . . merely aggravate the situation and are inclined to panic the parties who need facts to lend them security to face the situation confronting them in a logical manner."

The "unfavorable publicity" [illegible] commercial feed sellers to jack up the price a few dollars a ton" and prophecies that whole herds of cattle would have to be sold cut cattle prices by about three cents a pound.

Mr. Kiernan stated, however, that despite some financial difficulties "we should get through this winter without undue difficulty."

He called for some adjustment to the "inequitable tariff arrangement" which makes the tariff on American turkeys imported into Canada about half that on Canadian turkeys shipped to the U.S.

On the question of river bank erosion and land reclamation Mr. Kiernan called for federal participation on major projects to reduce the burden on the people in affected areas.

"Surely if we are [illegible] these works to preserve the land for posterity the federal government should be interested and prepared to participate," he said.

NEGLIGENCE CHARGED

The case of Mrs. Erica Booth, a former resident of the village of Westview who lost her $3,000 home because of a $16.83 delinquent tax bill, was raised again in the house.

Anthony Gargrave (CCF Mackenzie) charged that the incident resulted from "negligence of the revenue department and the attorney general."

The [illegible] in a tax sale because the woman moved to another part of the province and had not received her tax notices.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner's suggestion that she apply "ex gratia" for compensation under the Revenue Act was not good enough, Mr. Gargrave said. He said the government should immediately investigate what happened at the Courtenay tax office and either compensate Mrs. Booth or issue a fiat to allow her to sue the government.

A Liberal MLA predicted the $1 [illegible] charge for hospital [illegible] will be increased by the government to meet swelling hospital costs.

Bruce Brown (Lib. Prince Rupert) said despite claims by [illegible] service's work [illegible] under the new system hospital administrators and doctors are not satisfied. He said if [illegible] was to be [illegible] it should have been [illegible] when premiums were dropped.

He also charged that the government was deceiving the public by claiming a $1,000,000 reduction in administration cost by the abolition of premium collections.

He [illegible] 3 per cent of the sales tax [illegible] Three per cent of the extra $[illegible] brought in by [illegible] the tax to 5 per cent is $[illegible] he said.

The government therefore is saving only $300,000, he said.

Mr. Brown also charged that municipalities will not receive an extra $5,300,000 in grants under the new school formula as indicated in the budget speech last week.

He explained that of the $35,000,000 borrowed by school districts for construction the government is already committed to pay 50 per cent of the principal and interest payments, or $1,250,000.

This amount, he said, is included in the new formula and is therefore not "additional" although it is included in the $5,300,000.

URGES OTTAWA TRIP

A CCF member expressed concern over the "deteriorating relations" of B.C.'s Social Credit government with the federal government.

Anthony Gargrave (CCF Mackenzie) urged Premier Bennett and Lands and Forests Minister Sommers to go to Ottawa to present their case on the Kaiser dam "under the cool scrutiny of hydro experts."

He felt that the [illegible] tawa" did nothing to clarify the situation and caused the provincial government "to circumvent the real purpose of confederation."

Mr. Gargrave said the reason Social Credit government went into the Kaiser dam deal was that because of debt reduction and increased education costs it was "getting panicky and looking around for a quick return."

PARENTS, LOOK BACK

Dr. Larry Giovando (Ind. Nanaimo) said today's youth should not be criticized until a proper survey of its behavior is taken to find out just how bad it is.

Speaking on alcohol consumption in B.C., Dr. Giovando said [illegible] were [illegible] they were the same age.

He said a survey should be [illegible] the proportion of young people [illegible] is higher or lower than it was a generation ago.

'Only Discipline Left'

But Hard on Innocent Man

Victorians 2-to-1 in Favor of Hanging

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

Victorians from all walks of life favor by almost a two-to-one margin the death penalty for premeditated murder and drug peddling—and one angry woman demanded return of the public stocks for lesser crimes.

"The death penalty is the only deterrent left in our modern society," said one man who was expressing the majority opinion of business men, workers and housewives.

A random survey was taken by the Colonist last night after the House of Commons in London voted 245 to 214 to continue capital punishment in Britain despite the emotional appeal of James Chuter Ede, former home secretary, who admitted he may have sent an innocent man to the gallows in 1948.

The Colonist survey showed that Victorians have more definite opinions on the death penalty than they do on the placing of blame for the crisis in the Far East.

In a poll taken Thursday, almost one third of Victorians questioned could not decide if China or the United States was to blame.

No one was undecided about capital punishment.

"Get them out there in the middle of the street with the whip and the stocks," said a receptionist. "The shame of it would not harm some of these teen-aged kids doing all this senseless stuff ... and a man of ..."

"It would have to be in his own town," she added.

"Discipline is deteriorating everywhere else," said the man who stated capital punishment is the only discipline left in modern society.

"Pretty soon the worst you'll get for anything is a slap on the wrist," he said.

"How many murderers are hanged? All you have to do is hire a smart lawyer and you're home free."

Although most lawyers favored the death penalty, one said there is always the possibility that new evidence may be found after a hanging.

"You cannot return that man," he said. "And the mental anguish to him while he waits is extreme cruelty."

A majority of doctors said they felt murder was evidence of abnormal behavior and murderers and drug peddlers should receive life imprisonment as a maximum but almost all workmen opposed this view.

"It's the only way," said a housewife who thought the number of major crimes would decrease if a few more people were punished.

A carpenter put it simply: "They take a life ... they should lose their own."

Another worker, who urged "no mercy," said the murderer knows he is doing wrong but pleads insanity. Such cases, he said, should have the benefit of the opinion of a board of three doctors working with the court but independent of it.

"If he gets life," the worker added, "he gets time off for good behavior and he does it again."

"He will cost the country lives and money all of his life."

A former school teacher favored the death penalty because "there must be something in the background that people fear in order to maintain control."

"It's the same as the school teacher with the strap," she said.

Opponents of the death penalty said it leads to more trouble, in that murderers know they face hanging and "might as well kill again."

Long prison terms were recommended to replace capital punishment.

In London, a hushed House of Commons listened as Chuter Ede said it was he who was ... in the case of Timothy Evans, 25, hanged for murdering his baby, but also charged with slaying his wife.

Five years later John Reginald Christie confessed to the murder of Mrs. Evans and five other women and was hanged.

"I was the home secretary who wrote on Evans' papers 'the law must take its course,'" Chuter Ede said. Although Evans had blamed Christie, the Laborite felt sure Evans was guilty.

If Christie's guilt had been known, "I doubt if they could have found Evans guilty."

Before he sat down, face in hands, he added: "I hope that no future home secretary ... will ever have to feel that although he did his best ... he sent a man who was not guilty as charged to death."

Faster, Faster—In Places

Gaglardi sits behind the wheel of his car in anticipation of the boost in B.C.'s speed limit for certain areas from 50 miles an hour to 60 miles an hour. Mr. Gaglardi and the RCMP have been working together on the plan to increase the limit on certain unrestricted sections of provincial highways.

Polio Drive Next Saturday

Mothers' March Needs 400 More

Four hundred volunteers are needed for the one-hour Mothers' March on Polio in Greater Victoria, one week from today, Victoria officials of the B.C. Polio Fund said last night.

The Vic Van Isle Kinsmen Club, sponsor of the drive, said 2,600 of the 3,000 canvassers required had offered their services.

Areas where assistance is still needed are Gordon Head, including Ten Mile Point and Cadboro Bay, James Bay around the legislative buildings, the area between Fort and Fairfield, Lake Hill, and View Royal.

Club officials said canvasser quotas had been filled in 17 of the 25 districts for the drive, which will be held between 6.30 and 7.30 p.m.

Volunteers should telephone 2-9241 and contributions may be sent to Box 300, Victoria.

Provincial goal of the one-night campaign is $300,000 but no fund quota has been set in this area, where residents oversubscribed a $30,000 drive by $30,000 one year ago.

Young Men Serve Sea

Youth seems to be the keynote aboard the British freighter Hartington, now loading lumber for Portuguese East Africa at the outer wharves. Here two officers show three younger seafarers the certificates they seek. From left to right are Cadet James Pyle, 17, of Hunwick, Durham, on his first trip; Cadet Michael Farley, 18, of Torquay, on his second voyage; Cadet Albert Park, 18, of Preston, on his third trip, Third Mate Leslie Hagreen, 21, of London, and First Mate John Burke Steele, 32, of Cardiff.

Caterpillars To Reach Peak

Incidence of tent caterpillars in Greater Victoria and resultant damage to broad-leafed trees will probably reach a peak this year, according to H. A. Richmond, federal forest biologist for British Columbia.

However, the caterpillars have not been sighted in force to date.

Mr. Richmond gave his report yesterday after identifying insects found in considerable quantities in North Saanich as silver spotted ... which are much less ... than the tent caterpillars.

"PRETTY BAD"

It looks pretty bad from Sooke to Sidney," he said of tent caterpillars. "They are definitely on the increase and infestation is going to be very heavy."

The caterpillars are a "nuisance," he said, because they eat leaves off shade trees and trees in orchards.

However, the trees usually recover without any appreciable damage and there is no damage to fruit or to trees harvested by the lumber industry.

Parasites which are "natural control factors" for the tent caterpillars have not been found yet, but probably will show up this year, Mr. Richmond said.

NEST IN FIRS

Frank Doyle, 3475 Old West Saanich Road, reported yesterday that he found several nests of insects while falling fir trees near his home.

The biologist identified these insects as halisidota, which he said were "very prevalent in certain parts of Vancouver Island last year," and were restricted to fir trees.

But they never caused any damage to speak of and I doubt if they ever will," he said, expecting that there are many parasites to keep the number of ... down.

Planes Getting Radar

New up-to-the-minute radar and electronic gear is now being installed on Lancaster bombers of 407 Maritime Reconnaissance squadron of the Comox RCAF station.

The work is being carried out at the Halifax plant of Fairey Aviation Company.

Wing Cmdr. William McLeod, officer commanding 407 Squadron, has announced that the first operation using the new radar will be flown in March.

Squadron radio officers are now taking a two-week technical course at Whidby Island naval air station in Washington.

The modified Lancasters will be the forerunners of an entirely new kind of anti-submarine aircraft, the CL Britannia, which will ultimately be flown by 407's aircrews.

The modified Britannia is the last word in maritime aircraft. Its new long range will make possible complete trans-Pacific air cover.

The 407 squadron is planning long-range training trips as far south as San Diego, Calif., and north to Alaska.

Dime Shower Totals $7,092

Donations ranging from 50 cents to $100 have helped push the Shower of Dimes for the Queen Alexandra Solarium to $7,092, the Solarium Junior League said last night.

The figure is well ahead of donations at this time one year ago but is far short of the provincial goal of $30,000. Officials hope Greater Victoria will contribute $18,000 to the total.

Recent contributions have included a $100 cheque from a company and a 50-cent piece from an elderly woman pensioner who said, "It's all I can afford but we should all give something."

A league spokesman said receipts and thank you letters are sent to all donors whatever the donation.

Much Work To Be Done

Elk Lake Track Promoters Advised To Postpone Racing

City Solicitor A. I. Patton yesterday advised promoters of the proposed racetrack at Elk Lake to wait until 1956 before making a start on actual racing.

"They thought they might be able to get something going this year," said Mr. Patton after a meeting with racing officials yesterday. "But there is a tremendous amount of work to be done, and I advised them to wait."

Mr. Patton said the city would receive $500 a year ... for the Elk Lake property, which will be leased to the Elk Lake Turf Company for 30 years.

Yesterday Mr. Patton and Mayor Claude Harrison discussed the proposed lease with company president William Lochead and the company solicitor, Victor Dryer of Vancouver.

"We stressed certain points ... They will have to spend a lot of money to make the track an A-1 property," said Mr. Patton.

How much money will have to be spent?

"More than $100,000," said Mr. Patton.

One of the big tasks will be installation of a proper drainage system, according to Mr. Patton. Both the mayor and Mr. Patton were insistent that the drainage scheme be installed before any other major work is started.

The horsemen will not be allowed to fell any of the trees on the property "except those that hinder the track and building construction."

Mr. Patton also said the promoters would "have to make their peace" with Saanich.

"They will have to take care of that on their own," said Mr. Patton.

Later in the day Mr. Lochead ... with ... Saanich ... move to iron out some of the problems.

A bylaw aimed at stopping any track construction without first having council approval was recently passed by Saanich council.

Drydock Crews Rushed

Workmen at the government graving dock in Esquimalt will continue at top speed for almost another week as a parade of ocean-going vessels passes through the drydock.

The British freighter Oakhurst, which entered the drydock yesterday, will leave Monday and will be followed the next day by the Swedish freighter Wangaratta.

Crews will work all week end to repair the rudder of the Oakhurst. Heavy weather between Yokohama and Vancouver wrecked most of the bearings and caused a slight fracture in a rudder pale.

After the Oakhurst goes on to Vancouver, the Wangaratta will enter for a paint and scrape job and will then load ... feet of lumber for Australia. ... Oakhurst, ... the ... ades, drydocked for two weeks.

Fired Pin Injures Boy

The hydrogen-bomb era has heralded the death of the spitball in Victoria.

The soggy paper mass is a thing of the past in elastic band warfare.

Yesterday a Johnson Street mother told city police that her son had been ambushed by a band of youths firing bobby pins. The boy was struck on the cheek.

Police pointed out the danger of firing the metal pins and advocated the return, if necessary, of the "spitball."

Pender Islands Bridge Completed in Month

The long-awaited bridge linking North and South Pender Islands should be opened in approximately a month, Evan Jones, provincial deputy minister of public works, said yesterday.

Pacific Piledriving Co. began construction of the 50-foot timber trestle, which is 25 feet above water, a month ago. Mr. Jones said the $26,000 project is half finished.

A floating piledriver and a scow will be working in the channel between the islands, the department of transport advised mariners yesterday.

Until the end of February, the piledriver will carry two black shapes in a vertical line by day, and two red lights, one over the other, by night.

Herring Scarce, Fishing Closed

Failure to find large bodies of herring in B.C. coastal waters has caused the federal department of fisheries to stop herring fishing from Cape Caution to the Alaska boundary.

Renewal of fishing will be considered if substantial stocks are found by March 10. The department also closed herring fishing in the Queen Charlotte area.

City Hall Employee Puts His Foot in It

One City Hall employee really put his foot in it yesterday. The employee was filing official papers in a reference file in the third floor attic when he stepped on a loose board and his foot went through the ceiling of the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association office. Officials estimated damage at $10.

Empire Day Parade Planners Aim To Please Younger Set

Victoria's Empire Day parade this year will likely be developed along lines to please juveniles.

The Chamber of Commerce parade committee met yesterday to kick around ideas for improving this year's parade and gave strong approval to a plan to make the parade appeal to children under six.

Parents are sympathetic towards their youngsters, and if the youngsters like the parade so will the parents, said Morley Collins of the B.C. Electric Co.

The meeting endorsed a proposal to bring 15 gigantic animated balloons to Victoria to form the main part of the parade.

They will include Snow White's seven dwarfs, Popeye, Olive Oyl, Sweepea and Wimpy, a 30-foot fish, a 30-foot octopus, an 80-foot sea serpent, and an 80-foot dragon.

... costumes and a special costume for Snow White will be included in the display, which will cost about $2,500.

Cyril Wightman and Mr. Collins were named to ask business firms to finance the balloon display.

The committee will encourage other firms to enter floats and other displays, either individually or by groups.

C. M. Neales suggested a beard growing contest. He suggested also that part of the parade be developed to include logger, Indian and story book British themes, which he said are the things visitors look for in Victoria.

The day the parade will be held still poses a problem.

The Chamber of Commerce favors Saturday, May 21, when stores would be open for business. But this plan is far from unanimously supported. The Greater Victoria Celebrations Association is split, some members advocating Saturday and others Monday. The Association will make the final decision.

Cecil Wright, representing the BPO Elks, who will marshall the parade, viewed the question from the police point of view.

If it is held on Saturday, police say it must be confined to Douglas Street from Beacon Hill Park to Bay Street Armory.

A parade on the holiday, Monday, could follow the usual route from Royal Athletic Park to the legislative buildings.

Amputee MP To Speak In Victoria

An Englishman who became a member of parliament despite the loss of both legs during the Second World War will visit Victoria briefly Wednesday.

Richard Wood, youngest son of the Earl of Halifax, will discuss bipartisanship of British foreign policy in a speech to the United Services Institute of Vancouver Island at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Canadian Scottish officers' mess at the Bay Street Armory.

Mr. Wood, who enlisted at 19 at the outbreak of the war, lost both legs during the Alamein campaign in North Africa. He rides, shoots, swims, drives a car and has been an active worker with amputee organizations.

The 27th annual meeting of the USI will be held in the armory at 8.15 p.m. February 25.

Around the World on $14

Two can travel as cheaply as one is the motto of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Houston. Tom, a graduate of Oxford University, England, set out to see the world with only $14 in his wallet. He flew across the Atlantic with a cargo of horses, washed dishes in New York, shovelled snow in Montreal, then in Toronto, he said to himself "Why not?" and wired his fiancee in England [illegible] to join him. Immediately after their marriage they were on their way on a vague itinerary that will lead them through the U.S., South America, Mexico, Japan and whatever other country that appeals to them.—(Central Press Canadian)

TV Talk

— BY ROY PARRETT

Tonight is the night for movie fans. The annual Academy Award Nominations will be announced at the film capitol will be seen here, via KOMO-TV, for the first time.

NBC-TV is going to have a battery of cameras, and a small army of technicians, on hand to cover the event in the studios and in Hollywood night spots, as the outstanding movie personalities of the year are chosen.

Jack Webb and Bob Hope will emcee the 90-minute program, which will include interviews with most of the stars nominated for awards. Scenes from pictures nominated for "Oscars" will also be shown.

★ ★ ★

Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, who won't be seen at the nominations tonight, begins his fourth year of telecasting today. He is still TV's only one-man, half hour show. His "Life Is Worth Living" series appears on local screens three times each week.

Besides presenting an inspirational message, Bishop Sheen entertains, too. Here are some of his recent quips:

"It would be wonderful if tax collectors would treat us as they do when they shave—stop when they get to the skin.'

"An economist is one who reads the menu from right to left — who has a Phi Beta Kappa key on his watch chain but no watch."

"No crisis ever creates havoc. It merely discloses it."

History of the State of Texas is good viewing on KOMO-TV at 2 p.m. today as the story of Sam Houston is told on "Man of Conquest," starring Richard Dix and Joan Fontaine.

Elephant hunting is Smilin' Ed's story for the kiddies on KING-TV at 2:30.

Andersne's Fairy Tale about "the Goblin and the Grocer" is the KINT-TV feature, also at 2:30.

Disneyland features two cartoons "The Reluctant Dragon" and "Mr. Toad," on CBUT at 5:30.

". . . And how long have you been playing basketball?"

The Academy Award Nominations will be seen on KOMO-TV at 6. The Hollywood proceedings will likely crowd Imogene Coca and George Gobel off of channel 4, for tonight only.

Vancouver actor Juan Root will star in a Canadian story, "Night in Harbor," a tense drama of the recent war, and action on Canada's east coast. Movie of the Month on KOMO-TV at 9 is "Caught" with James Mason and Barbara Bel Geddes. It is the story of a waitress who marries a millionaire, and who has cause to regret it.

Candlelight Theatre is showing an Australian picture, "Two Lost Worlds," at 9:30, on KVOS-TV.

Cary Grant stars in "Amazing Adventure" on KING-TV at 10:45.

Dorothy Lamour and George Montgomery are seen in "Girl From Manhattan," on channel 1 at 11.

Yalta Records Still Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) This 10th anniversary of the climax of the Yalta conference arrived with no new word from the United States state department as to when it will publish the secret records of those top-level talks.

It was at Yalta that the victorious Allies were supposed to [illegible]

The conference has been the subject of bitter political recrimination as well as harsh words between the U.S. and Russia over precisely what was agreed to.

DATES PUT BACK

The state department said it expected to begin publishing the record of the Yalta conference in late 1954. October, the original target date, came and went. So did December, the substitute date.

Then it was believed that the 10th anniversary might unveil the volume. Now officials say high policy decisions must first be made. No new target has been disclosed.

Delays in publishing the Yalta record — expected to be followed by publication of other hitherto secret accounts of similar wartime meetings — is attributed to an underestimate of the work involved.

MPs PROTEST

In London, [illegible] members of parliament have [illegible] protest against the Yalta agreement [illegible] of that wartime conference.

[illegible] group of Conservative and Labor MPs declares in a letter to The Times:

"We [illegible] cannot allow the 10th anniversary [illegible] to pass without drawing the attention of our fellow countrymen to the tragic way in which events have [illegible] our vows upon that occasion.

"This country took up arms in 1939 in defense of the freedom of Poland. Though we emerged victorious from the war Poland is still enslaved and Poland is an essential part of a free Europe.

NO SURETY

"We believe that whatever may be the outcome of [illegible] there can be no surety [illegible] from fear until the states of central and eastern Europe which now groan under the tyranny of Soviet domination have regained their liberty.

"What happened at Yalta has come to be accepted as the inevitable outcome of an act of power. We cannot underwrite it as an act of justice."

New Vessel To Be Built For Ferry Run

Competition for the Gulf Islands ferry franchise, which the provincial government will open for bids at the end of this year, became more intense with news yesterday that Coast Ferries Limited will construct a new vessel for the run.

BRIDGE QUIZ

When your partner has given you a jump raise in your opening bid in a major suit, it is a strong but limited bid. You are forced to bid again, and by the nature of your bid you must indicate whether or not you are interested in further exploring slam possibilities. In making this decision you will be aided by the simple "rule of the ace and the king." With a balanced hand you need about an ace more than a minimum bid to go exploring; with an unbalanced hand (including a void or singleton) you need about a king more than the minimum. Putting it another way, your partner's jump takeout may be made on a hand of approximately 13 to 16 points, counting distributional points, so if you have 17 or more and your hands afford a good fit, you may have a slam.

Partner raises your opening bid of one heart to three hearts. The opponents remain silent throughout. What is your next bid with each of the following hands?

♠ A 4 3
♥ A K 9 8 5
♦ J 5 4
♣ 7 6

(b)
♠ K 4 3
♥ A K 10 9 8
♦ K Q 5 4
♣ 7

(c)
♠ A 4 3
♥ A K 10 7 5
♦ A J 5
♣ 7 6

♠ 6 2
♥ K 9 8
♦ A 10 5 4
♣ K 7 6

(e)
♠ Q 7 2
♥ A Q 9 8
♦ K Q 10 2
♣ K 4

(f)
♠ 7
♥ A Q 9 7 6
♦ K Q J 5 4
♣ A 2

Answers to Bridge Quiz

(a) Four hearts. If partner has bid correctly, there is no chance of a slam in your combined hands. It may be argued that it is just as cheap to show the ace of spades in passing as to bid four hearts, but your hand includes too many losers to afford partner any encouragement.

(b) Four diamonds. You have a full king better than a minimum bid and an unbalanced hand. Therefore you are entitled to make a slam try. With a couple of aces and a good fit in partner's hand you may have an excellent play for slam, but the play will depend upon how well the hands mesh.

(c) Three spades. Your hand is an ace better than the first example shown, so you show your interest in a slam by cue-bidding your cheapest ace. Note that in this bidding the ace of spades is "cheaper" than the ace of diamonds. If you were to bid four diamonds you would inferentially deny the ace of spades.

(d) Four hearts. Note that the hand is a king, not an ace, better than a minimum bid. [illegible] Hence you are not interested in a slam. But if you bid four diamonds your partner would consider it an expression of interest in bigger things. Since you cannot bid three no-trump with a wide-open spade suit, you raise your four-card suit to game. Partner's jump response shows you have adequate support for a [illegible].

(e) Three no-trump. With this hand you should have opened the bidding with one no-trump instead of one heart. But your 17 points, in conjunction with partner's minimum of 13, [illegible]

(f) Four no-trump. If partner has two aces you will bid five no-trump asking about his kings. With two kings you can assume that one is the king of hearts and bid for the grand slam. If you do not use the Blackwood four-five no-trump convention, your rebid over three hearts should be four [illegible]

Archivist Addresses Engineers

Victoria's Harbor Trouble Goes Back as Far as 1860s

Victoria has had harbor trouble as far back as the 1860's, said Willard Ireland last night.

The most modern dredging equipment of that time was brought from England to carry out what were considered necessary improvements, he stated.

Mr. Ireland, provincial librarian and archivist, was addressing a joint meeting of the Island branches of the B.C. Engineering Society and the Engineering Institute of Canada.

The Fraser River gold rush in 1858 opened up B.C., he told his audience.

Before then there were little more than about 500 persons living on Vancouver Island.

Mr. Ireland threw a gentle barb at George I. Warren, head of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

"This is hard for Mr. Warren to believe," said Mr. Ireland, "but I presume the climate must have changed or maybe there were no seagulls to follow."

ROAD FEATS

He paid tribute to 165 members of the Royal Engineers brought out from England for much of the province's early engineering feats.

Mr. Ireland pointed out that they built six of the most difficult miles of a Fraser Canyon highway for only $17,000.

"The monument to these men is laid out on the land of this province," he said.

Pioneer Camp Being Built

Thetis Island is ringing to the sound of picks and shovels as Camp Pioneer Pacific is being built.

The summer holiday camp is being sponsored by the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, an interdenominational organization that has already built three camps in Ontario and one in Manitoba.

The purpose is to provide a summer holiday for boys and girls under mature Christian leadership.

An unidentified B.C. citizen donated the 67-acre campsite at Thetis Island.

Dignified Shelley Winters Forsakes Brawn for Brain

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Shelley Winters, who strives to be dignified these days, has changed her mind about men. She now goes for intellect, not muscles.

This change of heart is part of the new Winters program to be more mature, [illegible] and not to discuss her private life.

"I get very bored with I go out with young [illegible]," she [illegible] the [illegible]. "The men I find attractive now are men who are intellectually stimulating who sound [illegible]. Many of them are physically attractive too, but their physical appearance has nothing to do with my list.

"I'm getting old, I guess," she continued, "but it seems to me the most attractive thing in a man is that he knows his job well, be he a director, painter or plumber. It's that assurance that projects in a person and makes him attractive."

George Stevens, for example, "very professional, and most attractive."

Shelley's list also includes film composer Franz Waxman, Adlai Stevenson, actor-director Charles Laughton ("very poetic") and director Nick Ray (her current escort—"very fine director, very adept at discussion on any subject.")

Bid Tops $10,500,000

Eastern Financier Buys Globe, Mail

TORONTO (CP)—R. Howard Webster, an unassuming 45-year-old Montreal business man, Friday night became the owner of The Globe and Mail, Canada's largest morning newspaper.

His bid was one of 12 considered by executors of the [illegible] and was considerably in excess of $10,500,000, although the exact figure was not announced.

It was the largest transaction in Canadian newspaper history and doubtless one of the largest on record anywhere.

Announcement of the purchase was made to The Globe and Mail staff by Mr. Webster from Montreal. He said he planned no changes.

WIDE HOLDINGS

Mr. Webster is the son of the late Sen. Lorne C. Webster of Montreal. The Webster family has extensive holdings in the United States, including Detroit's tallest skyscraper, the 47-story Penobscot Building, worth about $17,500,000.

Mr. Webster said he bought The Globe and Mail for himself alone.

An extremely self-effacing man, Mr. Webster declined a request by The Globe and Mail for his picture to be published in connection with the announcement.

SURPRISE BIDDER

His purchase of the newspaper, whose circulation is [illegible], was a surprise. His name had not been mentioned in advance speculation. He decided to bid for the paper only this week.

In a brief message to the newspaper staff the financier said:

"I have no intention of any changes. I hope they will all stay with me and that together we [illegible] a [illegible]

"I feel that I am very lucky to get the newspaper," he said. "It is the very best newspaper in Canada."

LEFT A FORTUNE

Mr. Webster, 45, is one of five children of Senator Webster who died in 1941 leaving a fortune that included large holdings in oil, wells, banks, [illegible], and business firms.

The family is the principal stockholder in the Eversharp Schick Co. and has other extensive holdings in the United States.

Shuffle Ruffles Producers' Setup

NEW YORK (UP)—The producers of a forthcoming musical comedy on Russia life took the pictures of Georgi Malenkov down from the walls of their set yesterday and replaced him with dead comrade Nikolai Lenin.

Co-producer Ernest Martin said Malenkov's pictures had been substituted earlier for those of the late Josef Stalin, who died after completion of the script for the show, Silk Stockings.

"We've come to the conclusion that Premier Bulganin's chances of outlasting our show are 8 to 5 against," Martin said. "We just can't afford to gamble on these guys any more."

Hoist Motion Killed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Friday night defeated by a vote of 118 to 14 a Social Credit attempt to kill legislation giving the government tighter control over use of international river waters.

Only Fernand Gourd (Bellechasse) Lapointe supported the Social Credit group.

The Liberal, Progressive Conservative and CCF groups voted solidly against the proposal of Solon Low, social credit leader. Tuesday the legislation [illegible] passed. This would have killed the measure for this session.

Social Credit had been fighting tooth and nail against the measure which, it claims, is an invasion of provincial rights.

A technicality prevented the [illegible] Friday night. [illegible] to give the bill second reading approval on principle. But each member [illegible] the house [illegible] and [illegible] the measure.

RETURN TO BILL

John Diefenbaker (PC—Lethbridge), acting speaker, ruled Mr. Low's amendment. After the vote on this [illegible] Red Deer returned to the bill itself.

The [illegible] motion was the second Mr. Low proposed Friday night.

He first moved that the bill be referred to a federal-provincial conference for consideration before it receives second reading.

This proposal was ruled out of order by Speaker Rene Beaudoin.

The [illegible] the government's balance [illegible] British Columbia [illegible] construction and the Kaiser Corp. to build a water storage dam on the Lower Arrow Lakes in B.C.

WASTE OF RESOURCES

The federal government claims the project is a waste of B.C. water resources and jeopardizes future plans for hydro power projects in the Columbia River basin.

The legislation now before the Commons would enable the government to block the project.

Social leader Low said the bill should be withdrawn until the federal and B.C. governments can get together on the issue.

Race Track Near Sidney Wins Zoning Approval

Plan for New Fair Gets Little Support

BY ALEC MERRIMAN

Approval was given last night for the rezoning of Sandown Park, on the Patricia Bay Highway near Sidney, for a commercial horse racing track.

In bringing down its decision following a public hearing, the board of appeal for the North Saanich regulated area said: [illegible]

William Randall, president of Colwood Park Limited, owner of Sandown track, said last night contracts will be let as soon as final word is received from the minister of municipal affairs.

[illegible]

Mr. Randall said it is doubtful [illegible] to be completed in time for the planned race meet between May 22 and June 6. He said that a meet would be held at Sandown in September.

Considerable support for horse racing at Sandown was [illegible] last night by North Saanich residents during the public hearing.

But they were cool to a proposal to hold a Class A fair on the same site, claiming that the present 87-year-old North and South Saanich Agricultural Society fair adequately served the Sidney, North Saanich, Central Saanich and Saanich area.

More than 200 residents crowded a room of the North Saanich High School for the public hearing.

There was standing room only and a dozen persons had to stand outside the door to listen to the proceedings.

A W. [illegible] spokesman for the Saanich Village Community [illegible] said the proposal that will probably be presented at Sandown [illegible] would bring big revenues for the district.

He pointed to the benefits Sidney and district would get from the track, including $100,000 to be spent on construction, a year-round payroll, and money coming in from Victoria and Vancouver during race meets.

Efforts for Peace Centre in London

LONDON (Reuters)—Intensive diplomatic efforts behind the scenes to avert a major war in the Formosa Straits centred in London Friday following exploratory talks in Moscow and at United Nations headquarters.

Foreign secretary Mr. Anthony Eden [illegible] Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov.

It was understood that a Soviet proposal a week ago for an international conference outside the UN on the Formosa crisis dominated Friday's discussions.

Tachens Wreckage Abandoned to Reds

TAIPEI (UP)—The Tachen Islands, burned and blasted, were abandoned to the Chinese Communists today.

The last members of an American naval party left the islands at midnight Friday after completing the demolition of military installations on the former Nationalist outposts off the shore of Red China.

Only an hour before, the last Nationalist soldiers boarded an American vessel to complete the evacuation of Nationalist troops and civilians from the islands 200 miles north of Formosa.

In Washington, the state department announced the American naval and air forces had completed their work in the evacuation and had now withdrawn. They were expected to resume their normal operations in Formosa waters.

The forces estimated installations which cost the American taxpayers at least $[illegible] were blown up. Left to go were some American-built hospital and port will be also [illegible] waterworks.

Pflimlin Set To Attempt Government

PARIS (Reuters) — Pierre Pflimlin agreed Friday night, after a busy day of political soundings, to accept the task of trying to form France's 23rd postwar government.

The left-reserved premier-designate is expected to present his new cabinet to the National Assembly for approval Monday or Tuesday in order to get the government of Premier Mendes-France.

Pflimlin spent most of the week to try to form a government, announced his decision through a spokesman before giving his official acceptance to President Rene Coty.

Pflimlin went through a trying day featured by a rebuff from the powerful Socialist Party, strongest single party in the assembly. Although he had been conceded only a 50-50 chance of success, he gamely continued his talks with party leaders in search of support for a broadly-based coalition.

CBC Dispute Progressing

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor department troubleshooters Friday stepped into the CBC's strike-threatening dispute with its technicians' union and Friday night indicated progress toward averting a radio-TV walkout.

"I hope we will get pretty far tomorrow," said M. M. Maclean, head of the industrial relations division, after a day of long separate discussions.

He said he will confer again today with the CBC and probably also with the union negotiating committee.

No Pledge by U.S. Nationalist Admits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitter tempest of words subsided somewhat Friday after the Chinese Nationalist foreign minister, George Yeh, backed away from any claim that the United States is pledged specifically to defend Quemoy and the Matsus.

Remarks Yeh made Thursday after a call on state secretary Dulles were interrupted as a Nationalist had obtained a U.S. commitment to defend Quemoy, the Matsus and other offshore islands now occupied by Nationalists.

Newspaper men understood him to say that a U.S. pledge to protect positions deemed necessary for the defense of Formosa "of course includes Quemoy and the Matsus."

But the Chinese minister said Friday he never intended to leave that impression.

The United States, he said in clarification, will decide whether the offshore islands are to be treated as essential to the defense of Formosa and the Pescadores.

Neither the defend Formosa resolution passed by Congress last month nor the U.S.-Formosa mutual defense treaty, approved by the Senate Wednesday, named any territory other than Formosa and the Pescadores.

But the resolution states that President Eisenhower may use U.S. military power to defend "related positions" in other words, offshore island if he deems them necessary for the ultimate defense of Formosa.

Simple Family Affair for 2,500

Bluebloods Fill Village for Royal Nuptials

PRINCE ALEXANDER

CASCAIS, Portugal (UP) — The bluebloods of Europe took over this Portuguese fishing village yesterday as they assembled for the royal wedding of the year.

Princess Maria Pia of Italy and Prince Alexander of Yugoslavia whose famous ancestors battled, bled and bartered a throne between them, will be married by the parish priest at noon today in the tiny village church.

It will be a "simple family wedding" with about 2,500 guests.

The ceremony itself, which will take place in a 300-year-old church that holds only 600 persons. Most of the guests will have to stand outside, mingling with fishermen and their families who will be among the uninvited spectators.

Since there is no palace around the parties which go with a wedding of such calibre are being held at the nearby Hotel Estoril, a popular tourist haven here on the "Portuguese Riviera."

The former kings, princes and dukes and the socially acceptable commoners who received invitations raised glasses in a toast last night honoring the bride and bridegroom, who arrived a couple of days ago by car from France.

Prince Alexander, 30, who is a six-foot, three-inch former airline pilot, plans to take his bride on a honeymoon trip to Madeira before returning to Paris and his job with a navigation company.

Princess Maria Pia, 20, eldest child of exiled King Umberto of Italy, recently finished a language and stenographic course at a school in Geneva.

Their romance began last summer on the royal Mediterranean cruise of the yacht Agamemnon, where they were among the many titled guests of the king of Greece.

The wedding guests here include the British Duchess of Kent, her daughter Alexandra and her son the Duke of Kent. Don Juan, pretender to the Spanish throne, the Count of Paris, pretender to the throne of France, and Archduke Franz Joseph of Austria.

None of Europe's reigning monarchs are to be present, but most of them are represented.

About 1,000 of the invitations were sent to Italians drawn mostly from the monarchist movement in Italy. While the political implications of the wedding were soft-pedalled, leaders of the monarchist movement hoped it would help cement the rifts which have developed in their party in recent years.

Ex-King Umberto, having as hectic a time as any father of the bride, said he chose Cascais for the wedding because it reminds him of an Italian village.

To give the wedding a "democratic" tone, he announced that "all Italians who have come to see the wedding" would be admitted to an open house tonight at the Estoril.

It will be a big day for Cascais villagers, for there will be two weddings at the Church of Our Lady of the Assumption. Before the princess and her prince exchange vows, a Cascais stonecutter, Eusebia Gonçalves, and his 19-year-old sweetheart, Maria Manuela Lourenco, will be married by the same priest.

Britain at Odds with Stand

U.S. Refuses To Appease Reds With Nationalist Island Chain

Little Hope Seen To End Fighting

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told Britain that it is out of the question to surrender any Nationalist-held coastal islands to the Chinese Communists merely on the hope of inducing the Reds to stop fighting.

[illegible]

Some U.S. officials fear this notification was the beginning of British pressure to get the United States to induce Nationalist China to turn more and more of the islands over to the Reds.

[illegible]

LONG WAY OFF

But any such deal now appears to be a long way off. [illegible] officials said that [illegible] United States considers that the Matsus and perhaps other off-shore islands to be strategically important to the defence of Formosa.

Some days ago Premier Chou En-lai of Red China was reported in dispatches from London to have let it be known that while he would not negotiate a formal cease-fire, he would accept one if the Chinese Nationalists would get out of all the coastal islands.

[illegible] officials said privately that under this proposal the free world would be supposing Chou would be [illegible] without check by [illegible] on Formosa.

Differences between London and Washington over the Quemoy-Matsu issue have become potentially more serious [illegible] that the evacuation of the Tachen Islands far to the north has been completed.

Talks Avert Strike Action By CBC Men

OTTAWA (CP)—A strike of CBC radio and television technicians was averted late Saturday when negotiators reached a basis of settlement in the contract dispute.

A joint announcement by the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians [illegible] the negotiators agreed to get to [illegible] the [illegible] the corporation.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

The announcement was made at the joint department heads' headquarters by Arthur Lapointe, CBC industrial relations chief, and Timothy J. O'Neill, the union's national vice-president.

The two officials headed the negotiation teams which met for several hours Saturday and Sunday in the presence of labor department conciliators.

After the joint statement was issued a CBC spokesman said there remain a few details to be ironed out but that this is expected to be done today or Monday.

NO STATEMENTS

Pending negotiation of the remaining details, representatives of the CBC and the union have agreed to make no further statements concerning what will be in the contract.

The often-adjourned negotiations between the two disputants resumed after top officials of both sides met separately with labor department officers.

The strike could have crippled CBC radio and TV broadcasting but the CBC stated it had made plans to carry on with a reorganized and part-time service.

The union claimed and the CBC denied that it had obtained a copy of the corporation's plan for continuing operations during a strike.

O'Neill said the point involved a deal with another union for strike-breaking.

Southern New Brunswick Hit By Driving, Rain-Lashed Gale

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A rain-lashed gale raked southern New Brunswick with winds gusting to 90 miles an hour Saturday, leaving scenes reminiscent of Hurricane Edna's ravages last September.

The storm formed suddenly over the New England states and moved across the border with little warning, tearing down hydro wires and disrupting communications.

Thirty head of cattle had to be destroyed when a barn collapsed before the battering winds at nearby Lancaster. Near Moncton, a 50-foot brick chimney crashed atop a glass greenhouse and winds ripped a porch roof from a house and planted it high in a tree.

Power failures were general throughout southern New Brunswick and almost half the telephone lines from Saint John were down. Police roped off the downtown plant of the New Brunswick Power Commission when winds snapped lines leading from the building.

HIGHWAY FLOODED

A foot of water flooded the Moncton Highway near here and high seas on the Bay of Fundy kept the Digby-St. John ferry Princess Helene tied up at her pier.

Live wires fell across a factory in Moncton starting five minor fires and causing $500 damage.

Nova Scotia was caught in the fringe of the storm, but winds gusted to 65 miles an hour at Shearwater naval air station, near Halifax.

The 16,000-ton Greek liner Nea Hellas manoeuvred about the harbor for three hours before pilots could tie her up.

BING CROSBY

HOLLYWOOD (U.P.)—Judy Garland, Grace Kelly, Jane Wyman, Audrey Hepburn and Dorothy Dandridge were nominated last night for the annual "Oscar" award as "Best Actress of 1954."

The workers of movieland also named their five choices for best actor, best motion picture and "best" of everything else that goes into making screen plays.

Nominated for the "Best Actor" award, to be handed out with the other "Oscars" by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences March 30, were:

Marlon Brando, the tough dock worker of "On the Waterfront"; Bing Crosby, the has-been singer who loses himself in alcohol in "The Country Girl"; Humphrey Bogart, the tyrannical "Captain Queeg" of "The Caine Mutiny"; Dan O'Herlihy, who played the title role in "Robinson Crusoe," and James Mason, the alcoholic actor who commits suicide in "A Star Is Born."

Miss Wyman played the doctor's wife in "Magnificent Obsession," the 1954 version of the bestseller of the 1930s. Miss Kelly attempted to save Crosby in "The Country Girl." Miss Garland was the unknown girl who rose to stardom in "A Star Is Born," and Miss Hepburn was the chaperon of four's daughter in love with her father's employer in "Sabrina."

Miss Dandridge, the first Negro nominated for a "Best Actress" award, played the cigarette girl in "Carmen Jones."

The five best movies were: "Caine Mutiny," from the best-selling stage play about a mutiny aboard a U.S. destroyer escort vessel; "On the Waterfront," the tough story of labor racketeering on the docks; "The Country Girl," from Clifford Odets's story of the alcoholic singer who is a has-been; "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a backwoods musical; "Three Coins in the Fountain," the story of three girls in Italy seeking romance.

Five film beauties were nominated for best supporting actress of last year. They were Jan Sterling, Eva Marie Saint, Claire Trevor, Nina Foch, and Katy Jurado.

"On the Waterfront" walked off with three of the five nominations for the Best Supporting Actor role as Lee J. Cobb, Karl Malden and Rod Steiger on the ballot for the finals. The other two nominees were Tom Tully, for his work in "The Caine Mutiny," and Edmond O'Brien, who played in "The Barefoot Contessa."

The nominees were unveiled with all the splendor of a big Hollywood premiere on a lavish television show and nominee parties in plush Hollywood eateries.

It was the first time in the academy's 27-year-old history that film-ville made a big event out of the nominations. In the past the production has made only on the final announcement of the winners to be made this year on March 30.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

THE heart has had its time. You'll still find it on some Valentine cards, true, but it's dated. In the cant language of art and literary critics, it isn't contemporary.

Physiologists long ago exploded the idea that the heart is the seat of the emotions. But popular knowledge, as usual, lags behind science.

[illegible] some other internal organ—perhaps the liver. It would be more appropriate for this bilious age.

We moderns are great ones for dispelling myths and illusions. So we should be prepared to receive Valentine cards bearing a picture of the spleen, or perhaps the vermiform appendix.

You know that proverb about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach? Well, it's old hat. The girls aren't interested in reaching a man's heart any more. They know that even if they do get there, they won't find anything more exciting than some auricles and ventricles, and a couple of valves, corroded around the hinges by nicotine.

Nobody wants to go on a tedious pilgrimage through the vital organs these days. Contemporary Valentines therefore are likely to carry pictures of the stomach itself.

For funny Valentines, they will have pictures of a diaphragm contorted with hiccoughs.

Valentines for "that special Somebody" will carry a cross-sectional micrograph of a ganglion being activated by a nerve impulse—of the kind which in former days was described by the quaint title of "Love."

Recently I heard a little girl reciting one of those playground rhymes, which usually are said with ever-increasing speed to accompany the movement of a skipping rope.

I can't remember the verses now, but they were long and distinctly gamey. The little girl said them in a gabble, looking pleased with herself and obviously not understanding what the verses meant.

In fact the verses had no meaning in the literal sense, but they conjured up a swarm of images, many of them strongly unpleasant.

They might well have been written by Ezra Pound or T. S. Eliot, except that the verses were probably old before Mr Pound and Mr Eliot were born.

It is a curious process—the handing down of such verses from one age-group to another, until generations have passed. Learned and very dull books could be written about playground rhymes.

Teachers would have an easier job if little girls applied themselves as fervently to lessons as they do to memorizing a skipping-rope song.

Expense-Sharing Caravan Holiday Turns Out To Be Happy Honeymoon

The author, a Canadian who from being a minister of the Gospel became King of the Safecrackers in the United States, now lives quietly among us on Vancouver Island. He concludes his story in Chapter 24 today.

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

[illegible]

The next day, I thought a lot about my visitor and her offer. Oddly, I found that both my interest in her as a person, and my determination not to sell the caravan, increased with the passing hours.

By the time she returned, next evening, I was quite determined to reject her offer even if she was ready to pay my full price.

We exchanged greetings and she entered the caravan, smiling all the while. In her, too, I sensed an increased interest both in myself and in the caravan. It was a bit of a surprise when she said, in a moment:

"I'm afraid the price of the caravan is beyond me."

This was what I'd wanted to hear, but yet as I started to disparage myself off above the counter, I stopped and listening as I talked, she made a suggestion.

"Since I'm not able to buy the caravan, I wondered if you'd consider its travelling under me? We could share the overall expenses on a 50-50 basis. You could sleep in the caravan I on a cot in a tent outside, because I'm used to roughing it.

"You seem to be a clean-living, tidy person with a liking for outdoor life, camping and fishing. My interests are the same. I'm alone, you are alone, we both need companionship, so why shouldn't we get along?"

The proposition left me speechless for awhile. Then, thinking it over and watching her all the time, I said:

"Perhaps we could arrange such a business deal. When would you like to start?"

She had some personal matters to settle, but could be ready in about a month. I said I'd think her plan over and let her know. She gave me her name (Amelia will do for here) and address as I departed with my name and my bank address, where I received all my mail.

Lying in bed that night sleep evaded me altogether as I mulled over Amelia's suggestion. Finally, in the middle of the night I rose, got my typewriter, and wrote her a letter accepting the whole idea.

[illegible] to bind our agreement. Four days of planning followed as we made ready for our journey.

One major question battered both of us. What should be our attitude or explanation to others, for our being together? Should I masquerade as her older brother, as her father, as her husband?

For myself I was not only certain that Amelia was a [illegible] woman with [illegible] character.

A few days went by in which we considered all the angles, then we found ourselves both slyly hinting that, from a social standpoint as well as from our personal feelings, marriage would be the logical thing.

A toast sealed our compact, and we proceeded at once with detailed planning. Defying convention and superstition we decided to be married Friday, April 13, 1951. The ceremony was performed by a commissioner of the marriage license bureau and without fanfare we started on our honeymoon with [illegible] backs as the first stop.

Our itinerary, with fishing for me and scenery for Amelia's painting in mind, had been drawn up for me by Vancouver's Provincial Travel Bureau. We were never disappointed.

From Spanish Banks we went up into the interior—over the Hope-Princeton highway—with stops at Hornet Lake and many other places where we fished and explored widely.

We were away about six months, making friends all along the way, among white people and Indians alike, residents and other tourists included.

That winter we lived in the caravan in Vancouver, then in the spring traded it for a [illegible] Surrey. Amelia and I got busy with the cottage, repairing and decorating it, and within a few weeks sold it for almost double the value of our trade.

Our next home was at Cove Cliff in North Vancouver, but we grew restless there. Amelia found our caravan again, and repurchased it for half-price. Rebuilding our wheeled home, we set out again, this time on a tour of Vancouver Island.

In November 1952 we settled here at Courtenay, where we both like the people, the town and the fishing. Selling the old caravan, we bought a cottage by the river.

We're content and happy—and we're looking another caravan to take care of the next urge to wander.

Reformed Criminal Urges:

Prohibit Pistols To Curb Crime

Views of an ex-criminal on the outlawing of revolvers are expressed in this article by a native of Canada who became King of the Safecrackers in the United States, paid for his wrongdoing in prison, and now lives on Vancouver Island.

BY HERBERT EMERSON WILSON

"This is a stick-up!"

How often are heard of these words used by some pistol-whipping punk when he enters the store of an unprotected and frightened merchant.

If I were a politician I'd introduce a bill to do away with the revolver, the instrument of destruction, the all-powerful menace that encourages hoodlums as well as professional crooks to carry on their nefarious rackets.

Revolvers have always been and now are the main disturbance of society's equilibrium [illegible] keeping the law-abiding citizens terrified at highest tension. [illegible] of the [illegible] and women, [illegible] and taxi cabs, [illegible] premises and [illegible] pedestrians on the streets.

A bill prohibiting the sale, use or ownership of revolvers should, in my opinion, apply to all firearms less than standardized rifle and shotgun length.

Moreover, the main difficulty of any revolvers [illegible] would make it rather difficult for the wearer to simulate a real revolver.

The gunman stripped of his [illegible] would be [illegible] criminal.

The paramount purpose of possession of revolvers which [illegible] criminal helpless, but to impress on the mind of the potential criminal the [illegible] of crime.

There are tremendous inroads being made yearly by suicide. Here, also, the principal weapon used is the revolver. Think of the many precious lives that might be saved if there were no revolvers at hand!

When a criminal gunman or racketeer has been arrested and convicted, the penalty meted out to the criminal is [illegible] if he will. For most year of [illegible] keep prison [illegible] the taxpayer [illegible] pay about $500 for the [illegible] plus the cost of prison personnel.

What would be the reaction of the public if they, as individuals, were to receive from the government a bill for $500 every year just before Christmas for the upkeep of some petty racketeer [illegible] Penitentiary, [illegible] House?

[illegible] does not [illegible] in Canada that [illegible] and all be [illegible] of some committed in [illegible] because of a revolver [illegible] in the hand of a robber.

[illegible] of a revolver is a potential murderer.

The criminal is ever ready to murder for his own self protection in the event of a [illegible] the [illegible] criminal during [illegible] or [illegible] not infrequently commits murder, because a revolver is ready to his hand.

Aside from the legitimate use police officers make of revolvers, what good are they? They are useless.

A bill prohibiting revolvers is greatly needed to turn the tide of atrocious and petty crimes being committed throughout Canada. It would be [illegible] and these all the most reasonably sure remedy for the greatest evil to which the Canadian people have ever been subjected.

Zoning Without Tears

THERE can be few communities on the North American Continent that have more tangible reasons than Victoria to regret haphazard and uncontrolled land use in the early stages of their development. This city was three-quarters developed and with 90 per cent of its civic services in before any sincere effort was made to plan for the future, with zoning as one means of control. Unfortunately those elementary efforts were nullified in considerable measure by inconstant changes in the zoning pattern. That has led to today's situation wherein the original zoning by-law has to be scrapped, and a wider and more comprehensive measure tried in its stead.

In two directions last week members and officials of the City's advisory planning commission made something of their purpose plainer. Objections over suggested James Bay revisions were met factually; while an outline speech before a local service club stated the aims. The commission came out well from both experiences, which will be followed in the case of James Bay with a public meeting to thresh out the difficulties encountered.

It is not zoning, but the continual change of zoning classifications which has caused most of the trouble in Victoria. Before they invest people have a right to know the range of property uses involved in their choice. It is variation afterwards that jumbles up plans, confuses the public and finally leads to specific grievances. Guarantees do not hold, and land owners or occupiers feel let down.

Yet for the very reason that today it is growing out of all its former bounds Victoria must correlate future development insofar as that can be done. The central need will be a basic plan, publicized and understood by all; a framework of zoning regulations which will work towards fulfillment of that plan directly; and informed public support of the central ideal underlying the whole structure.

Future development of legislative groupings in James Bay, now the most static area in the city, is a pertinent example. There must be some over-all plan, and it will need to be adhered to consciously. Meanwhile it is idle to contend that the province will deal unfairly in that connection while its own direct interests are at stake.

Very Mixed Blessing

WHEN one of the most awkward problems of this vehicular age is how to deal with the ever mounting ratio of highway accidents why boost the maximum speed limit, even on certain road stretches only? Adding another 10 miles-an-hour to the present 50-mile standard is merely an invitation to most drivers to travel even faster than before. This is a move strangely inconsistent with the concern often voiced over current hazards of motoring.

Speed does not account for all traffic accidents but it is at the bottom of most of them. On public highways few motorists stick to the prescribed speeds. If the sign reads 30 the driver steps his speedometer to 35 or 40; if it is 40 the going rate is likely to be nearer 50; when the limit is 50 miles an hour many cars travel at 60 or 70; and so on will be the rule if the maximum limit goes up. The fact that such practice is the result of human itch does not make it either sensible or safe.

What is the need for traveling at a mile-a-minute with official blessing? The present maximum limit is adequate since it is not strictly observed anyway. Raising the limit may make traffic police work less onerous since they may then have fewer offenders to look out for but that should be no criterion. It is fine to build better and smoother roads but if the result is to increase the risk of travel and the likelihood of more accidents this will prove a very mixed blessing. Motorists have to be protected against both themselves and other drivers; putting a premium on excessive speed scarcely seems the way to promote safety measures.

Life Isn't That Bad

A SADDENED socialist confessed in the British Columbia legislature the other day that society may be getting too complicated for its own good. Today, said Mr. Arnold Webster, leader of the CCF opposition, there had to be a reason for everything one did, and that entailed all sorts of formalities. There should be a law to let people do something just for the fun of it.

These are heretical thoughts to be spoken by the leader of the socialist party in this province. The history of every country that has experimented with socialism has been the history not of simplified living but of pyramided rules and regulations, controls and conditions, forms and formulas, quotas and queues; and of the creation of an army of bureaucrats—hundreds and thousands of bureaucrats—to drive people dizzy trying to walk the line.

Certainly society has too many laws and regulations today. Certainly it would be a joy to do something just for fun. But who says we can't? We still don't need a license to breathe the salty tang of the seashore, to grow flowers in a garden, stroll in the quiet woods, or climb a mountain; to play athletic games, ski, or sail a boat.

Mr. Webster should lift his head from his books and pamphlets and look around him. Or is it that there is no fun for a socialist in simple pursuits?

Next Lieutenant-Governor

Choice of Mr. H. R. MacMillan, CBE, D.Sc., as B.C.'s next lieutenant governor would not surprise us although the thought might well disturb the distinguished industrialist.

The name of MacMillan has been a household word in B.C. wherever the tang of the fir tree scents the air. Lumbering, as B.C.'s leading industry, would be appropriately recognized by such an appointment. We cannot see why the choice should not prove popular in labor circles also.

. . . Those who visit the Scout huts occasionally will obtain a far better idea of the work sponsored by the association which is now seeking financial support. Boys in charge of these leaders are being taught woodcraft and other skills which will assist them greatly in the years to come. They are being taught to appreciate the beauty of the great outdoors and to help save our forests for the benefit of future generations. Even better still they are being imbued with the value of honor, obedience and the way of life handed down by the founder of Scouting, the late Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

The Liquor Vote

By far the majority of residents of North Saanich don't care the snap of their fingers whether liquor is sold in the area or not. They proved this point by staying away from the polls in exceedingly large numbers last Thursday. . . . It didn't make much difference how the vote went because no new outlets would be opened anyway. The populace in this district is very quiet living and no one in his senses would seek to open cocktail lounges in the area and expect them to be profitable.

Crime Prevention

We ask our readers to pay particular attention to a booklet which is being issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Emphasized is a new approach to the problems of crime and criminals.

The RCMP asks that the public co-operate to ensure security, remove temptation and reduce crime, using the old precept of an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure.

Brought to our attention besides the financial aspect of the matter is the responsibility we should all feel in prevention of crime from a moral standpoint. We hope that none of us will ever feel that through our carelessness someone has been started on a life of crime.

Toasting the Queen

Considering the manner in which toasts to the Queen are drunk at most public dinners and banquets we feel that this ancient practice should be dropped.

This suggestion is made not out of disloyalty but simply because we think that if the thing can't be done properly it shouldn't be done at all . . .

It is impossible at any rate difficult to do the thing in style and have wine for the toast so naturally we must make do. But the way the toast is drunk now it would be better to cut out the practice of drinking a toast to Her Majesty altogether.

Less Authority

From a strictly local point of view, the new school formula and the new system of municipal grants look good. It puts city residents in the same position that residents of neighboring rural areas have been in for some time with a lid of sorts on school taxes.

The one feature of the proposals which seems disturbing at this early date is the fact that they make the role of a school trustee even less attractive than it is at present, and it is hard enough now to find candidates for this onerous public job. The proposal that school budgets must be approved in detail by the department of education would clap another piece away from the small amount of local autonomy which school boards now enjoy.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IN RECALLING last week the Dumbells of glowing army show memory I said in an aside that maybe a modern variant wouldn't be amiss since almost every other man now is a war veteran and thus a ready-made audience should be lying fallow.

A note however from Jerry Gosley of Smile Show fame says, reluctantly, that the idea is napoo. The audience isn't there. His experience suggests otherwise, and of course he knows his stuff.

Let me quote him a bit, thus:

* * *

"A belly-laugh can still be obtained with a first-war joke when playing to an audience of 1914-18 veterans but it is a very scattered laugh that greets a topical reference to service life in the last war. The explanation, I think, is simple. The actual majority of men in the first war were with the army in France and nearby countries; their experience and language were common knowledge. For instance, the word 'Madamoiselle' promptly suggests wartime girl friends of that era (always good for a joke).

"In the last war, however, the men were more evenly distributed among the three services and scattered to the ends of the earth. Serving in vastly different conditions in a multitude of countries and climates provided little ground for situations and language common to all. As a small example I know of no single word that generally suggests a female companion of the last war."

* * *

Jerry makes a pertinent point. Actually the first war was much more global than most people seem to remember. I can think of four separate sprightly campaigns far, far removed from France, but it's true that trench life was familiar to most troops and that Canadians especially served on the Western Front.

There was thus a common denominator of experience. This is the glue of all veterans' reunions, and a post army show is a reunion even though it has intrinsic entertainment value of its own.

Men are gregarious but mainly so because they share the same past history or current interest. That is why there are such things as philatelic societies and Thermopylae clubs.

For the 1939-45 war the denominator was split three ways, initially because the navy and air force each was much more to the fore than formerly, and through the diversity of war locale. There wasn't the same amount of similar happenings. Despite this I should have thought service life in itself, irrespective of branch, would be a suitable denominator for a joke, but apparently not.

* * *

The Korean episode bears Jerry out. When he took his show out there the curtain rolled back to the kind of audience that put the Dumbells over.

About that tour he says:

"There men shared the same experiences and discomforts, consequently when playing now to returned servicemen from that area roars of laughter greet our references to forces' life in the Far East."

It seems that when the Smile Show travels around the province the players are often told by last war veterans that their performances bring back nostalgic memories of Britain's music halls, but, says Jerry, "I'm afraid that appears to be as near as we can get to reviving memories of the years 1939-45."

Meanwhile his show, always willing to oblige, would stage some well-known Dumbell numbers if only they could lay hands on the words and music.

Trigger-Happy Marksmen

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

RECENTLY a 13-year-old Nanaimo lad was injured in the back by a slug from a .22 rifle, accidentally fired by a chum when the boys were out eagle shooting. Fortunately the accident didn't prove fatal, but the incident has again drawn public attention to the far too prevalent practice of minors carrying firearms. Also to the indiscriminate shooting of harmless birds and animals.

There is already a law on the statutes prohibiting minors from carrying firearms unless in possession of a special license and then only when accompanied by a responsible grown-up. But parents themselves could avoid a lot of these accidents if they exercised closer supervision over the activities of their children.

Unfortunately the habit of taking "pot shots" along the highways is not confined to the youngsters, but is also indulged in by scores of irresponsible and trigger-happy adults who ought to know better. Road signs, telephone and high-tension wire insulators, windows in vacant buildings and tin cans on roadside garbage dumps are favorite targets.

Apart from causing property damage these people appear to give little or no thought to where their bullets will land. Human life is therefore endangered and we often hear of cattle being maimed while grazing in the fields. They also frequently try their marksmanship on blinker lights along the coast. This is a very serious offense and could easily result in a shipwreck and loss of life.

* * *

The eagle is one of our largest and most beautiful birds. It is protected in the United States and the pity is that B.C. hasn't a similar law. Years ago when it was thought that eagles killed fawns and game birds, our game department paid a $1 bounty on them, and along parts of the coast where they were plentiful men made good money shooting them. One man I knew made a leisurely trip around Vancouver Island in his gasboat and turned in 200 pairs of eagles' feet, for which he was paid $200.

And whenever the poultry farmers saw them hovering in the sky, they declared they were after their chickens. But organizations interested in the preservation of our wild life finally convinced the government that these were fallacies and the bounty was dropped. But not until the eagle population had been almost wiped out.

In spite of the fairy tales told our children about eagles carrying off babies and snatching suckling lambs and calves from their mothers, actually they are quite harmless. They might catch a wounded duck or pheasant, but the unfortunate bird would probably die anyway or later fall prey to a mink or raccoon.

Fish is the eagle's main diet. Herring and cod, which frequently swim near the surface are their main source of food supply, though they will eat crabs, clams and anything else they can find along the shore.

In the fall they may be seen eating salmon on the river bars, but only those fish which are dying or already dead after spawning. Two of them will sometimes "team up" and catch a duck, but only fishy ones that live on the sea and are spurned by hunters.

* * *

The innocent owl, whose sight is so poor in the daytime that a person can almost walk up to one sitting on a post, is another bird which these same thoughtless "marksmen" cannot refrain from taking a shot at. Not only are they quite harmless, but in keeping down the rat and mouse population (their chief diet), the owl also is one of Canada's most useful birds. The annual production of wheat and other grains on the prairies would be cut in half if it wasn't for the owls.

Every few years when the lemmings mysteriously disappear, the snow owls come down from the Arctic and sometimes make off with a few domestic chickens, but as this happens seldom it is hardly fair to blame the whole owl family for the loss of an occasional hen. These huge birds are by far the largest of the specie, and when they come this far south are also favorite targets for trigger-happy people carrying firearms.

Whether hawks should be shot on sight has always been a controversial point, except in the case of our beautiful osprey, which is the largest of the hawk family, lives entirely on fish and by common agreement should be protected.

As all types of hawks (except the osprey) kill chickens as well as game and song birds of every kind, farmers and sportsmen shoot them on sight. Arguments in their favor are many and varied, mostly depending on where one resides. The people of the Interior like them because they are deadly rattlesnake killers. The prairie farmer likes them because they keep down destructive gophers, and as they help keep the orchards free of fruit-destroying birds the fruit growers want them left alone.

Then along comes the ornithologist with arguments to prove that to maintain the proper balance of nature no wild birds should be destroyed and that everyone has its rightful place in our wild life domain, with the possible exception of the starling and the crow, both of which are neither useful nor ornamental and even the ardent bird lover would require a considerable stretch of imagination to think up anything in their favor.

The above arguments all have their points. But whether or not, youngsters should not be permitted to roam the countryside when carrying lethal weapons, nor young or old be allowed to take pot shots at objects along the highways, or at seagulls, helldivers, domestic cats or anything that presents a target regardless of where they are.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

AN OFFICE building which I frequently have to enter is growing a little out of date. It has reached the stage that it seems always to need paint and there is a frowsy sort of newsstand in its lobby. It has three elevators, only two of which are normally running.

The elevator operators are middle-aged men, maybe a trifle worse than middle-aged. Sometimes they are in full uniform which is grey with tired silver braid around the lapel edges. Sometimes they are in half uniform and at other times they turn up in any old clothes.

And they are the worst-tempered old coots you ever met.

"Come on, come on!" they will snarl at the passengers to hurry them aboard.

They slam the doors in your face just as you are stretching out to enter. Their answers to enquiries from passengers are in grunts and mutters. They never look at anyone. Something else is always on their minds. They engage in hostile badinage with the newsstand girl and with the rowdy office boys who are always congregated in the lobby drinking cokes.

They are surly, insolent, impolite and full of growls.

The general manger of the company that owns the building, and occupies two floors of it, is an old acquaintance of mine.

"It's time," I said to him the other day when I just about had my nose clipped off by rudely slammed elevator gates, "it's time you fired or pensioned off those two rheumatic old airdales you've got running your elevators."

"Who?" cried my friend, astonished. "You mean Herbie and Joe?"

"I never felt attracted to learning their names," I admitted. "But they're impossible."

"Why," expostulated my friend, "they're characters."

"Characters, is it?" I reflected.

And I reflected further on the thought that a great many ill-mannered, grumpy, crotchety people, both sexes, get away with murder among their familiars by being promoted to characters.

Humanizing the U-Boat

THE world powers were still trying to make rules for the humane conduct of war. At the five nation naval conference in London, 25 years ago, an Anglo-American attempt to outlaw the submarine was thwarted by the opposition of France and Japan.

However, the powers agreed that submarine warfare would be conducted more politely next time. (It wasn't.) And a limit was to be placed on the number of submarines built. (The limit was later forgotten.)

A ponderous report on state health insurance was tabled in the B.C. legislature by a royal commission. The commission found that the people wanted health insurance and it could be brought in. Cost of the inquiry to date was $5,740.77.

The B.C. government was winding up its department of industries. The department had set up 11 successful industries with government loans. Other provincially-financed industries had failed. The department was $300,000 in the red—but Col. D. B. Martyn, commissioner of industries, assured the public accounts committee of the legislature that when all the bills were in the treasury would get $100,000 more than it had advanced.

Baseball was coming to Victoria, 50 years ago.

"A four-club league, with Victoria, Vancouver, Bellingham and Everett, is being formed," The Colonist reported. "W. H. Lucas, president of the Northwestern League, composed of the above mentioned clubs, and John J. McCloskey (Honest John), who is to organize and manage the Victoria team, the team that will win the pennant, says McCloskey, arrived from the Sound yesterday to forward the work of organization here."

Street car lines were to be extended. "The Colonist is in a position to make the pleasing official announcement that the B.C. Electric Railway Company will commence almost immediately the extension of their lines to the Gorge on Victoria Arm."

Vancouver Island had no proper school system, The Daily British Colonist complained, 95 years ago.

There was a Colonial School—but nobody knew whether it belonged to the colony, or to the "Colonial School and Church Society," an arm of the Church of England. Well, perhaps someone knew, but The Colonist professed ignorance of the matter.

There was no responsible body to administer the school. "The school does not meet the needs of the place. It is not sufficiently central. The principal's salary is discreditably small. The tuition fee is a burlesque on good education. The accommodations and surroundings are . . . unsuitable."

The colony needed free common schools, The Colonist declared.

Discovery Model

I should like to add my very earnest wishes that the suggestion of Captain Gregory as outlined to the Thermopylae Club will be carried out.

The full size model placed in one of our parks, but preferably by our parliament buildings (as I think it would be safer there) would be a welcome addition for the visitors to our city. The hull could be well treated with a preservative which would keep it over many years. I believe as per now is the people today enjoy the beauty of the old time sailing ships. Really there is nothing on earth so beautiful as a fine ship under canvas.

Alas, as Masefield says, "Earth will not see such ships as these again," so I would heartily endorse this proposal which will, I am sure enhance the beauty of our city and contribute to the knowledge and pleasure of both our own people and all others who visit our fair city.

School Patrols

I was showing a visitor from Saskatoon around Victoria a few days ago. He saw the new post office, the museum, the parliament buildings, Beacon Hill Park and many other places of interest, but when near the school at Beacon Hill Park he saw something that really interested him. It was the school patrol directing traffic as the school was coming out. He had never seen the boys work before. He saw intelligent, efficient and courteous as the boys operated. We managed to get a photograph which he has taken to Saskatoon and will send to England and Australia also.

I explained that these boys were trained by the Victoria police and had the full cooperation of all traffic officers, Mounted Police and courts. This is something that Victoria can be pleased about. The saving of life is being taught to these young people at an age when it will not be forgotten.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Cardinal Leger, speaking recently in his See City of Montreal, made a very cogent observation, which, I think, should receive the attention of every citizen—Roman Catholic or otherwise.

"Modern man," said the Cardinal, "has become the pensioner and ward of the state."

This eminent churchman had in mind, of course, the pattern of society as it obtains in the modern totalitarian state. But he was also pointing his finger in the direction of the modern democracy.

"In this way," he declared, "life is transformed into an immense bureaucracy before becoming the oppressor which has already crushed the liberty of man in totalitarian countries."

Many others, apart from the Cardinal, have watched with some apprehension the growing paternalism of government.

They have seen more and more of those areas of life which formerly depended upon the initiative and responsibility of the individual invaded by a political portfolio.

Take, for example, the case of the Englishman who could not keep his modern water closet because authority said he must use one with a chain!

Observers are frightened lest those who pay the piper will assert their right to call the tune!

Last year, when the Archbishop of Canterbury was in Victoria, he told us that the welfare state had come to stay.

No one, except the most die hard reactionary, will dispute those words.

So long as the people have the vote, there will be no turning back to the days of rugged and irresponsible individualism.

But, if we want to save our essential freedoms, the citizens themselves must draw the line across which governments are forbidden to pass.

This will mean self-discipline - for political parties ride into power by promising the voter everything he thinks he hasn't got but should have.

"Let the government do it" is the cry which robs man of his moral responsibility at the same time as it takes more tax dollars out of his pocket.

Thus the citizen is impoverished on two counts.

* * *

Nowhere is this more clearly demonstrated than in the modern attitude toward charitable appeals. It comes as no great surprise to me that sweepstakes are advanced as a legitimate source of charity!

The corroding acid of impersonality has well-night destroyed the personal act of grace which is both the duty and the reward of the Christian citizen.

The disastrous thing about our Community Chest campaigns is not that they fail to meet their objective, for no man ought to be forced to give that which he would withold in matters of this kind.

It is the fact that an impersonal system of bookkeeping which "painlessly" deducts the charitable pledge from a man's payroll insulates him from any personal interest in his so-called "charities."

The same psychological effect is achieved by the multiplication of sales taxes under the title of "Social Security Tax."

Consequently, there is the need for a re-affirmation of the truth that both the individualism of man and the dignity of man are of the essence in a Christian society.

Let us resist any further pressure to turn our good deeds into a government superviced or a bureacratically distributed dole.

Biggest Show Slated

The biggest show of the year at Greater Victoria Arts Centre will open Tuesday with an exhibition of a group of landscapes by the world famous "Group of Seven" Canadian painters.

Curator Colin Graham states that 45 pictures will be hung during the two week show.

It is expected more than 1,000 Greater Victoria school children will view the exhibition as a result of conducted tours organized by the women's committee to the Arts Centre.

The pictures are of scenes from coast to coast, Mr. Graham added.

The "Group of Seven," who reached their peak in the 1920s, included Tom Thomson, A. Y. Jackson, Lawren Harris, Arthur Lismer, J. E. H. Macdonald, Edwin Holgate and F. H. Varley.

Patent Pills May Relieve That Burning Feeling

(This column is prepared by The Daily Colonist in co-operation with the B.C. Medical Association. The author in each case is an authority on the field discussed. Although professional ethics dictate that he remain anonymous.)

At any party or gathering where the topic of conversation turns to who is sick with what and why, someone is certain to mention the burning feeling in his or her stomach. Equally certain someone else will come forth with a patent remedy to relieve the same.

Fortunately, or sometimes unfortunately, the remedy described by the friend does in some measure relieve the symptoms.

What one person may call burning another may refer to as growling, or another may call an acid feeling. One may use the term to describe a real deep-seated pain, another to describe the feeling in his or her throat caused by regurgitation of stomach contents, while another may use it to describe some skin irritation.

The causes of these vague symptoms may be many and varied. It is a common belief that many symptoms are caused by hyperacidity, which means too much acid in the stomach.

Many proprietary medicines are advertised on their labels, in the press and over the radio to relieve complaints due to hyperacidity. It is normal for a stomach to secrete hydrochloric acid in considerable quantity. It acts as an important digestive juice. In a normal stomach this acid gives rise to no symptoms.

The situation is different however if there is inflammation or ulcer in the stomach, oesophagus or duodenum. The oesophagus is the tube leading from the mouth to the stomach, the duodenum is the first part of the bowel. In the presence of inflammation the acid acts on the abnormal area causing pain, burning or some other symptom.

In addition to disease in the oesophagus, stomach or duodenum symptoms may originate in the back, the gall bladder, the pancreas or in the large bowel. Dietary and drinking indiscretions may give rise to symptoms. One of the commonest causes of a burning sensation is nervous tension, in which case there may be no associated real disease in the stomach or its adjacent organs.

The presence of burning as a symptom is attested to by the many thousands of dollars spent in advertising patent remedies to relieve it. Pharmacists will tell you that a good proportion of their proprietary and prescription business has to do with medicines for the relief of stomach complaints.

It is often asked, Should one treat oneself when plagued by this unpleasant trouble? The answer is, It depends entirely on its cause. If you are certain that it is merely "hangover" burning following a party, you are justified in taking some proprietary medicine to relieve it, in fact regardless of the cause if you get relief from soda or some patent pills have been.

The danger lies in continuing to take them. Too much acid, which is the basis of your complaint, may change your blood reaction and cause other symptoms or you may be covering up and masking some disease process in your stomach or elsewhere that needs attention.

The next problem is, What should you yourself do about that burning feeling in your stomach? There is only one answer to this. Find out the cause and have appropriate treatment.

It may be found after investigation by you, doctor, to be a very unimportant and minor disturbance, but on the other hand it may be the red light that points the finger toward trouble. This trouble could be an ulcer or a cancer in the stomach or in some adjacent organ.

When people come out to British Columbia from the Prairie for example, there is always the difference in the weather to fall back on.

A great number of people become tired for a very special reason. These are to a greater or lesser extent perfectionists. They like things done well. Their homes have to be spic and span and their gardens likewise. When the old man comes home after work and throws his dirty overalls on the back of the chair, hard thoughts, if not hard words, ensue. It might be better sometimes if they did "get it off their chests to clear the air," one Englishman, in a rage did not require that excuse for shaking.

At this point it seems the real problem is, it would be to the good of they had to keep just themselves clean, tidy, straight and prim, but there are others who have responsibilities to do the same. The poor beggar tends to get later and later until, about the time they are leading the whole world on their shoulders.

Now these people are the salt of the earth, they are responsible for most of our progress. Is it any wonder though that somewhere along the road they begin to tire?

In those whom distress is not due to specific disease but to one or a combination of factors just mentioned the most important thing a doctor can do is to check them over thoroughly and reassure them that their bodies are in good physical shape and that there is nothing, for example like cancer, gnawing at their vitals and dragging them down.

A famous physician once said that the best prescription at this point was a straightforward discussion of the problem at hand to point the way to some measure of rearrangement of the routine of living. This should include for different people in different proportions the four major components of life, work, worship, friendship and play.

The Lord's Prayer to Volga Boatman Covered in Doukhobor Choir Program

The Lord's Prayer, the Volga Boatman and 26 other songs will be presented by the Orthodox Doukhobor choir here February 21 as part of a goodwill tour of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

The 33 singers, 16 men and 17 women under direction of John Verigin, will sing hymns during much of the first part of the program, which will begin at 8:15 p.m. at Oak Bay Junior high school.

However, one selection deals with the story of Doukhobors convoyed in chains to Siberia for refusal of military service.

Romantic and folk songs make up much of the second half of the recital, during which several of the singers take solos.

SONGS DESCRIBED

The program describes some of the songs this way:

The Birch Tree Song: "An unusual light hearted tune of mixed up subjects."

Love Beyond Reason (sung by the women): "I have given you all my love and all I got from you was scorn."

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) Two children were burned to death in a fire which leveled their four-room frame home while their mother was across the street making a phone call. Four firemen had to restrain the mother, Mrs. Theola Cheatham, 21, from running into the flaming house.

NEW METHOD ANNOUNCE APPOINTMENTS

ALBERT DUNDERDALE

DONALD F. NEWELL

New Method Laundries Ltd. have announced the appointment of Mr. Albert Dunderdale as Manager of their Linen Supply and Garment Rental Department. Mr. Dunderdale has been with the Sales Department of New Method since 1928, starting as a driver-salesman, and during the past twelve years has been a route-supervisor. He is widely known in Victoria and brings to his new job a wealth of experience in the textile maintenance industry. Hearty Greetings

Think, Dad— What's Due?

BY R. O. MARRION

For the juvenile philanderer there's a Valentine bargain on the market this year—25 cards in a cellophane bag, guaranteed to set 25 little feminine hearts aflutter.

There are also kits of image them yourself cards for members of the elementary school crowd who are old enough to appreciate the sentiment of pierced with massive arrows. These however seem to be limited to only eight girls or boy friends per kit.

No sissy things are offered Dad when we go looking for remembrances to friends and relatives on this day. Lacks of taste for a day when lovers will spend expenditure to find a suitable token to his sweetheart.

He'll probably end up with a box of chocolates or a new pair of oven gloves as well as a card.

"Husbands usually want something more practical than just a card," a drug store clerk said yesterday.

Waves among lovers aunts, grandchildren and other relatives will be more forethought than Dad have had a wide selection of cards to choose from in the past few weeks.

MORE EACH YEAR

More and more people are now sending more valentine cards each year, retailers say. The custom has spread to include persons who are not sweethearts and relatives, and friends and acquaintances.

The trend seems to be toward cards with a comical twist, one retailer said but there is still a good sale of lacy, sentimental cards.

One type of card that was popular for years but appears to have almost disappeared is the "comic" card that was the forerunner of the lacy card.

For some years, a card that could be found yesterday in a five-and-ten showing that with two to children and women suggested going for a walk and finding a place so dark that I didn't see your face.

Stone, Ryalls Tied Up In B.C. Curling Final

KAMLOOPS (Special) — Reg Stone of Trail, perennial challenger for British Columbia curling honors, and Milt Ryalls of Nelson were battling it out early Sunday morning to decide which rink will represent the province in the Macdonald Brier playdowns at Regina next month.

Stone, who lost to Frank Avery, 11-10, after an extra end, in his first game of the British Consols finals and then won his next six to force a playoff with Avery for the "B" section finalist, evened the score with the Vancouver skip in the extra game.

Avery and Stone went down to the last rock in a bitter battle with the Trail skip making a perfect draw to the button past two guard rocks to win 9-8.

FRACTION OFF

The score was 3-3 after five ends, 7-7 after nine ends and then Avery missed his chance. Playing last rock, he needed only to get Stone's last rock to count five. He was a fraction of an inch off and nudged Stone's rock into shot position for the Trail skip to count one.

Avery tied it up in the 11th end and the 12th was blanked. On the extra end Avery built up a sound house and got two guards in front of shot rock but he couldn't stop Stone who made his difficult draw.

That put Stone into the final against Ryalls who won "A" section of the 16-rink final with seven straight wins. Stone ended the winning streak at once by taking the first game of the best-of-three decider, 12-7. It was 9-7 for Stone after nine ends but Ryalls weakened and Stone got two in the 10th and one in the 11th end.

STILL IN RUNNING

Ryalls stayed in the running in the second game with a thrilling 11-10 win, counting two rocks on the last end to force a third game. It started at 11.45 p.m. Saturday.

Meanwhile play in the Kamloops bonspiel came to an end with two Victoria rinks getting into the prizes. Max Zabel reached the eights of "E" event by defeating Strickland of Prince George 9-6, then ousted Tony Gutoski, Victoria's Consols finalist, in a quarter-final match 12-8. Zabel was eliminated in the semi-finals by Kelowna's four Brownlee brothers 8-7 but won third prize when the Brownlees went on to win the final.

Glen Walkey reached the prize class Friday in "C" section but lost out to Dealy of the Brazorne Curling Club 8-6 in the semi-finals. Trailing 7-6 coming home the Victoria skip could have won by taking out Dealy's shot rock but missed.

ZABEL OUT

Zabel was eliminated from "F" event by Hembling of Kamloops 8-4 and Gutoski, who came close to getting into the Consols finals, lost out in both spiel events before getting into the semi-finals. He trimmed Pyler of Kamloops in one game Saturday but lost to Zabel and Ray Ottem's Consols rinks in other games.

The three Victoria rinks however made a fine overall showing. Gutoski, including his Consols play, compiled a 13-6 record. Zabel won nine of 11 games and Walkey seven of 12 for a combined 29-16 showing.

Nanaimo's Bill Kerrigan, Vancouver Island's other Consols entry, lost Saturday to Len Evans of Smithers, another Consols entry, to bow out of bonspiel events.

Philadelphia Phillies have announced the signing of outfielder Harry "Peanuts" Lowrey, recently released by St. Louis Cardinals.

Terry Tobacco Athlete of Year

VANCOUVER (CP)—Terry Tobacco, 18, of Cumberland, was named B.C. athlete of the year here Saturday night by a jury of 11 leading sport followers in the province.

Announcement of the honor was made during the second annual B.C. Athlete of the Year banquet sponsored by the Vancouver Sun.

Tobacco, brilliant sprinter who placed third in the 440-yard dash during the British Empire Games here last summer, won out over 10 other prominent B.C. athletes selected by sports fans throughout the province.

Saturday night score: Drake Hotel 5, Nanaimo 3.

Next games: Monday, C & C Taxi vs. Drake Hotel, 7.30 p.m.; Nanaimo vs. Navy, 9 p.m., Memorial Arena.

Drake Hotel, destined to wind up in the cellar position when the Vancouver Island Amateur Hockey League finishes its league schedule with a Fan Appreciation Night program at Memorial Arena Monday, pulled the upset of the season by dumping Nanaimo Clippers, 5-3 at Nanaimo last night.

Clippers, with their second successive league championship already stowed away, meet the Drakes at Nanaimo again next Saturday in the opening game of a best-of-three semi-final playoff series.

C & C Taxi, which could slip from second to third place if defeated by Drakes in the opening game at 7.30 Monday and if Navy is able to hand the Clippers another setback in the second clash, will start the other semi-final series against the Sailors at Memorial Arena Friday.

More than 50 prizes will be given away by the league to fans attending tomorrow night's games. Top award will be a 1955 21-inch television set and other prizes include a lady's suitcase, an automobile tire, a $10 cheque, $10 scrip, sweater, table lamp, golf balls, hams, sport shirt, traveling clock, wall clock and return air tickets to Seattle for two. The total value of prizes is approximately $1,000.

Art Green paced the Hostlers attack at Nanaimo last night with a pair of goals and an assist but it was Don Hamilton who earned the plaudits of the slim crowd for his great display in the Drake nets.

With his defensemen seemingly more intent on offense than defense Hamilton faced a barrage of rubber as he sparkled in turning aside 32 of 35 shots directed at his nets during the loosely played contest. Nanaimo's Walt Davis stopped 24 of 29 Drake Hotel shots.

Norm Kowalyk, Jack Milburn and Ken Gill each scored once for the Hotelmen while Mel Gordeau boosted his league-leading scoring total to 41 points over team-mate Joe Zoback with two of Nanaimo's tallies. Bud Dumont scored the other Clipper goal.

Getting Better

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. W. R. Brewster, club physician for the Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, said yesterday that centre Phil Maloney is "improving . . . but suffering shock, contusions and a bad cut over the eye."

Maloney was injured Friday night when Larry Zeidel of Edmonton Flyers struck him in the eye. Both were in the penalty box at the time and Maloney was looking the other way.

Next games: Tuesday, New Westminster at Vancouver; Calgary at Edmonton.

BY JIM TANG

Nothing went right for Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena last night and as a result they not only missed a chance for a three-way tie for second place but again saw their grip on fourth place in the Western Hockey League threatened.

Knocked off balance in the first minute by an aggressive Vancouver team, the Cougars never regained their equilibrium despite a scrappy comeback try, and took a 4-1 beating from the Canucks.

It was the first time the Canucks had won this season on Victoria ice—they lost the first seven games—and the win moved the Mainlanders within six points of fourth place with a game in hand. And the Cougars this week face a schedule which has them playing here Wednesday, at Calgary Thursday, Edmonton Friday and Saskatoon Saturday.

RACE TIGHTENS

There is some consolation, however, in the fact that the Canucks have to play four games in five days on the Prairies next week and that Calgary and New Westminster have suddenly been projected into the playoff fight.

While they really didn't deserve to win last night, the Cougars didn't merit the loss either. They carried the play much of the time but they didn't get the bounce of the puck and everything they did went wrong. Passes glanced the wrong way, shots deflected the wrong way and Vancouver goalie Johnny Bower was both good and lucky.

On the other hand the Canucks were an alert, confident crew which checked well and made the most of what appeared to be a slightly off-color evening for Marcel Pelletier. However it wouldn't be at all fair to blame the Victoria goalie although the shots that beat him were all from well out. It was just one of those nights in which nothing worked for the losers.

LIVELY PERIOD

But while it was a night of frustration for the Cougars and their 4,000 or so supporters, the fans got some extra entertainment in the third period when two fights enlivened proceedings.

Don Ashbee, who had a short trial with the Cougars earlier in the season, and Pete Durham were the central figures in the first tussle. Ashbee signed last night with the Canucks to fill in for Phil Maloney, put out of action Friday night when a punch from Edmonton defenseman Larry Zeidel injured an eye, and was credited with an assist on Canucks' second goal and charged with the defeat in the fight with Durham.

It started when Ashbee rode Durham into the boards on a rush into Victoria territory. On the next Vancouver attack Durham gave the new Canuck a working over on the boards and then landed all the punches that were thrown when fists started to fly.

BATTLE IN EXIT

Walt Clune, Victoria defenseman, and Vancouver forward Earl Johnson had at it in the second bout late in the period. They were both sent to the dressing room but started to fight again in the runway. Both benches emptied in a hurry but quick action prevented the players from getting off the ice at the exit and forestalled a free-for-all.

In addition, Mark Marquess, the hard-luck guy of the injury riddled Cougars, almost lost an ear when cross-checked by Vic [illegible]. Harry Dick. Six stitches were needed to make repairs, but the plucky Marquess was back in action after the sewing.

Canucks started with a rush and had a goal after 50 seconds when Jackie McLeod, the more than adequate replacement for Bill Fabricki, caught a top corner. Dick made it 2-0 less than three minutes later when he followed up on a play and blasted a long one past Pelletier.

Cougars seemed to be coming back in the later stages of the period but were again rocked in the first minute of the second period when defenseman Gordie Hudson, who packs a wicked slap shot, drove a screened shot into the nets from just inside the [illegible]. [illegible] repeated less than three minutes later and Cougar hopes went out the window although the Islanders, led by Colin Kilburn, gave Bower more than a few anxious moments. But they only managed to avert a shutout, Doug Macauley getting goal No. 20 when he swatted in a loose puck while flat on the ice.

Stampeders, Royals In Shaky Positions

Calgary Stampeders and New Westminster Royals, all but conceded playoff spots a couple of weeks ago, now find themselves in a four-way scramble for the three berths behind Edmonton Flyers, Western Hockey League leaders.

Both Victoria Cougars and Vancouver Canucks, who had been battling it out by themselves for fourth place, have gained ground in the past two weeks and both Royals and Stamps are threatened with the possibility of fifth place.

Both Royals and Stamps were beaten last night, the former taking a 6-2 thumping from the Flyers while the improved Quakers bested Stamps 3-1, at Saskatoon.

RIGHT BEHIND

Results left Stamps and Royals tied in second place with 57 points, two points more than Victoria and just eight points more than the Canucks who have two games in hand on Calgary and one on New Westminster. Cougars have played one game less than Stamps.

And to make matters more interesting Royals have lost six of their last nine games while the Stamps have a winless streak of seven games, three ties and four defeats.

A crowd of 4,000 New Westminster fans saw the Royals take the lead twice only to flop in the third period as Flyers rammed in four goals to break a 2-2 tie.

Bronco Horvath, league leading scorer who gets his points in bunches, led the Edmonton attack. He set up Flyers' first two goals then scored their third and fourth to break the tie. His goals were his 38th and 39th and the four point performance boosted his point total to 81, which is 12 more than runner-up Doc Couture and practically assures the Edmonton centre the scoring title.

At Saskatoon, about 3,000 fans saw the resurgent Quakers run their undefeated streak through a fifth game with a handy win over the slumping Calgarians.

Stamps had a first period edge but found goalie Bev Bentley in top form. The Quakers had the play in the second period and scored twice. Close-checking held down the faltering Stamps in the third period until Gerry Couture broke through for his 29th goal at 11:15.

Quakers hung on until the last minute when coach Doug Bentley made it certain with a shot into an open net. Mel Houghton and Ray Manson scored the other Saskatoon goals with Manson assisting twice and Elle Kobussen also figuring on all three goals with three assists.

Victory left the Quakers still 21 points from fourth place with only 11 games left on their schedule, an almost impossible situation as far as playoff hopes are concerned. The Quakers would need a minimum of 21 points to rate a chance and might not make it even if they won all remaining games.

South African Wins Empire Title

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuters)—Jannie Van Rensburg, champion of South Africa, won the vacant British Empire lightweight boxing championship Saturday night when he outpointed British champion Joe Lucy in 15 rounds.

George Lunn Rink Tops Duncan Spiel

DUNCAN — George Lunn's Nanaimo rink won the C. C. Wright Grand Challenge Trophy at the Cowichan Curling Club Saturday night by defeating a Duncan rink skipped by Ollie Panzer, 7-6, in 12 ends as play wound up in four events at the annual Duncan bonspiel.

A total of 32 rinks competed for prizes in the three-day 'spiel, including four rinks from Victoria and rinks from Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Chemainus, Nipawin and Seattle. The winners of each of the four events will play off today for the Grand Aggregate championship.

Lunn gained the finals by downing Ed Price of Port Alberni while Panzer defeated Gordie Robertson's Victoria rink in the semi-finals.

In the Wadsworth Trophy event, a rink skipped by George Sheets of Bellivue, Wash., took top honors by nosing out Frank Burden of Victoria, 10-9, in a thrilling final. Sheets defeated Ed Berkey of Duncan and Burden downed Wilson of Nanaimo in semi-final draws.

K. Dewar's Chemainus rink won the Cushanaugh Riverside Trophy by trimming Frank Middlemiss of Duncan 11-7 in a game that was abandoned after 10 ends. Middlemiss reached the finals with a victory over Harry Spottiswood of Port Alberni while Dewar defeated Strandberg of Duncan in his semi-final match.

Harry Hodge of Duncan squeezed out an 11-10 victory over Tony Folk of Duncan in the Cowichan Curling Club Trophy final to bring the host club its only title. Hodge got past Glen Harper's rink in the semi-finals.

Tactics Unpopular But They Worked

BALDWIN, Kan. (AP)—A basketball player stood motionless with the ball for a full five minutes in Baker's game with the College of Emporia Tuesday night.

Charles Dehlinger, College of Emporia star, started the weird stratagem by stalling on the end line after his team got a two-point 35-33 lead in the first minute of the second half. Baker players tried to tie him up or get the ball. They succeeded only in fouling Dehlinger. He sank the two free throws and as soon as his team got the ball he moved again to the end line.

Baker ignored him but the crowd didn't. They booed and stormed for five minutes until Baker went after the ball. They fouled Dehlinger again and he sank another pair of free throws. When C. of E. got possession, Dehlinger crawled into his shell again and waited.

That was practically the only offense C. of E. used in the second half but it worked. They won 65-55 as Dehlinger dropped in 19 free throws. C. of E. made 16 field goals but only four came in the second half.

Boxer Regrets Opponent Shot

MEXICO CITY (UP)—Raul "The Mouse" Macias, U.S. and Mexican bantamweight champion, could only say "What bad luck, son! What bad luck!" last night when he learned European bantam titleholder Mario d'Agata was wounded in Italy yesterday, ending plans for a title bout between them.

Recovering from his initial surprise, Macias said, "I hope they get well soon, both he and his mama," who also was shot by Sicilian laundryman Giovanni Pettita.

San Antonio Stakes Won By Long Shot

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Leaving the heavily-backed Determine and Poona II to trail in dismal defeat, Joe W. Brown's Gigantic, a long shot, came up in the stretch to win the $60,000 San Antonio handicap at Santa Anita Park yesterday.

Jockey Roy Lumm, scoring his second stakes victory on long-priced horses for the afternoon, led the rushing parade to the wire with the overlooked four-year-old Challedon colt, for one of the biggest surprises in the 17 editions of the San Antonio.

Imbros, stablemate of Determine, managed to grab second, while Rex Ellsworth's Correspondent finished third in the field of 14 horses.

Gigantic returned $85.50 for a $2 win ticket, $22.90 to place and $11.30 to show. Imbros paid $2.80 and $2.40, and Correspondent, another surprise, $14.60 for the show.

The time for the mile and one-eighth was 1.48 2-5.

Sunderland Beaten, Wolves Seize Lead

LONDON (Reuters)—Charlton Athletic handed Sunderland its first home defeat of the season and knocked it out of the English League first division soccer leadership Saturday by scoring a 2-1 upset decision.

[illegible] the defending first division champions who for the past few months have been waging a see-saw battle with Sunderland for the top spot, took advantage of this slip to climb back into first place.

BACK FROM DISASTER

Last week the Wanderers suffered their worst reverse in 21 years when routed 6-1 at Bolton, but they swept back into winning form Saturday with a 6-4 victory over Huddersfield. Wanderers now have 36 points, one more than Sunderland and each team has 13 games remaining.

A remarkable goal in the second minute put Charlton on the path to the victory which carried it into third spot with 31 points and a game in hand over the leaders. One of the most improved teams in the country, Charlton took the lead when fullback Jim Campbell, standing at mid-field mark, lobbed the ball goalward with the wind behind him. Sunderland goalie J. Fraser came out too far and the ball sailed over his head into the net.

Manchester City, also with 31 points, confirmed its recent Football Association Cup victory over Manchester United in decisive style with a 5-0 triumph over United.

FIRMLY AT BOTTOM

Luckless Sheffield Wednesday, without a home victory since last October, is now firmly entrenched at the bottom of the table following a 3-1 defeat at the hands of Portsmouth.

Luton Town and Blackburn Rovers are still locked in a struggle at the head of Division Two. Luton beat Rotherham 4-0 at home and Blackburn won 2-0 away against lowly Plymouth which left each with 38 points. Luton has a better goal average.

In Division Three South Leyton Orient retained its two-point lead over Bristol City, drawing 2-2 with Gillingham while Bristol City was tied 2-2 by Brentford.

Accrington, beaten 3-1 at Wrexham, had its Northern section lead cut to one point as rival Scunthorpe won 2-0 at home against Mansfield.

In Scotland Aberdeen increased its Division "A" lead to six points with a 4-0 home win over Partick.

Moomaw May Rejoin Argos

TORONTO (CP)—Don Moomaw, University of California football star who gave up the game to study for the ministry in 1953, may return to Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four this season.

"Moomaw told me recently that he is interested in coming up here this year," team director Harry Sonshine said.

Moomaw played six games with Argonauts in 1953 and left the team to begin studies leading to the baptist ministry at Princeton theological seminary.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Keith Dillabaugh

This week we would like to pass on a few quieting words for the benefit of black-and-white TV owners who seem to be flirting with the thought that their conventional sets are momentarily about to become obsolete.

Despite all the hullabaloo about color, the fact remains that there are probably no more than ten thousand color sets in the hands of the public as compared to some 31 million black-and-whites. Boiled down to a simple dollars and cents basis, this means that neither the networks nor the sponsors can afford to cold-shoulder the whopping pile of loot represented by this vast audience.

It would appear to us that until a 19- or 21-inch color set can be offered to the buying and viewing public for say $500 or less, the chance of your black-and-white set missing the [illegible] isn't worth fretting over.

And mechanical trouble isn't worth fretting over either . . . as long as DELTA ELECTRIC is around. Our EXPERT REPAIR DEPARTMENT will have your TV set performing like new in no time . . . just call 4-7416 and we'll come a-runnin'. ***

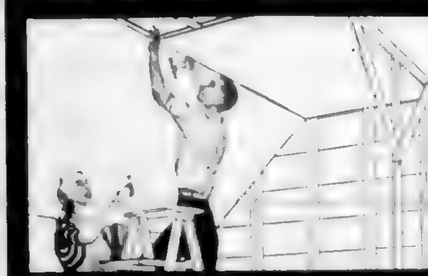
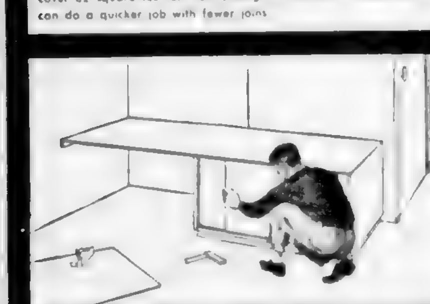
SYLVAPLY

DOUGLAS FIR PLYWOOD



How the family grows! Converting your attic to sleeping quarters for the youngsters can help to solve your space problems. It's a worthwhile project that can add greatly to the value of your home when you use real wood panels of plain or decorative Sylvaply. Because the big sheets of Sylvaply cover 32 square feet of wall, ceiling, or floor at a time, you can do a quicker job with fewer joins.



Built-ins, cupboards, and other home improvement projects like this cost less to build with easy-to-finish, self-framing Sylvaply in 5 or 7 ply thicknesses. Sylvaply saws as clean as other woods with power saw or hand saw, nails close to the edge without splitting. And the system of simple glued and nailed butt joints possible with Sylvaply does away with tricky joinery details.

There are just dozens of spots around a house that can be quickly turned into useful storage space with Sylvaply. Because Sylvaply is an engineered wood panel, you can do home improvement projects easily and at low cost. Easy to saw and nail, easy to finish Sylvaply requires only simple carpentry for cupboards or built-ins like the handy under-basement-stairs storage cabinet shown above.

In addition to regular 4 feet by 8 feet panels, you can now buy handy sizes for those small jobs and repairs. Makes doing-it-yourself easier than ever. "Take Home" panels are available at your lumber dealers in sizes from 12 by 36 inches up. Carry them home or slip them in your car trunk.

Experimental Notes

Sawdust Use Boosts Yield

It is interesting to note, however, that in the sweet corn section, all names listed for 1955 are hybrids. Even the old Golden Bantam, which stood the test of time for 50 years has had to make way for the newer, more productive, better adapted and more profitable hybrids.

Yield of fruit was increased 3,079 pounds an acre annually for the entire period (1948-54) through the use of sawdust.

Apparently the benefits of sawdust arise mainly through conservation of moisture.

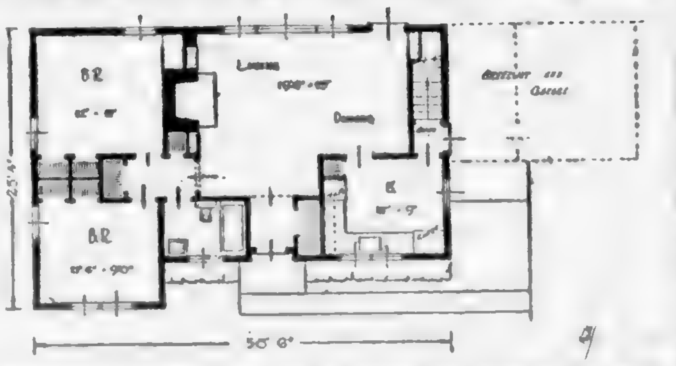
House Blends with Woodsy Setting in Ontario



This attractive home in Port Colborne, Ont. seems made to order for its wooded setting. Separate entry hall leads into a large living room which includes bookcases built on either side of the fireplace. There are lots of extra closets and a pleasant and roomy kitchen in the front corner of the house. The interesting roof treatment combined with attractive brick work detail and vertical boards adds interest to the exterior. House contains 884 square feet or 16,1?? cubic feet. (Inquiries about this plan may be addressed to Home Building in Canada, 2842 Bloor Street West, Toronto 18, referring to Plan 64-?4?.)

Purebred Pup Usually Safer Bet

BY B. ROBERT MAGGS

... There are advocates of both sides to the question. I have heard people expounding the "vastly superior" intelligence of the mongrel and vice versa. Some crossbreeds coming from two purebred dogs will also combine the attributes of their parents in a fairly predictable fashion. ...

Combined Effort

Real Estate Men Meet on Monday To Launch Multiple Listing Plan

Thirty-one member firms of the Victoria Real Estate Board will band together Monday to offer a photo-multiple listing service, considered the fastest, most effective way known of selling real estate.

Under the new Multiple Listing Bureau, sellers and purchasers of property will have benefit of the combined efforts of 183 real estate salesmen and agents.

But they only have to deal with one agent.

The owner lists his property with the real estate agent of his choice who becomes the listing broker, through whom all appointments are made, offers tendered, negotiations conducted and advertising placed.

Prospective purchasers deal with a purchasing agent of their choice who arranges all appointments with the listing brokers to see the property and discuss others.

BOTH SIDES

As a result of this, both sides are ably represented a vendor by the listing broker who becomes his agent, and the purchaser by the selling broker.

The Multiple Listing Bureau is a new additional service by members of the Real Estate Board of Victoria which by a simultaneous listing with 31 real estate brokers offers the widest possible market for property.

But an owner may still list his property for sale exclusively with one agent or list it with a few agents of his own choosing.

However, if he chooses either of these methods, he does not qualify for the blanket services of the 31 members of the Multiple Listing Bureau.

THREE SYSTEMS

Nevertheless, it must be stressed that a property owner, when approaching his agent now has an opportunity to list his property under three systems multiple listing, exclusive listing, and open general listing with one or more agents.

A novel feature of the multiple listing plan is that all properties are photographed within 24 hours after the listing is placed with a member firm.

Within 48 hours all 138 salesmen and agents have in their possession photographs of the property and complete details of the listing.

Although the vendor deals only with one man he has the services of a large group of experienced salesmen.

The plan ensures that all prospective customers will be reached within hours of the listing.

PROPER TEST

The multiple listing plan provides the owner with a proper test of his listed price on a wider basis than is possible by a listing given to one firm exclusively or to the few firms he would ordinarily see.

Selling of property by means of the multiple listing system, or alternatively the co-operative listing plan, is not a particularly recent innovation in the field of real estate merchandising, but its efficiency has been realized and the system developed by agents in Canada since 1945.

Multiple listing bureaus in Canada and the United States are now well established and provide an indispensable medium through which real estate sales have been negotiated more efficiently and expeditiously to the advantage of both buyer and seller.

In Canada, the Toronto Real Estate Board pioneered the multiple listing system which has spread so that there are now 17 cities in Canada using the system, and in every instance it has proved a most successful service to the public.

SALES DOUBLED

The Vancouver Real Estate Board Multiple Listing Service was established in January, 1951, and last year handled a $12,000,000 volume of property, more than double the sales of 1952.

It is now forseeable that the volume will reach $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 before too long, says Clifford C. Howells, chairman of the Vancouver service.

It has now been developed to the point where home seekers of every description automatically turn to the multiple listing service for the aid and information they require when establishing a new home for themselves.

The Vancouver bureau passed the million dollar mark for property transferred in one month, in April 1954, and in November of last year the monthly transfer had reached $1,600,000.

EVEN GREATER

The Vancouver board plans more newspaper advertising by both the firms and members' firms to stimulate even greater sales volume.

The Victoria bureau has been largely patterned on the Vancouver system of pooling house and commercial property listings and prospective purchasers to make quicker and better transactions.

Under the multiple listing system, during the first 11 months of 1954, Canadian real estate boards from coast to coast sold $106,500,000 worth of real estate, in addition to the property sold by conventional means.

This figure was ascertained by a recent survey conducted by the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards, and represents an increase of $26,000,000 in sales under the multiple listing system over the same period in 1953.

STRONG TENDENCY

The record figure for the first 11 months of 1954 indicates, according to J. A. Weber, of Edmonton, association president, a strong tendency by owners to choose photo-multiple listing method of selling real estate in preference to other methods.

"In line with this trend," he says, "more and more local real estate boards are adopting the photo-multiple listing system, and in consequence even higher sales are anticipated for 1955."

The Real Estate Board of Victoria in the spring of last year appointed a committee to investigate the advisability of providing this service to Victoria property owners and home seekers.

After exhaustive study in Vancouver and many other Canadian cities, this committee, recognizing the great advantages of the system, strongly recommended that it be inaugurated as an additional service of the Real Estate Board of Victoria.

The committee's recommendations were unanimously adopted by the board, and 31 members of the Real Estate Board of Victoria have enrolled and are charter members of this new service which commences operation Monday.

OFFICES OPEN

Central offices of the Multiple Listing Bureau of the Real Estate Board of Victoria have been opened at 113 Exchange Building, on Broad Street.

Secretary to the bureau is Mrs. Catherine Godfrey, who is well versed in matters of legal administration pertaining to real estate.

Charter member firms are: A. Bernard and Co., Ltd.; Fraser Biscoe; Boorman Investment Co., Ltd.; B.C. Land and Investment Agency Ltd.; Brown Bros. Agencies Ltd.; P. R. Brown and Sons Ltd.; F. N. Cabeldu Ltd.; Capital City Realty; Alfred Carmichael and Co., Ltd.; Dickie and Company Realty; Financial Survey Ltd.; Harry Foster Ltd.; Gillespie, Hart and Company Ltd.; Hagar and Swayne Ltd.; Heisterman and Company; H. M. Taylor Spittal and Company Ltd.; Western Homes Ltd.; J. H. Whittome and Company Ltd.; and Yorkshire Corporation Ltd.

First listing under the Multiple Listing Bureau system of Real Estate Board of Victoria is examined by bureau secretary, Mrs. Catherine Godfrey. Multiple listing system goes into operation Monday and for the first time in Victoria offers home-seekers the opportunity to see photographs of all available properties through the office of only one real estate broker.

Cause of Death Declared Natural

NANAIMO — Ernest Hutchings of Nanoose died of natural causes, a coroner's jury ruled at an inquest here Friday. Mr. Hutchings, a logging truck driver, died of a heart attack while working at Northwest Bay, last Monday.

The jury made a strong recommendation that all operators of heavy duty equipment be compelled to take an annual medical checkup.

Japanese Scientists Making Canadian Visit

LONDON (AP) — A group of Japanese scientists who visited British atomic installations last week left here by air for Canada Friday.

Victoria Local To Propose Swing Shift

A resolution from the Victoria local that swing shifts be put into effect in the B.C. lumber industry is expected to be defeated at the District No. 1 convention of the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) in Vancouver this week.

While the Victoria local will state that swing shifts would give all employees equal working conditions, other locals are expected to point out that the plan will interfere with the seniority system which governs day and night shift work.

New York Office Of TCA Robbed

NEW YORK (CP)—A young gunman escaped with $200 Friday after holding up a clerk in the Trans-Canada Air Lines office on East 58th Street. William Murray, the clerk, said he was alone in the office when the man came in, produced a gun and ordered him to put the money in a paper bag. Murray complied with $200 from the cash drawer.

Equal Awards Sought For War Decorations

Equalization of money awards for decorations won by Canadians in the two world wars is being sought by the Veterans of Franch branch of the Canadian Legion in Victoria.

The branch is making representations to Ottawa to have all awards paid by the Canadian government in Canadian currency, and to have the awards paid for the same decorations whether won in the First World War or Second World War.

The U.K. at present pays the awards for First World War decorations in sterling, at about sixpence a day. The Canadian government pays the awards, at 12½ cents a day, for Second World War decorations.

The awards are paid for the Distinguished Conduct Medal, Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (naval and flying) and Distinguished Flying Medal, and, if won since 1943, the Military Cross, Distinguished Service Medal and Military Medal.

Winners of the Victoria Cross receive $50 annuities and 12½ cents a day.

On the Labor Front

IWA Parley To Hear About 'Automation'

BY BILL MAVOR

Automation, a new word and symbol of automatic or self-acting machinery displacing humans, will be explained to the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) convention this week in Vancouver.

E. W. Kenney, research and education directors for the IWA, will explain automation as it is now developing in the lumber industry.

In a special Wednesday evening illustrated lecture, open to wives and friends of delegates, Mr. Kenney will give a glimpse of what the lumber industry may be like in 1975, and what general economic and social conditions may be in 1965.

In past discussions, the research director has stated that automation does not necessarily have to scare workers, but if the unions "intelligently meet the problem it can come about orderly."

He has stated that wage structures may require considerable adjustment, that incentive systems, particularly individual forms of piece work will have to be revised or discarded.

He added that training or retraining problems will require more attention than they have at any time since the Second World War.

An across-the-board wage boost in 1955 for IWA's 32,000 B.C. members will be sought in negotiations with lumber and logging operators.

Resolutions of the 18th annual B.C. district convention have not been released but officials said they show a general demand for an overall wage boost in the industry.

It has been indicated the union will not heed management pleas of inability to pay.

Union officials said high profits marked up by some of B.C.'s biggest lumber operators in 1954 led to the union stand.

It is understood that action to clean Communists out of the IWA will be contained in constitutional amendments rather in direct resolutions across the floor.

Robert Milliken, business agent for the Victoria Teamster's Union (AFL-TLC) will press his opinion that a vehicle testing station should operate in Victoria, and that others should be established in this province.

He said yesterday he will present his arguments before a meeting February 25 at Vancouver of the Joint Council of Teamsters.

Mr. Milliken last week won police department support for his opinion that a testing station is needed in the city to help prevent such infractions as lack of signal arms, lack of rear-view mirrors by both truck and car drivers.

He termed some vehicles on city streets "decrepit."

February 28 has been set for a public hearing by the Board of Industrial Relations on proposals to amend the minimum wage order affecting the construction industry. The hearing, at 2 p.m., will be in the Douglas Building.

Victoria building trades are expected to present briefs along with those from employers.

TLC locals meeting this week include painters, pressmen, bricklayers, Monday; boilermakers, electricians, master plasterers, moulders, Tuesday; TLC council, laundry drivers, Wednesday; milk salesmen, sheet metalworkers, Thursday; laborers, electricians, Friday.

CCL locals meeting are IWA, today; Div. 276, CBRE, Thursday. The labor council has been postponed one week.

The Car Corner

Airport Racing Thrilling Spectacle

BY J. T. JONES

Vancouver Island will have its first sports car racing on May 1, a full day's program at Cassidy Airport just this side of Nanaimo.

For the car enthusiast there are few finer spectacles than [illegible] sprung up since the war as a substitute for road racing. The Sports Car Club of B.C. has been holding races at Abbotsford's airport for some time and this year is adding the Cassidy event to its calendar.

HAS ADVANTAGES

Airport events have several advantages over real road racing and a few disadvantages.

In the first place, they're safer. A car can go completely out of control, get 150 feet off the course and have not even a scratched fender to show for it.

Spectator control is greatly simplified. Almost any kind of course can be laid out on the runways [illegible] easy and fast with [illegible]

Biggest boon to the spectators is the view of the whole race, not just a few hundred yards of it as in a road circuit.

According to information received so far the program will include races for cars with piston displacement less than 1,500 cubic centimeters, 1,500 to 2,000, 2,000 to 3,000 and 3,000 up, both stock and modified.

Fire, flood and earthquake couldn't keep me away from Cassidy Airport on May 1.

* * *

It may be just deep-dyed skepticism but I can't get very excited over the Autolot anti-[illegible] device a couple of Vancouver men were demonstrating in Victoria during the week.

[illegible] bullet weight sliding on a steel shaft and centred by two springs, is supposed to adjust the balance of the car's rear end to add weight to the inside wheel just as a skid starts.

The principle can be demonstrated with a piece of paper and a penny. Put the penny on the centre line of the paper [illegible] the paper to one side, and the penny stays put, although it is now at one side of the paper.

Some of the theory of the Autolot is obscure even to the promoters. Instead of watching the planned demonstration at the B.C. Electric Co. bus parking lot, I went on a test ride with Karl Megger, an executive of the company, at the wheel.

At my suggestion he took his 1955 Pontiac convertible up Mount Douglas and then up the far side of Mount Tolmie. The most impressive thing about the climbs was the view from the top.

Mr. Megger is a skillful driver and he handled the car beautifully, but I think if his heart was in it he could make just about as good a showing in any of the better handling American cars.

Proposed Track Will Preserve Park Setting

Plans of the Island Turf Club for a horse racing track at Beaver Lake are shown above superimposed on an aerial photograph of the area taken by Colonist cameraman Jim Ryan. Project will cost $350,000, not including exhibition buildings. Five-eighth-mile track will be shielded from highway by fence and border of ornamental trees. Covered grandstand will seat 5,000. Ample parking space has been provided and an underpass is planned under the highway leading to a traffic circle to dispense traffic freely. The ground will be preserved as nearly as possible in its natural state and trees will be cut only where necessary to build the track or erect buildings. Company says it is prepared to help create and beautify lakeside parks.

Public Offered Chance To Set Scope of Loan

For the first time in B.C.'s school history a board of school trustees will meet face to face with its electors to find out how much money should be spent on a building program to relieve classroom overcrowding.

Leader Visits

COMMISSIONER BOOTH

Salvation Army Chief

Easy Money Brings Materialism—Booth

BY IAN MACDONALD

Too much easy money has turned Canadians towards materialism, the country's new Salvation Army leader said last night.

"When people have things too easily, they forget God," Commissioner William Wycliffe Booth, grandson of the Army's founder, said during a flying visit to Victoria yesterday.

Appointed last month to command the Canadian and Bermudian divisions, the [illegible] Booth [illegible] Army [illegible] a ready [illegible].

Commissioner Booth appears as though he would be [illegible] capable of commanding an army of [illegible] troops [illegible].

He [illegible] orders and instructions in a brisk [illegible] British accent.

MANY CORNERS

Commissioner Booth was born at High Barnet, England, where the movement was founded 90 years ago and has served in many corners of the world since he joined the Salvation Army movement in 1915.

His Victoria trip is part of a nation-wide tour to inspect his new command. Commissioner Booth arrived in Victoria by air yesterday afternoon and returned to Vancouver last night. He was accompanied by his wife.

BIGGEST PROBLEM

Canada's biggest problem as he sees it is the same as that exists the world over.

"It is to persuade people to come to God," said Commissioner Booth.

High on the Army's list will be a program to combat the growth of juvenile delinquency," said the commissioner.

He expects to see the growth across Canada of villages similar to that recently opened by the Army at London, Ont.

Commissioner Booth says the aim is to have 12 children from broken homes live in each unit under a "father" and "mother."

The children will be of both sexes and varying ages. "The idea of herding boys together and girls together is outdated," he said.

TREMENDOUS NEED

There are many agencies to look after orphans but not so many to handle children from broken homes. "There is a tremendous need for this in Canada," said the commissioner.

He said he had been in Canada only four weeks, too little time to assess the moral fibre of the nation. "But ask me about France, England and the continent," he said. "Practically every nation on earth is building more prisons."

To End 'Injustices'

Industrial Amputees Seek Pension Changes

A three-man delegation of men who lost limbs in industrial accidents will ask Labor Minister Lyle Wicks to remove "inequalities and injustices" in workmen's compensation payments.

They will try to find out, for instance, why one man who [illegible] severed below the knee [illegible] $[illegible] per month, while [illegible].

When J. C. Eastwood was [illegible] Thomas Cay and Thomas Anderson will [illegible].

The decision to approach Mr. Wicks was made at a meeting of the Workmen's Compensation Amputees' Association Friday.

PAYMENTS RAISED

Increases in payments to amputees were made [illegible] under the Workmen's Compensation Act amended during the last session.

The awards are not satisfactory, spokesmen for the amputees declare.

"The awards would be acceptable if we had all been put on an equal basis, but the same injustices have been brought in again," said Mr. Eastwood.

He cited the following instances:

Under the old scale, one man who lost a leg below the knee received $39 a month. Another with the same disability received $15. Under the new scale the pensions were boosted to $74 and $28 respectively. The gap between them remained just as wide.

Under the old scale one man who lost his forearm received $18 a month. Another received $32. The pensions were boosted to $74 and $[illegible] respectively.

EARNINGS AT TIME

The pensions were based on earnings at the time of the accident.

"We were led to believe the increases would be based on a [illegible] the compensation [illegible] amended during the last session," Mr. Eastwood said. "That would mean that the basic rate, irrespective of former earnings, would be $2,000 to a maximum of $2,500."

"The actual payments made do not appear to carry out this intention."

Alert Boys Prevent Arena Fire Danger

Prompt action by three young boys prevented what might have been a serious fire in a dressing room at Memorial Arena yesterday afternoon.

The boys, Ross Ashworth, 14, and Grant [illegible], 14, both of [illegible] Pandora, and Robert Gerald, 13, of 2003 [illegible], were playing at the rear of the arena when they saw smoke coming from a window.

They turned in an alarm and fire trucks were soon at the scene.

The smoke was caused by a smouldering leg pad lying on a [illegible] in a dressing room used by the navy. No losses were laid by the fire department.

Fire Chief Frank Briers thought a carelessly discarded cigarette butt was responsible for the outbreak.

The arena was being used for a public skating session at the time of the blaze.

Conciliation Scheduled For Police

Dispute between the 12-member Esquimalt police department and the municipal police commission over a system of promotions is expected to go to conciliation, The Daily Colonist learned last night.

Negotiations have been stalemated for eight days since policemen asked that their two senior members be given new positions as corporals.

Commission rejected the proposal but suggested that the two men be given a "star" or grade A class, which the policemen rejected. Difference between the two suggestions is said to be $5 a month.

The policemen have generally agreed to a commission offer of a wage increase of $5 a month for all grades except probationers. A bonus of $20 a month for on-call time became part of regular wages when both sides agreed to amalgamation of the police and fire departments March 1 on a trial basis for the rest of this year.

However, it is understood that policemen will notify the commission soon that they have decided to ask for conciliation which may nullify all previous agreements except amalgamation.

Iran's Queen Resents Hint That She Needs Beautifying

BY STELLA MARGOLD

[illegible]

In two exclusive interviews today, 22-year-old Queen Soraya said her attention had been drawn to a Miami press statement indicating there's something wrong with her nose. An operation to beautify it would be helpful, was the way the report was transmitted to the queen.

"It's not so," said Soraya tartly.

She's cross about it, she continued, and even more so because the report even suggested the name of a doctor who allegedly could do her appearance a world of good.

[illegible]

The queen said she assumed the writer who did the report about her nose didn't get a good look at her.

She also had a second bone to pick with the American press and its personal comments. Another reporter, she pointed out, wrote that she has red hair. "Actually," she said, "my hair is black."

While she'd done some shopping in New York and San Francisco stores, Soraya pointed out that she brought all dresses, suits and coats from her native land. She also made plain that she's inclined to frugality. For instance, she's still wearing some of the clothes made for her trousseau by Jacques Fath and Pierre Balmain, the Paris designers.

[illegible] the queen expressed regrets her itinerary hasn't included visits to social welfare institu-

Flys From England For Sister's Wedding

Mr. John Fyler Townsend came by plane from England to give his sister, Audrey Georgina Townsend in marriage when she exchanged vows with Mr. John Ogilvie Leask at a ceremony yesterday morning. Rev. J. [illegible] officiated in St. Francis Xavier Chapel at Mount Rae, which was decorated with red and white tulips for the occasion.

The bride, daughter of Air Commodore and Mrs. E. J. D. Townsend of London, England, chose a wedding gown of white corded silk, styled on classic lines. The skirt, posed over a crinoline, fell into a short train and the long fitted sleeves came to a point over the hands.

Her veil of pure silk tulle, sent from England by her parents, was held in place by a crown of real white hyacinth bells, and she carried a white ivory prayer book with a small spray of lily of the valley.

Miss Janet Leask, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a [illegible] red [illegible] dress styled with [illegible] and gold beads edging the [illegible] neckline. After the church service a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Leask, Queens Point (Cobble Hill).

For her wedding trip Mrs. Leask wore a small black and white check worsted suit, fitting dress with a matching short cape lined with red silk. Her hat was of black velvet and accessories were black. Mr. and Mrs. Leask will make their home in Victoria.

Gay Spring Bonnets Bloom Atop Fur Coats in Montreal

Miss Lavoie (member of the Colonist social staff now en route to England for a six-month stay) stopped in Montreal to write a story on Eastern fashions.

BY DEE LAVOIE

MONTREAL — ...

... women are already topping off their shopping ensembles of ... fur coats and gum boots with perky little spring bonnets.

Montreal, generally personified for being the style center of Canada, ... show ... the West Coast.

The hats for spring are the tiny pancake type to be worn squarely on the head. A favorite trimming note is a single rose drooping over the middle of the forehead.

Most unique hat was one embroidered with colorful straw flowers with an impudent black velvet caterpillar crawling up the back.

THE PANCAKE

Novelty purses are getting a big ... from Montreal stores.

... Bags that are definitely different are the straw ones made in fruit shapes—lemons, limes, and green pears—and the ones made of two straw flower pots joined with a length of fish net.

...

But it's being featured in Montreal for this spring with the newest models having a slightly "twenties" look.

The jackets button from neckline to a lowered waist line for a flat, long torso look, much smarter looking than the earlier versions of the boxy suit.

Now You Can Eat Your Hat

BY BILL GLASS

PARIS (NANA) — An article of apparel that should be useful to lots of people has finally emerged in this city usually devoted to the haute couture.

While Dior, Balenciaga and the other fashion houses unveiled their latest lettered style lines at the current spring fashion shows, a hatter formally revealed a hat which can be eaten and liked. It is made of "edible popcorn" and is said to be durable enough to resist rain, snow and a moderate amount of hail.

In its publicity the hat firm argues that the "highly nutritious" bitable bonnet should be useful to hikers who dislike carrying sandwiches. It is also suggested for the particular attention of all persons given to making rash statements and backing them up with the traditional hat-eating offer.

TV Talk

BY ROY PARRETT

Victoria-based ships of the Second Canadian Minesweeper Squadron, RCN, will be seen in action on channel 2 today.

Three ships, the HMCS Comox, HMCS James Bay and HMCS Fortune will be shown battling 50 mile per hour winds, while on actual minesweeping operations.

Cameraman Paul Johnson spent several days at sea with the squadron, to record the action.

The minesweeping squadron the first to be established on this coast, was formed last year and is commanded by Commander J. V. Steele.

The ships and crews will be seen on local TV screens, via CBUT, on News Magazine at 7 tonight.

* * *

The Lone Ranger will be seen on KING-TV, in an hour-long "spectacular," this afternoon at 5.

The story of the masked law man, his horse Silver, and Tonto his faithful Indian companion, will be told, as a salute to the program, which began on radio 22 years ago today.

* * *

Hall of Fame tells the story of the first schools in Europe, and of an Englishman's long battle against laws which made education unlawful, except for the privileged few, on KOMO-TV at 5.

* * *

Captain Gallant, a true-to-life desert adventure series, filmed with the co-operation of the French Foreign Legion, begins on channel 4, at 5.30. Buster Crabbe stars in the title role, supported by real Legion troops and Arabs.

* * *

The Life of John Milton, and the troubles which beset him after Cromwell's rule ended, is tonight's You Are There documentary on KTNT-TV at 6.

You Asked For It, tonight brings a pair of nervy females to channel 5 viewers at 7. One of the daring damsels, Betty Fox, performs on top of a tiny platform on a 125-foot tower. Another Betty, Betty Skelton of the Dodge Motor Company, and the only woman test driver, jockeys a car at top speed over the Detroit proving grounds, on the show.

"Always a clear, sharp picture on a needle-nose TV set."

Toast of the Town features a "Cavalcade of Radio 1920-1955," starring many of radio's well-known personalities on CBUT at 8. If you didn't catch the show on KTNT-TV, be sure to see it tonight on channel 2.

A host of stars, including the Don Cossack Chorus and Les Paul and Mary Ford will be seen on Ed Sullivan's Show on KTNT-TV, also at 8.

* * *

Maurice Ravel's satirical opera "L'Heure Espagnole" will be the CBC-TV presentation on CBUT at 10. The opera pokes fun at operas generally and carries to extremes standard operatic devices. Even the musical score pokes fun at the actors themselves. Tommy Tweed will introduce the work and explain the plot.

* * *

Two hilarious comedies are scheduled for late viewing. KVOS-TV presents "Topper Returns" at 9.30, and CBUT "I Married a Witch" at 11.

* * *

Monday's Late Shows: "Breakdown," with William Bishop and Ann Richards, on KVOS-TV at 10.

"Larceny In Her Heart," starring Hugh Beaumont, on KTNT-TV at 10.15.

The old silent movie "The Eagle," starring Rudolph Valentino, with music added, on KOMO-TV at 11.

Kaiser Deal 'Repugnant' To UBC Young Liberals

The Social Credit government's plan for the Kaiser dam project is similar to "repugnant" Social Credit legislation enacted in Alberta during the 1930s, a Victoria Liberal Association meeting was told Friday.

Darrell Anderson of Chilliwack, one of 24 members of the UBC Young Liberals Club who visited the legislature Friday praised the federal decision to block the deal.

Mr. Anderson, was one of five members who took part in a panel discussion of current B.C. problems during the meeting. Victoria speakers were Cecil Brown and Brian Cox.

Byron Johnson, former premier, said of the Kaiser dam plan, "I have never seen any provincial government use such poor judgment."

Speaking from the floor, he urged Liberals to be prepared to answer questions on the right of the federal government to block such legislation.

SPANISH ORE

Bilbao in Spain has long owed its prosperity to large iron ore deposits in the vicinity.

Parley Held By Regiment

First all-Island conference of Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) since artillery units up-Island were taken over by the infantry regiment is under way in Victoria.

Key personnel of the regiment from Courtenay, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Duncan and Victoria met at Bay Street Armoury yesterday and are continuing their conference today.

Attending are company commanders, seconds-in-command, training officers, cadet officers, sergeants-major and quartermaster sergeants.

Tax Violates Principles, Says Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) A Vancouver lawyer said yesterday the new property assessment tax is a violation of the fundamental principles of taxation law and said the tax on machinery was a "penalty" and not a tax.

F. Kay Collins said the section of the municipal act of assessment act on property brought down by the Social Credit government was also contrary to the Canadian constitution, outside the powers of the provincial legislature, and by-passed the requirements of the city charter.

Under the section, a property owner may be assessed for his tenant's machinery.

Mr. Collins said it was possible a landlord's property could be put up for tax sale because a tenant was delinquent in paying taxes.

The court of revision, made up of three aldermen, reserved judgment until Tuesday. Should judgment favor the store operators, the case would probably be taken to court.

Hospital Sued Over Cremation

As a result, the blessing of the remains by the Catholic church was denied. Edward Wojcik, 30, and his wife, Wanda, 28, related The Roman Catholic Church views cremation as a pagan rite.

The bidding

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♠	Dbl.	Redbl	Pass
Pass	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl
All pass

It may seem that North pushed the bidding a little and could have contented himself with a bid of three spades, but ten-twelve points in high cards seemed worth more. It at least put the strong West hand back on South's hand as soon the four spade bid was a not unreasonable gamble.

West opened the ace of clubs. How should South play the rest of his hand to give himself the best chance to make four spades?

From the bidding, it should be obvious that East has little or nothing beyond long spades and since the opening lead all minor honor cards should fall on one ace and five of the outstanding trumps. Declarer's base is going to be the ♠J. Instead of ruffing himself to establish the three outstanding aces and its dependent on the opponents. West is perhaps the more dangerous of the two opponents, because it is West who is the king of trade under West's ace.

Assuming a club diamond shift from West, the point of attack is obvious. Nothing is gained by taking tricks in the South to discard a heart and South then leads a heart toward dummy's queen. West ducks and wins the king and returns the ♡J, just East is in position to ruff the third round again and East can lead one round of trumps, which is dummy. But taking one trick away from trumps is a small price to pay for establishing the diamond suit and to take a ruff in dummy and to have a card in dummy with which to lead to South's ♡A. South is assured of making three tricks with his winning suit of spades.

If declarer fails to drop Southern king of trumps under the ace however West continues a club and South cannot get to dummy in time to give North a heart discard except by ruffing one of North's spade winners. West will then lead a trump trick and South is left to lose a trump trick and tricks in his defense. If North's trump queen is not West's lead, if declarer tried to get out of dummy by leading a diamond East will win with the queen of diamonds and the extra diamond trick will cost declarer the game.

Colonist Writer Offers Tips To Would-Be U.K. Immigrants

HARRY YOUNG

Prospective British immigrants to Canada have received a briefing from Harry Young, business editor of The Daily Colonist, who is vacationing in his native Scotland. Following are excerpts from a recent broadcast Mr. Young made at the invitation of the BBC on the topic, "Going to Canada."

"The facts of the matter are that at the moment Canada does not seem to have a very good rating so far as possible immigration is concerned.

"This is unfortunate, for Canada has probably never been in greater need of maintaining a flow of new citizens from Britain.

"It seems to me that the British people are getting their picture of Canadian life chiefly from those who have emigrated to Canada and who have failed to settle down.

"I'LL CRY--- Tomorrow"

By LILLIAN ROTH

CHAPTER XV

SO when Burt and I returned to Los Angeles from the Australian-New Zealand tour, Katie was on hand to greet us.

We took a little house in Santa Monica, and Burt found a job with an advertising agency. Things began to look up for me also—I obtained a booking at Ciro's, in Hollywood.

I sent wires to many of the stars I had worked with. [illegible]

The big night arrived, but few of the stars were [illegible] me.

[illegible]

THEN—NOTHING

Then nothing happened after the Ciro's engagement. [illegible]

During the next few months with so much time on my hands I read a great deal. I was particularly impressed by [illegible]

I spoke to several Roman Catholic priests [illegible] some embarrassment, for my motive was not always understood. They tried to be helpful but they were [illegible] And the Church looks on these matters very seriously," one told me.

RESPONSIVE CHORD

Burt's mother wrote me and in one letter she enclosed a gift of two rosaries [illegible] Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Hollywood [illegible] Burt and I went in to have them blessed.

I stared. How would a priest know the name of a nightclub entertainer?

"We received a letter some time ago from Father Richard Murphy in Sydney," he explained. "He thought you'd be along here one of these days."

Captain Made Wilderness Blossom In Portland And Victoria

By JAMES K. NESBITT

IT was the most beautiful monument ever erected in Victoria!

It was built more than 80 years ago, and today it still stands, crumbling a bit, but a link with Victoria's pioneer past.

A retired sea captain built it in memory of his wife, and, in due course, he too was buried beneath it.

MORE FISH FOR FOOD

Talks Hope to Boost Ocean's Yield

By A. I. GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

THE first world conference on fisheries under UN auspices meets in Rome this spring to study how to make the oceans — and inland waters, too—yield more fish for the world's food supply.

At present, only 10 per cent of the animal protein consumed by the world comes from its waters, although water makes up 75 per cent of the globe's surface.

The technical experts now being summoned from all over the world to meet at the Rome headquarters of the UN's Food and Agricultural Organization in April will have as one of their major assignments the job of mapping out ways of increasing the productivity of the waters.

NOT ONLY PROBLEM

But this will not be their only problem. As the accompanying map shows, there are sections of the seas were intense commercial operation is endangering the fish supply. Conservation measures to be discussed at Rome may restore fishing grounds in 140,000,000 square miles of the world's oceans now in danger of being fished out.

Conservation rules of some sort might also save other areas still largely untapped but in possible future danger from unregulated operation of radio and sonar-equipped fleets, which can range further, stay out longer and catch more fish than anything known in the past.

One large field will be barred from discussion at the Rome meeting: the question of international law and national rights to the fishing grounds themselves. As can be seen on the map, most fishing areas are adjacent to land areas.

HOW FAR OUT?

In dispute is how far a country has jurisdiction out onto the waters of its coastline, whether ocean limits should be 3 or 4 or 12 miles—or 200 miles as Peru wants.

These are all part of the problem that is one portion political, one portion legal and one portion just the simple matter of how to insure a livelihood around the countries where fishing and canning are major industries.

The UN's International Law Commission has been trying for several years to codify these problems. There has been a general understanding that the legal questions should not be dealt with until all the rest are considered.

But the United States insisted at the Ninth General Assembly late last year that fishery conservation was a question of utmost urgency because the world's food supply was affected. International co-operation for conservation was needed to head off individual action by countries for self protection.

Latin - American dissenters from this view finally agreed to the conservation conference in Rome, but only on the promise legal regulations would not be considered.

The United States is one of the big seven in the fish producing world. It has eight fishing treaties with 20 other countries and its viewpoint on the question was a powerful one.

RUSSIA OPPOSED

The Russians, also one of the big seven, opposed the conference. They said it should wait until all legal kinks are ironed out, which might have delayed the meeting until 1957 or beyond.

Many experts feel such a delay might have a disastrous effect. There are seas off Chile where commercial tuna fisheries may some day rival the tuna hunts of the northern Pacific. It is in areas like this, where countries now insist on broad bands of territorial ocean to protect the canning and fishing industries they hope to build up, that conservation spokesmen argue measures should be set up immediately to protect the fish and keep the grounds producing.

Areas around the British Isles, east to Norway and west to Iceland, have seen a dwindling of cod and hake catches, alarming the fishermen of those countries.

But the herring catch in that region set new records, especially around Norway last winter.

MORE SALMON

The U.S. West Coast has had a run of bad fishing. California pilchards eluded the fishermen. Canning industries had to import Japanese catches to fill tuna needs.

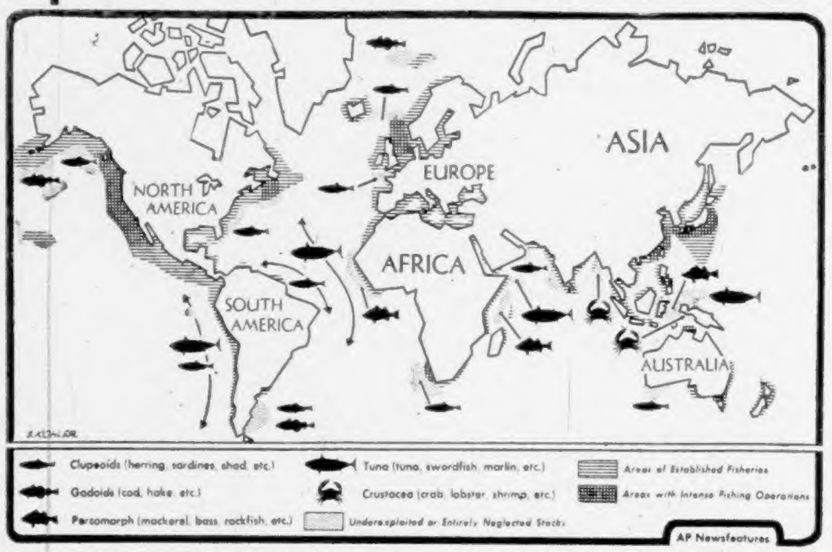
Canada recently has had more salmon. There were fewer cod in 1953 along the eastern coast of North America but more herring.

The North Atlantic fisheries commission meeting at Ottawa in June and the maritime conference of the Organization of American States meeting probably in July will have a lot to say about legal as well as conservation matters in this part of the world. The Rome meeting could develop powerful helps for those regional sessions.

FAO has sponsored numerous regional fishery conferences where ocean fishing is discussed but where the dominant problem is stocking inland rivers, lakes, ponds—even irrigation ditches and rice fields—with fresh water fish.

This is part of the FAO program to bring high protein food cheaply to the protein-starved peoples of underdeveloped countries.

Inland water and fish conservation programs rank high in many UN countries and the conferences have been valuable in exchanging ideas on techniques, motorizing fishing craft, and even introducing new types of fish—like the fast growing and meaty tilapia—into new areas of the world.



Priest Seeks "Godparents" for DP's

HUY, Belgium (NANA)—A Belgian priest whose office is in a garret in this little Ardennes town has opened an international campaign to find help for Europe's forgotten legions—the estimated 250,000 whom no nation will accept as citizens.

The motto above the door of 44-year-old Father Pire, a Dominican father, reads: "Once upon a time there were human beings like you."

With some of the displaced person cases dating back to the Second World War, the number of DPs grows daily as more refugees risk the barbed-wire entanglements and machine guns to cross the Iron Curtain. After being interrogated, most are consigned to a camp in Germany, Austria or Italy on an indefinite basis.

Along with their children, they cannot find acceptance by any state simply because they have no measurable use.

Confronted by the flotsam and jetsam of humanity, Father Pire has inaugurated a "crusade," whose initial move was a search abroad for "godparents"—people who can afford to give help, or least write letters to destroy the DP's feeling that they are lost and hopeless.

More than 7,000 of the DP families have thus been provided with a "distant godparent," Father Pire said in an interview. The guardians have been located as far afield as the Belgian Congo, in the United States, Britain, France and Scandinavia.

"We want many more godparents," said one of the priest's assistants—most of them young Belgian girls who have volunteered for what Father Pire calls "my crusade."

The salutary effect on the DP's of contact with the outside world is startling, the priest declared.

As another phase of his "crusade," Father Pire has established a number of homes here for elderly people from the camps.

Even more tragic than the cases of the aged, the priest said, are those involving tuberculosis, a comparatively common ailment among the camp residents. Frequently the TB-stricken are accepted into sanatoria and are cured, but then, returned to the squalor of camp life, find the disease attacking anew.

In Father Pire's plans are Austrian training centres which would equip the DPs for acceptance as citizens. But Belgium thus far is the only country willing to allow entry of the elderly DPs—and then only on the basis of the priest's guarantee to bear the whole cost of their support.

Most Iron Curtain refugees and expelees are not so fortunate as to find a haven like the one the priest offers. Some attracted attention when they escaped — like the courageous grandfather who brought his family of four to the west after a two-day journey concealed in a load of timber, and the eight Czechs who made a dramatic charge to freedom in a home-made "tank."

After a preliminary questioning, these refugees, like the others, were taken to a centre for exhaustive interrogation intended both to gain information on Russia and her satellites, and to detect refugees planted by the Communist governments. Some, too, have crossed the curtain to escape criminal justice.

When these checks are finished, the fugitive becomes a DP, and is sent to a camp. There he is given a medical examination, provided with clothing, and assigned to a hut. He waits for a visa to a future land of adoption. At present this waiting period—for those accepted—averages anywhere from one to five years.

Many may not be accepted by any country at all, however. The old, the sick, the helpless and the children often cannot fulfill immigration requirements. In Austria, for instance, of the 8,000 escapees who have arrived since March, 1952, only 2,000 have found sanctuaries in the free countries of the world.

It is the other 6,000—and the thousands more like them—that Father Pire has in mind as the targets of his "crusade."

THE FAMOUS FIFTH

Shades Recall Unit's Early Days

The first in a series of the 76-year history of Victoria's 5th (B.C.) Coast Artillery Regiment—the oldest militia regiment west of the Great Lakes. The 5th has now been amalgamated with the 72nd Heavy Anti-Aircraft Regiment, 139th Heavy Anti-Aircraft Battery (Prince Rupert), 8 Anti-Aircraft Operations Room. Combined these make up the new 5th West Coast Harbor Defence Batteries. Lieut.-Col. Keith Dixon is the last commanding officer of the Famous Fifth.

BY WILLIAM McCARTHY

VICTORIA'S Bay Street Armoury is silent and dark. The huge front door has been locked and the night-time soldiers have departed, leaving the cavernous building empty. Another parade night is over.

In the artillery officers' mess a shaft of moonlight slants in from leaded windows across dark oak-panelled walls and falls lightly on two chairs. These are occupied; but the figures of two men, dressed in garb of another era, leave no impress on the leather cushions.

The pale pair sit cross-legged, arms folded across their chests.

"... and spirit or not, Gunner, I tell you it's going to make a difference to us," says the taller of the two, wearing a dark-stained bandage about his head.

His companion does not answer.

"It's different with the rest of you," he continues. "But I was with the 5th in '78 when it was only a battery of artillery with a couple of bronze howitzers on rotting carriages."

"That's a long time ago," states the other pensively.

"ONLY NAME?"

"It's 76 years, Gunner. And ever since I caught a Boer bullet at Paardeburg in 1900 I've been coming to the 5th officer's mess no matter where it was. Now I don't like the idea of strangers coming in."

"But when the 5th Coast regiment amalgamates and becomes the 5th West Coast Harbor Defense Battery it only means a change in name," the smaller figure replies quietly.

"Only a name change!" exclaims the other hotly. "There's tradition in that name; tradition you and I helped build. Why, I remember the first time I ever heard of the unit. An advertisement in The Colonist, Feb. 17, 1878 said:

"'Persons desirous of enrolling themselves as a volunteer artillery corps are urgently requested to report themselves to the Drill Shed between 12 a.m. and 2 p.m.'

BRIEF VISIT

"That was when it looked like Britain was going to enter the Russo-Turkish war and here was the Pacific Coast undefended. There was a call to arms also posted at the corner of Government and Yates—we called it Campbell's Corner then.

"The day after that ad went in the Colonist a Russian gunboat steamed into Esquimalt. As it turned out the gunboat captain didn't even know about the trouple and he cleared out the next day.

"Victoria's population in those days was only about 14,000 but in three hours enough of us had reported to the Drill Shed to bring the unit up to strength. We went right to work and put up a two-gun battery at Finlayson Point and another in Beacon Hill.

NO UNIFORMS

"I recall most of the boys in what was then called Victoria Battery of Artillery. Our C.O. was Capt. C. T. Dupont with David Garrick McNaughton, first lieutenant, and A. W. Jones, second lieutenant.

"We didn't have uniforms at the time and no fences around the batteries. Cows wandered over the parapets and people used to fill the guns with sticks and stones and throw the quoins and tamplons away.

"Well, the Russo-Turkish war petered out about a month later but our unit kept right on growing. After a while we got more and better guns and the 85 other ranks were all issued uniforms.

CITY VOTED FUNDS

"The unit underwent some name changes a few years later and we took in the Seymour Battery of New Westminster and three other Victoria batteries.

"The 5th (B.C.) Regiment was organized as a regiment October 12, 1883 and people were begining to take notice of us. Why, when the first summer camp was held at Beacon Hill the people of Victoria were so enthusiastic the Municipal Council voted $200, plus fuel and water, to help the camp.

"I was one of the detatchment from the unit that went to Wellington in '90 to put down a riot. We got official commendation for the job. In '97 I went with a detachment to England for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee celebration.

"But our first big job came with the outbreak of the Boer War. Although we were stampeded by volunteers only one officer and 25 other ranks were selected. Capt. M. G. Blanchard led us.

"We left Victoria October 22 in 1899 and most of Victoria turned out to send us off. As a matter of fact, they raised $2,000 to make the trip more comfortaable.

"Five of us were killed in South Africa and Capt. Blanshard died of wounds. That's when you might say my official connection with the 5th was severed," The tall figure pauses and fingers the bandage on his head.

Finally the second figure speaks: "Yes, you chaps made quite a name for yourselves. I saw your names on a brass plaque at the entrance to the old armoury when I joined the Fifth.

"But we had a lot of activity after that, especially during the First World War. Let's see, I signed up in 1906 . . ."

This is possibly the only picture of the first days of the 5th (B.C.) Regt.—the oldest militia regiment west of the Great Lakes. Photo was taken at the Finlayson Point Battery July 29, 1878, a few months after the unit was formed. Uniforms were not issued until several months later. Sitting on mound (centre), wearing a top hat is Capt. C. T. Dupont, the first commanding officer.

Exclusive Boardinghouse For Bonn's Young Only

BONN (NANA) — Pensions which will accept elderly boarders are a dime-a-dozen in Europe. But there's only one which will accept only babies.

This exclusive boarding house for the younger set is located in the spa city of Bad Godesberg, and came into being because of the terrific housing shortage in Bonn, West Germany's capital city.

The pensioners form a truly international group. They are the offspring of diplomats from all over the world as well as German government workers and tourists. Among the tots is an occasional American.

Existence of the establishment focuses attention on the mushrooming of this small university town into a hustling metropolis—albeit the city is the smallest of Europe's capitals.

Operator of the establishment is a 35-year-old German medical student who, during the war, was a cavalry officer and later a riding instructor for the United States first infantry division when the unit was stationed in Bad Tolz in Bavaria.

The student, Martin Niemoller, a nephew of famed pastor Martin Niemoller, took advantage of the fluctuating housing situation near Bonn and opened the baby-pension while continuing his medical studies at the University of Munich.

He boards up to 20 tots, ages ranging from seven days to 18 months. He and his wife, Gisella, a nurse, are assisted by three nurses and a German baby doctor. The pension is named after Mrs. Niemoller, whose grandfather, as a chief physician in St. Petersburg, was killed in the 1917 Russian Revolution.

Niemoller's idea has clicked in the Bonn area because the rapid growth of the locale, since West Germany, has posed the problem of "what to do with junior." Diplomats, government workers and the droves of strangers who descended upon Bonn found a community which just couldn't take care of the influx. It caused mental strain, particularly for persons with infant children.

Word about the new-type pension began to circulate. Word-of-mouth advertising resulted in 321 tots being listed on the guest book in the pension's 13 months of operation.

Parents are free to enter the pension at all hours. Some attend regularly at meal hours, others come in at bedtime. One little fellow whose mother died at his birth is visited daily by his father.

"We try to keep the atmosphere as close to home life as possible," says Niemoller. "We do everything to avoid its looking like an institution."

Most of the infants are in for weeks at a time, some longer. Others are left there overnight—on a baby-sitting basis. These stay in an "isolation room" in which, incidentally, all youngsters spend their first few nights.

Niemoller's three nurses are registered and are selected by Niemoller and his wife on the principle consideration that they must love infants.

"We haven't had a single serious incident," said Niemoller, a short, stockily built man with an open, smiling face.

"But, I can't ask for a new house, dear—the genie has allowed me only three wishes!"

'Box Break' Key To Mambo

By ARTHUR MURRAY

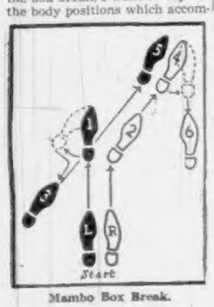
The mambo box break is the main item on today's agenda. Learn how to do it here, with America's top dancing master, Arthur Murray, as your personal instructor.

LESSON III

HOW have you been doing so far? Isn't the Mambo deceptively easy? And isn't it a lot of fun? No wonder we find this enchanting dance enjoying such great popularity wherever you go from coast to coast these days. And we have still more simple—but polished—steps in store for you in these lessons.

Today I'd like to take up the box break with you. This step has two key roles for any mambo enthusiast: First, it's a vital foundation step, and secondly, it's a characteristic mambo break, with that quick, decisive rhythm which gives the mambo an enchantment all its own.

Before we take up the actual step-by-step pattern of the box break, I want to explain the body positions which accompany it. The box break begins with what we call the open position. When you start, you and your partner are facing.



Mambo Box Break.

On the first count, the man releases the girl with his right arm while extending his left arm to hold her—what you might call a martial "throwing her away" motion. On the second count, the partners turn to a side-by-side position, the man's left shoulder close to the girl's right. On the third step, they do a backward break. They swing around to face each other on the second half of the pattern.

As you can see in practice, you start facing your partner, open the position with the "throwing away" movement, then join side by side, and finally face to face in conventional pattern.

Here's the man's part for the box break:

1—Forward on left foot, slow count. (This is when he does the "throwing away" movement).

2—Step to side on right foot, quick count. (This is where the partners come into side-by-side position).

3—Backward break on left foot, quick count.

4—Forward on right foot, slow count.

5—Left foot up to right, quick count. (Coming around face to face).

6—Backward break, right foot, quick count.

And the girl's part:

1—Step back on right foot, slow count.

2—Step to side on left foot, quick count.

3—Backward break on right foot, quick step.

6—Backward break on left foot, quick count.

After executing this six-step pattern, round out the 12-count routine by going into the mambo box step, which we learned in the first lesson.

★ ★ ★

Easy to do: Of course, it is. It will take a bit of practice to give the steps the free and easy motions you want, but there's no special knack needed. Anyone can learn to do the mambo—or any other dance—quickly and easily, if he'll only practice faithfully. Work it over, step by step, until you have it down cold. Then try it with a partner.

Next Week: An unusual variation of the box break.

ARTHUR MURRAY SAYS:

1—When you're out with a crowd, it's poor taste to dance with only one partner.

2—Girls should say, "I enjoyed that dance"—and not, "Thanks"—when a number ends.

3—Men should not ask permission of a girl's escort when, they want to dance with her. She's not copyrighted you know.

4—Girls are being rude when they refuse to dance with one man, then step off with another.

5—Dancing is fun. Show it when you're out!

When out with a crowd don't dance with only one partner.

Ring-Neck Passed Up, Taken for Coast Blue-Bill

THE ring-necked duck is a diving duck about the size of a lesser scaup (lesser blue-bill) and it superficially resembles that bird. In the adult male the head and neck are black with a purplish or greenish irridescence when seen in proper light. The chest and back are also black; the belly white on the forward part, dulling out to brownish black on the abdomen.

The sides are finely vermiculated in grey and white plumage blending into the white underparts below and clearly delineated from the black above, forming a distinctive crescent-shaped outline at the shoulder. The black of the neck is separated from that of breast by a narrow chestnut-colored band for which the bird is named. The wings carry a distinctive grey speculum. In silhouette these birds are readily distinguished from the scaups by the shape of the head, round in the latter but pointed in the ring-neck due to long elevated feathers on the crown, which give the bird a crested appearance. The bill is distinctive also, having a black tip and two whitish bands, one at the base and one separating the blue of the midsection from the black tip. For this reason the ring-neck is often called the ring-billed duck.

Females are drab in color; the head greyish brown, sometimes with a white throat. The back is brown darkening towards the tail and the flanks are also brown with the feathers edged in white. Underparts are white mottled and deepening to a dusky brown on the belly. The bill characteristics and the grey speculum of the wing are similar to those of the male and readily distinguish this bird from female scaups.

The main nesting area for the ring-neck extends on a diagonal from the 60th parallel southeast to the Great Lakes encompassing a relatively narrow strip in the central part of the continent. There is a breeding population in the Maritimes and in British Columbia as well, centred here in the Caribou parklands and northwest to the Bulkley Valley.

During the winter months these beautiful little ducks are not uncommon in the Gulf Islands, the Puget Sound area, on Vancouver Island and casually on the Queen Charlottes. They are not plentiful, however, and seem to confine themselves to certain favored localities showing a marked preference for fresh water ponds and lakes. They are often taken in the Campbell River, Sayward area during the winter, and almost every small lake at the south end of Vancouver Island harbor a few wintering ring-necks.

The main wintering areas are situated in the southeastern United States and in western Oregon and California.

The ring-neck, though a diving duck, subsists about 80 per cent on vegetable matter, whereas most of the divers, apart from the redhead and canvas-back feed largely on animal matter. The lesser scaup feeds on vegetable matter to 60 per cent and is often palatable, but on the coast the far more common greater scaup feeds largely upon small mussels and clams and is, as a rule, a poor table bird.

Many humans pass up the scaups or blue-bills and discard those that are shot by mistake, thus many fine ring-necks have been passed up simply because the hunter failed to differentiate them from the unpalatable coastal blue-bills.

Smoky Air Suspected As Lung Cancer Cause

LONDON (NANA)—Two British scientists report progress in experiments designed to discover if there is a link between smoky city air and lung cancer. Many medical authorities blame the upsurge in this disease on cigarette smoking.

Professor George Clemo—one of Britain's top organic chemists—said he had isolated two chemicals from the air in Newcastle-upon-Tyne which produced cancers in mice. He filtered the air through thick cotton wool, Clemo explained, then extracted three liquids from the oily black smudge which resulted.

These liquids were tested on mice by Dr. E. W. Miller at the Royal Victoria Infirmary.

Two of the liquids produced tumors in the mice within six to 12 months, Clemo declared. Of 29 mice tested, 12 developed tumors, he said.

Concluded Prof. Clemo: "It is clear that city smoke has a marked carcinogenic (cancer-producing) action."

But the professor has momentarily exonerated one culprit in the hunt for the cause of lung cancer: he at first suspected, he said, that diesel-oil fumes might be a cancer-producing agent. He and Miller analyzed the chemicals obtained from bus exhaust, Clemo explained. But none of them produced tumors in mice, he said. "The experiments are continuing," Prof. Clemo declared.

"Don't tell me you haven't seen a dog bury a bone before."

Day—Place—Murder Makes Fascinating Tale

THE DAY LINCOLN WAS SHOT. By Jim Bishop. New York: Harper & Son.

THE people of the United States were more deeply shocked by the assassination of Abraham Lincoln than by any other single event in its long history. The grim and intensely dramatic story of his murder at the hands of a megalomaniac actor in Washington's Ford's Theatre has been told in thousands of books, but never before have the fateful hours that preceded his death been reported in more detail than in Jim Bishop's "The Day Lincoln Was Shot."

Actually, Mr. Bishop has been assembling material about "a day, a place, and a murder" for 25 years. It begins at 7 a.m. on Friday, April 14, 1865, when Abraham Lincoln left his bedroom, fatigued from a restless night and an ominous dream: it ends at 7.22 the following morning, when an army surgeon pressed silver coins on the President's eyelids.

During that day and night every act of the President, every remembered word he uttered and those of the men and women he met are recorded, and with them the words and movements of the four conspirators.

There is evidence that Lincoln was aware that he would be killed, as his dreams had told him. For weeks there had been guards posted before his bedroom door and at the entrance to the White House, and guards attended him wherever he went. And yet when he drove with Mrs. Lincoln to the theatre that evening he was cheerful, almost gay, as if he was prepared and ready for martyrdom. He did not want to attend the performance of "Our American Cousin," but he had formed the habit of obeying his neurotic wife.

The President was sitting relaxed and smiling when the bullet struck. . . .

In less than a half-hour the streets of Washington were crowded with hysterical, screaming and cursing people. By daylight the appalling news was known throughout the nation.

Some of the most absorbing pages in "The Day Lincoln Was Shot" are devoted to the strange manoeuvers of the conspirators, who, aside from Booth and Anna Surratt, were worthless and stupid creatures; but all of Mr. Bishop's pages are fascinating in various ways, and especially in evidence that Lincoln had expected that he would some day be assassinated, and that he was certain of it on the day when he was shot.

Author of Best Sellers Talked—Then Wrote

AFTER Helen MacInnes was graduated from Glasgow University, she went to University College in London to take a course in the English novel, but nobody had ever said to her, "You must be a writer some day," because, according to her Highland upbringing, "that would be putting ideas in your head and flattering you."

Instead, the author of "Pray for a Brave Heart" (Harcourt, Brace) married a young don at Oxford, Gilbert Highet, "and talked and talked novels but never wrote one," for a long time anyway. It wasn't until just after the outbreak of war in 1939 that she got started.

"My husband was very busy getting ready to get into it," she recalled during an interview, "and he said, 'What about that novel you are always going to write? It will save me getting a book out of the library for you every day.'" To warm up she began keeping a current affairs diary, and after a time Mr. Highet, who now teaches at Columbia University, said of it in his brisk way: "Now, you're cooking. Why don't you start on that novel?"

"So," she said, "'Above Suspicion' came out of it. At first she was aghast at the thought of its reception, but by the time the book was released in 1941 she was already nine chapters deep into "Assignment in Brittany" and didn't give a snapped finger for what anybody thought about her writing.

Seven best-selling books later Miss MacInnes told us she regards her suspense novels as contemporary history—"a special kind of history that we are accustomed to think of as the cold war." In that atmosphere, "Pray for a Brave Heart," her latest, deals specifically with the intellectual in action, the man of goodwill with an adept, trained mind who comes up against the problem of what Miss MacInnes referred to as "natural law: the law that says we are above animals; therefore we have certain standards of behavior and treatment of our fellow-man."

HELEN MacINNES

"When last war was on," she said, "we know quite well that an enormous amount of intellectuals went and volunteered, doing everything from being in the marines to government work, sometimes very, very dangerous work. Well, they all did it willingly, and it seems to me that we ought to remember it; that, when called upon, the honest intellectual will respond. It seemed to me an interesting thing that there are some men (thank God for them!) who, even when faced with something they don't really want to do, feel they have got to do it. I think they do it in peacetime as well as in wartime."

Miss MacInnes' characters are never fascimiles, even in part, of people she has known (and thus, she laughed, she has kept all her friends), but she had "heard realiably" about a young woman whose history was comparable with the Bronte Francesca's in her book. And her plot was further stimulated by the theft of the jade collection owned by the Rothchilds in France, as well as her husband's experiences tracking down Nazi loot in 1945 and 1946.

The current book's setting is Switzerland, and we asked Miss MacInnes if she had ever considered using the States as a locale for a tale of international intrigue. "Oh yes," she replied. "I saw Glacier Park full of possibilities. It's so near the Canadian border. I would sit there and watch tourists come in and go out, completely unchecked, and one or two did not look like tourists at all if you ask me! I think it would be very possible to write an excellent suspense story laid in New York, but I doubt if many people would accept it, because it is difficult for us walking down Fifth Avenue to realize that someone in this little tearoom or bar is meeting someone with a special edition of a rather strange newspaper folded in a certain way. But I am sure the people who go in for it are not asleep, and they are very clever. Didn't Fuchs do that?"

TV's Jackie Gleason Man of Many Talents

By MARGARET McMANUS

ON the night of Wednesday, February 2, at 10 p.m. (EST), when the lights of the great White Way sparkle on millions of television screens, and the curtain went up on the CBS-TV dramatic series, "The Best of Broadway," Jackie Gleason portrayed the leading role in "The Show-Off."

Any way you look at it, Mr. Gleason, comedian, composer, actor, is in good company.

The "Best of Broadway" series has featured some of the finest performers of the theatre, including Fredric March, Helen Hayes, Monty Woolley, Billie Burke and numerous others.

Actors who have played Mr. Gleason's role of Piper, in previous productions of "The Show-Off," were Louis John Bartels, Lee Tracey and Raymond Walburn. All told, this is a rather distinguished association.

Mr. Gleason, however, is a man rapidly becoming accustomed to distinction.

IMPRESSIVE DEAL

Having just completed the most impressive financial deal in TV history, this particular dramatic performance was only one more phase in this life of high adventure.

He was happy to play the part of Piper, but he thinks it only reasonable that a comedian should also be a good actor.

In the comparatively quiet inner sanctum of his offices at the Park Sheraton Hotel, in a room removed from the flurry and busyness of the outer reception room, Jackie Gleason sat at his desk, chain-smoking cigarettes and drinking coffee.

"NOT THIS RICH"

A large man, wearing Oxford grey trousers and a pink shirt, monogrammed with a small, navy blue jig, his manner was almost reticent when he discussed his new CBS contract, which guarantees him $7,000,000 from October, 1955 to October, 1957.

"I guess I never expected to make this much money," he said. "I always thought I'd be rich enough some day, but not this rich. But money's not everything, you know. There's satisfaction, too.

"I tell myself that I'm not so interested in money and luxuries and material things, but maybe that's because I've got all the luxuries and more money than I need."

Mr. Gleason, Brooklyn-born, would seem to be an honest man.

He explains his never-ceasing activity, and the wide range of his interests this way.

PLEASURE IS WORK

"My pleasure is work," he said. "I don't go much for parties. I don't play golf. I haven't got hobbies, for hobbies' sake. I just have work."

JACKIE GLEASON

He said he had time for so much, and such a variety, of activities, because he doesn't sleep well.

"I can never get to sleep until 4 a.m.," he said, "so, while everybody else is knocking off eight or nine hours, I fiddle around with the piano, or I write, or I paint, but mostly I read. When I'm reading, I'm learning."

He said he never read novels.

"I don't have time for novels. I really need books which give me something educational."

In the field of popular music, Mr. Gleason is becoming almost as well known as he is in the field of comedy, both as a composer and a conductor of music.

BEST SELLERS

The music he composed for the ballet, "Tawney," is a best-selling record album, as are a series of albums entitled "Music for Lovers Only," which he conducted "in a special Jackie Gleason manner."

He also prides himself on being an amateur psychologist and a serious student of people.

"Everything I know I've learned because I'm so curious about people," he said. "My characters are good because they're real and the audience recognize themselves in the characters."

"THAT'S THAT"

One of the minor advantages he likes about his new contract, which calls for a weekly half-hour skit of "The Honeymoners," to be done on film, is that the shorter show, on film, will give him time for other things.

Actually, even now, he rehearses only two hours for his Saturday night television show.

"It's the shortest rehearsal time of any show of its type on the air," he said. "I don't even see the script until Saturday morning, but I'm lucky I can memorize so fast. I get together with the cast from 2 to 4 on Saturday afternoons, and that's that."

His Irish-born mother, who died when Jackie was 16, worked as a cashier for the subway system here. His father, an auditor for an insurance company, disappeared when Jack was eight, and was never heard from again.

Jackie Gleason discovered that he loved show business when he performed in school plays at good old PS 73. From school plays he went into amateur nights in Brooklyn.

VARIED CAREER

He was later a barker in a carnival, a dare-devil driver in an auto circus, and an exhibition diver in the water follies. He has toured the night club and vaudeville circuit, spent five years in Hollywood in the movies, and has done summer stock.

The 38-year-old television star made his TV debut in the leading role of the "Life of Riley" series, and he became a top comedian with the "Cavalcade of Stars" show on the Du Mont network.

There would seem to be only one more talent that he should cultivate. In his spare time, he might do well to take up some higher form of mathematics—just for counting purposes.

"I'll Cry---Tomorrow"

We flew to California two days before the show.

I was consumed with curiosity. What questions would I be asked? What guests would appear?

"No, no, no," said Al, grinning. "I'm telling you nothing." Burt reassured me. "I've seen the script," he said. "Don't worry about anything." Beyond that he refused to say more.

Next morning I was hurried around the corner to the NBC Radio Theatre. I rehearsed on the empty stage, unable even to see my pianist who, like everyone else, was hidden behind a screen.

SOOTHED

When it was time for me to go on stage, I prayed, as I had always prayed before I spoke. The prayer soothed me and I stopped worrying about myself and tried to think of those in the audience who might be helped by my story.

Suddenly, I was given the cue, and I came through the curtain. I tried to avoid the camera. As the rough outline of my life was presented by Ralph Edwards, I thought, had all this happened to me? I was shocked.

At that moment, seated on the stage, I would have liked to have been anybody else but me, the camera on me and the story unfolding.

Then the program was over, and the telephone calls and wires poured in. They were warm and understanding.

OFFERED HELP

I read each letter and answered them, at the rate of hundreds a week. Where help was needed, I tried to suggest how and where it could be obtained.

Later, I was invited to the Clover Club in Miami for a two week engagement. The public's acceptance led the proprietor to hold me over for 16 weeks. The club was filled nightly; the audiences were so warm, so encouraging, that sometimes it was hard for me to start my song because my throat was choked with tears.

It was the same thrilling reception later at the Sans Souci, in Miami. And then, at last, after seven years, my return to New York, and the announcement in December, 1953, in Walter Winchell's column:

"Lillian Roth, who made it the hard way, and Julius La Rosa, who made it the easy way, open at La Vie en Rose on Christmas Night . . ."

The critics came out in full force. Their reviews were excellent.

BIDS, INVITATIONS

Offers came in from all parts of the country. I was invited to record; other nightclubs bid for my services.

All this, happening in a new lifetime, I thought. It was true: God works in a mysterious fashion. This was what I had labored for all these years—to be welcomed back as a human being, to know that I was privileged to use my voice—my gift from God—as He intended it, to make people happy.

One quiet Sunday afternoon Burt and I were seated on the lawn of our Fort Lauderdale home, sipping cool lemonades and talking idly. It was a time for reminiscence.

"Do you realize, Burt," I said almost dreamily, "It was seven years ago that we first met."

"GOD AT MY SIDE"

He grinned. "They were seven lean years, weren't they, darling?"

I was silent for a moment. "You know, Burt, if I'd had any idea seven years ago of the struggle ahead of me, I think I would have given up then. But I know now that God was always at my side—"

There was a pause. Burt put his hand on mine in his old familiar gesture. "It wasn't so difficult, was it."

Difficult? Would anyone—know how difficult it had been? Burt's love had been so sure, so constant, so selfless. It had sustained me; and what had happened to me in the past had strengthened me to look with hope to all the unknown tomorrows.

I looked at Burt and I loved him very much.

"No, Burt," I said. "It wasn't so difficult."

"Who's Shot?"

LONDON (NANA) — Police cars screamed through London's old Burlington Street to the United States Air Force offices. Policemen swarmed upstairs, demanding "Where's the man who was shot?"

They got blank looks.

Finally the air force man who had made the call for an ambulance explained: "Nobody's been shot. I said somebody's been shocked. It's Harry Wood, the caretaker. He was fixing a light socket."

The trouble, said the police, was the American accent.

ANGLOPHOBE

Hate may be a source of strength, just as love is, Jean-Paul Sartre contends. To prove it the famous existentialist playwright relates the story of his uncle Jules, whose prime passion in life was a violent hatred of England and the English.

When "Uncle Jules" was a guest at the Sartre home, allusion to England was avoided. But sometimes, when the aged guest sank into a sad quietness, a member of the family would, as if by inadvertance, hazard a sentence on Great Britain.

At once, uncle Jules would would bounce back to life and begin a violent anti-British tirade, reassuring his family he was still well.

Travel Abroad Recommended In Off-Season

By SHEILA McIVOR

THREE days after leaving the sunny skies of Lisbon, Portugal, the Blue Star liner sailed cautiously through the thick fog of the Thames River and eased into Victoria Docks.

My heart lurched with excitement as I walked down the gangplank and set my feet on London's soil after an absence of 20 years. A bus conveyed the ship's passengers to St. Pancras Station, and from there we were on our own to travel by train, or by taxi to our hotels. After standing in line for about half an hour I managed to get a taxi.

In spite of the fog, traffic moved at a fair pace, though buildings a few yards away appeared like grey ghosts. I had the names of six hotels recommended by friends, but all were full as there was an automobile exhibition that week.

The friendly Cockney driver informed me that on that account it would be hard to obtain accommodation anywhere. However, I finally found quarters at the Palace Hotel, Lancaster Gate.

CENTRAL HEAT

Even there, rooms were at a premium, and the desk clerk asked me to let her know immediately I was ready to leave.

This hotel was comfortable, and heated by central heat, a rarity in reasonably priced English hotels today, where heating by gas fires predominates. There was a large lounge, dining room and bar. Rates averaged £2 a day with three meals, including afternoon tea. There appeared to be no food shortage, as breakfast included cereal, fruit juice, bacon and eggs and tea or coffee.

Dinner included soup, fish, meat and vegetables, and dessert.

When the fog eased up I explored some of the shops, and found them all gaily decorated for Christmas, with hordes of shoppers much the same as in Canada. Beautiful woollen sweaters, silk souvenir scarves, and enticing perfumes of every brand and soaps seemed to be the most popular items for gifts.

MODERATE PRICES

There were also gay cocktail and dinner dresses of taffeta ranging from reds to beige to blues of every shade. Colorful nylon lingerie and stockings were also on display.

All these goods were moderately priced, and overseas visitors were offered wonderful bargains with the exchange of dollars fluctuating from $2.70 to $2.80 to the pound.

Though evening dress is still optional for theatre and restaurant patrons, the trend to wear gay dinner dresses is gradually returning, striking a cheerful note after the grim post-war years.

Theatres and movies are well patronized both by socialites and working crowds. Good, moderately priced meals ranging from three to 12 shillings are obtainable in all London restaurants now that all rations have been lifted.

After spending a gay evening dining with a friend exchanging reminiscences at the hotel, I decided to spend the rest of my short vacation in England at Bournemouth.

RUGGED WEATHER

Next afternoon I drove to Waterloo Station to entrain for the seaside resort. Porters were plentiful and friendly. The fine English express train was crowded to capacity. I was thrilled to speed through the English countryside of Surrey and Hampshire with its green fields. In two hours we reached Bournemouth.

This is supposed to be one of the best winter climates in England. But, this year, the freak weather with hurricanes, gales and floods, during my stay of about one month, gave me only about two sunny days. During the gales, wind velocity reached a peak of over 72 miles per hour. I tried to go for a walk, but was almost lifted off my feet.

In Bournemouth there are hundreds of hotels and boarding houses which I heard were filled to capacity during the summer and also for Christmas holidays. I was there during the "off season" in late November and early December and found accommodation was plentiful. I stayed at the Exeter Hotel, a very old brick structure near the sea front.

GOOD MEALS

A comfortable, steam-heated room with three meals a day and afternoon tea was obtained there at the "off season" rate of approximately 30 shillings a day (about five dollars). The food was good. Breakfast included fruit, cereal, bacon and eggs, tea or coffee; lunch, soup, fish, choice of cold cuts and salads or hot meat and vegetables and dessert; afternoon tea, toast, cake and tea; dinner, soup, fish, hot meat and vegetables, dessert, cheese and crackers. Meat varied from beef or lamb to pheasant, duck, partridge and chicken.

Many of the permanent guests at this hotel had once been owners of England's traditional country homes. They had been obliged either to sell their homes on account of servant shortage and high taxes, or leave their homes in the hands of reliable care-takers who allowed the public to view these places at a charge of half a crown (about 50 cents). The land around these fine old homes was either sold or rented to farmers.

EXCEPTION

I met one exception to this rule, an old widow who for sentimental reasons was attempting the upkeep of her home. She said that she had rented the cottages and land to farmers and gardeners who kept the estate going. Her only difficulty was to find a suitable companion to live with her in the large house as she could not get resident servants. When no companion was available, she lived in hotels.

The greatest need for home-seekers in England today is the small bungalow. There are so few of these available that owners obtain exhorbitant prices for them — £4,000 to £6,000.

The working class of people is far better off with good wages and low or no taxes as compared to the one-time rich gentry whose income taxes are nine shillings in the pound, thereby reducing their incomes by at least half.

Hotels appear to have no trouble with domestic help. In Bournemouth, close to Southampton, the hotel waiters and porters were mostly ship stewards who were glad to find shore work for awhile till the the "sea bug" enticed them back to the ships.

Maids in the hotels were mostly married women who came daily, glad of the chance of supplementing the family income.

I would certainly recommend anyone wishing to spend a reasonably priced vacation in either England or Europe to go in the "off season," October to March, when sea and air travel and overseas accommodation is reduced to half price. Also, there is the advantage of uncrowded travelling.

London shops, like those off Piccadilly Circus, offer bargains for Canadian visitors.

Printed Leathers Make News

The foundation for spring's fashion catches much of the limelight and magic of the season ahead in footwear that has new color, finishes and is light in weight. You'll like the deliberate look of slenderness in design, the suppleness of kid leathers and the captivating achievement in printed leathers appearing in pastel plaids and deep rich Paisley-like patterns with touches of gold. A new finish for calf is called "satin patent" and it does have a soft satiny look.

Shoes for spring are open, they are closed and they are in variety for street, dress and comfortable but pretty at-home wear. Designers have strived to capture a tapered silhouette and more elongation in the lines of footwear and this is apparent in both closed and open shoes. Heels are more tapered and many are slightly more than mid-height. Pumps may have a "whittled" look with the top line of the shoe remaining but cut away at the sides or back. T-straps are important. Some have that Parisian look of high-rise insteps and open backs. The mule has a closed front or closed back or T-strap. Buckles of all kinds range from those of self-leather to the underlay of contrasting leather in the vamp of a trim pump. Bows are seen, too, and a series of three bows on three instep straps across a mule-type shoe are done in two colors and may be turned to contrast with the shoe.

Color will wash over your feet in tones suitable for town—the perennial navy and red. Grey is more limited and there's a good supply of wearable coffee and khaki tones to off-white shades. You'll see lovely mauves to rich purple, avocado green, red, navy and the gleaming black patents.

New shoe styles ranging from casual to late-day, are pictured above. Top left is Carlisle's "Coffee Frost" calf pump with straps and buckle over the vamp, wonderful with spring suit and coat fashions. Top right are Town and Country kid flats in pale pink with red straw tassel and pompom trimming. Left below is I. Miller's "Halter" pump in "bombeige," a neutral for wear with gold and yellow beiges. This is also available in black patent, and navy and black suede. Another I. Miller shoe on the right is one of the newest leathers—printed in soft plaid

This Week's Profile

By G. E. Mortimore

JIMMY MILLER was tired of his job as weighman of a coal mine near Newcastle, England. He had worked since he was 12 years old, and he was 22 now. He didn't see much future, either at the mine or in music, which his bandmaster father had forced him to study from early boyhood.

His only real interest was in football. He played for the colliery team, and he had heard that one or two scouts for professional teams had been watching him with interest. Altogether, though, it was a dull life.

Then he saw a moving picture about logging operations.

"That knocked me for a goal. I thought, there's a real he-man's job."

Much against his family's wishes, and without taking as much as a mouth organ with him, he traveled across the Atlantic and right to the far side of Canada—in fact, to Vancouver Island. He went to work in a logging camp at Cowichan Lake. It was a day's trip by stage coach from Duncan to the lake, and horses were in use at the camp.

SATISFIED UNTIL—

The job was all he had hoped for. "I was perfectly satisfied, driving a line horse at $4 a day, which was good wages then. And then a man went into Duncan and came back with an old gramophone and some records. I was currying the horse when I heard it. Tarum! Tarrum! I ran to the gramophone and played every record he had. I quit next week."

Music, as expressed by that old gramophone, had called him. His father had made him start learning to play the cornet when he was nine years old, and he had taken lessons on several other instruments, but he had always regarded music as a chore.

Separated from home discipline, he now realized that he liked music. He sent to England for his euphonium. He didn't know, but that was the start of a half-century's musical career.

Bandmaster Jimmy Miller of Victoria looks back on those years with a reminiscent grin on his round face.

He left the logging camp, worked briefly in Ladysmith, then moved to a tough little mining town called Roundup, Montana.

"LIGHT" SCALES

There he was weigh boss, the American equivalent for the job which had been known as "weighman" in England. One of his responsibilities was to weigh the cars of coal that came from the mine. The miners were paid according to the amount they produced.

Young Jimmy Miller confounded the superintendent by finding that the scales weighed two or three hundred pounds light, and hence deprived the miners of their just pay.

While in Roundup he played in dance orchestras and in the town band.

He returned to Victoria in 1912 and became a member of the 5th Regiment band, under B. M. Rogers. He joined the orchestra that played for "Kismet," the opening show at the Royal Victoria Theatre. Later he left the Royal and joined the orchestra at the opening of the Pantages Theatre. He remained there until he went overseas with the 88th Victoria Fusiliers on May 23, 1916.

He was promoted bandmaster of the 1st Division band in 1917, and led the band that played the first Canadian troops across Kaiser Wilhelm Bridge at Cologne, where they were inspected by General Sir Arthur Currie.

POPULAR VOTE

He returned to the Pantages Theatre after the war, then became bandmaster of the recently-organized Great War Veterans' Association band. He was chosen from among eight applicants, and when a ballot was taken in the band, 34 of the 40 bandsmen voted for him over the others.

That band, with Mr. Miller still at its head, went over whole to the Canadian Scottish in 1922. Mr. Miller remained bandmaster of the Scottish for 25 years, finishing with the rank of captain.

For a time he played in theatres weekdays and led the Canadian Scottish band on Sundays. His theatre job meant that he couldn't lead the band during the week, so he took a job in the Legislative buildings, from which he could get leave of absence if he really needed it.

He worked in the lands department, and when he retired in 1950 after 29 years' service, he was head of the filing department.

KEPT JUGGLING

Jimmy Miller was hard put to it for a while to juggle his time between the Civil Service job and a number of musical jobs. As well as leading the Canadian Scottish band and the Shrine band, he was also leader of the Rotary orchestra for some time and leader of the skating rink band for Lester Patrick until the Willows Arena burned down.

He finished work at the Legislative buildings at 5 p.m. The Dunsmuirs had a skating club, and Jimmy would be on hand to play for that when it started at 6 p.m.

On Sundays there would be band concerts in one of the theatres, and on Saturday afternoons, parades and garden parties.

"You hardly ever hear of a little band at a garden party now; you hardly ever see a parade," says Jimmy Miller wistfully. "At one time, nobody had a garden party but what they didn't want a little band."

NO MORE FUNERALS

He also used to play for the races, during the season, and at many Chinese funerals.

"Now, I've never known a band play at a Chinese funeral for years and years," he says, looking somewhat sad at the decreasing demand for music.

For the last seven years he has been bandmaster of the B.C. Electric band, which presents a series of Wednesday evening concerts in Beacon Hill Park in July and August.

He has played every instrument in the band, five of them professionally: Euphonium, trombone, clarinet, saxophone and French horn.

Now aged 70, he still leads the Shrine band and plays clarinet for it during the out-of-town trips. He plays first trombone for Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

SHRINERS IN KILTS

Bandmaster Miller and the Shrine band have gone on merry and tuneful journeys to many parts of the continent.

Sometimes, when Shriners virtually "take over" a city during a convention, the band coolly marches into a store and brings business to a standstill with a concert.

On the band's first trip to Los Angeles, in 1925, Jimmy Miller was anxious to make a good impression. "All the bands play in uniform. Let's be different and play in kilts."

He asked the Canadian Scottish to lend the band kilts. The Scottish agreed to do so on one condition—that the entire band join the regiment. Jimmy was already in it. The others agreed.

"Without doubt it was the greatest experience I ever had in my time with the band," says Jimmy. "It was in Los Angeles Stadium. Band after band marched in, wearing Shrine uniform. When we marched in with kilts and feather bonnets and scarlet tunics, 100,000 people rose to their feet as one man."

When the members of the band returned to Victoria, they served faithfully in the regiment the full three years for which they had signed up.

SONS MUSICAL

His wife is the former Agnes Kerr, born in Colorado but a resident of Victoria since childhood. They have two sons, Jack and Jim, who are both musical.

Jack, who is a civil servant at the Legislative Buildings, also plays the trumpet in the Crystal Garden orchestra. Jim, now a lawyer in Vancouver, was active for some time in the Harmony House orchestra in Vancouver.

Jimmy Miller the bandmaster still has regrets at times that he didn't continue with his football. He feels that he might have been a success as a professional soccer player.

WATER GREW COLD

He has never had time to take up golf, because on the days when his friends were playing golf, he was busy with music.

His house on Beach Drive commands a view of the sea, and for some time he used to go swimming every day, until he began to notice that the water was too cold.

He was christened James M. Miller, but during his brief stay in Ladysmith his mail used to get mixed with that of another James Miller. So he adopted the middle name Marshal, which was his mother's maiden name.

The Stamp Packet

By R. M. ANGUS

The Australian News and Information Bureau says that February 23 will be the date upon which Australia will issue a 3½d carmine stamp to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Rotary Movement. The design will depict the Rotary Badge superimposed on a globe showing the Australian and American continents.

Egypt has also issued the 20 mils purple (Scott No. 330), type A110 with "Palestine" overprint in red. New Zealand has gone in for coils in a big way, the following Queen Elizabeth stamps having been issued in coils of 480 stamps to the coil: 2d, 3d, 4d, 5d, 6d, 8d, 9d, 1/-, 1/6. These are high values for coils and if the Canadian pattern of not selling broken coils or part coils at post offices is adopted, except in the case of Ottawa, where part coils may be purchased, New Zealanders who wanted to buy a coil of the 1/6 value would have to pay £36 for one, which is a lot of money in anyone's language; but, assumedly, only the large business firms would have occasion to use them.

Many tears have been shed by various societies and individuals over the purchase of the cliches used by Sperati for the production of his famous forgeries which fooled so many collectors and even experts, so it will be a relief to the philatelic world in general to hear that these cliches are to be defaced so as to avoid any further reproductions from them.

The object of the purchase of these cliches by the British Philatelic Association has been much misunderstood. It was to obtain control of them and prevent the existing stock being used to defraud philatelists and to prevent any further copies from being produced. Sperati would have sold these cliches in any case and there would no doubt have been keen competition on the continent of Europe to purchase them by unscrupulous parties if the wisdom of the BPA had not prevailed and bought them promptly.

The only use to which the BPA has ever put them is to make a certain number of black and white photographic enlargements in order that philatelic students requiring information for comparison may see the flaws that will enable them to distinguish Sperati's work, which is truly excellent.

The BPA states: "Contrary to some opinions that have been expressed, Sperati did not produce his imitations by one of the normal processes associated with stamp production. It would not be wise, in the interests of philately, to describe in detail the method he used." The two examples we have seen of his work are truly remarkable and a fine example of misplaced genius.

An interesting item appears in the Historical and Statistical Gazeteer of New York State, by R. F. Smith in 1860 on page 210: "In 1806 the first mail route was established between Buffalo and Erie. The first mail was carried by a man named Metcalf who went on foot and carried the mail in a handkerchief!" Truly times have changed.

Barque Left New B.C. Citizen Behind Then Sailed Into Sunset

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

IN the fall of 1909 the four-masted barque Ellisland raised anchor and sailed out of Victoria. Ahead of her lay a fate that is still unknown. Behind her she left a crewman who became one of British Columbia's solid citizens.

The Ellisland dropped her hook at Royal Roads July 27, 1909. Owned by the Bank Line of Glasgow, she had arrived from Hamburg, via Cape Horn, after discharging a cargo of coke at Santa Rosalia, Mexico.

When she sailed away, a few months later, she was bound for Adelaide, South Australia, with a cargo of lumber. From Adelaide she sailed in ballast to pick up a load of saltpetre at Caldea, Chile, for the United Kingdom.

SHIP DISAPPEARED

She never reached Caldea. Lloyd's subsequently reported her missing with all hands, and she was never seen again.

This story, however, concerns the crewman who traded his seafaring days for a good life ashore while the Ellisland stood off Royal Roads.

Albert Sjoberg was born at Stockholm, Sweden and when only 12 was apprenticed in the cabinet-making trade. He followed that occupation for several years but, like thousands of other young Swedes, always had a yearning to go to America, where others had gone before him and all made good.

To accomplish his ambition he signed on before the mast at the age of 18. But luck was against him and for four years he sailed the seven seas without ever touching at any North American port. It was during one of these voyages that a fellow shipmate "sold" him on the idea of going to British Columbia. His friend had once visited Victoria and Vancouver and told him what a wonderful country B.C. was. Work was plentiful and wages were high. At that time an able seaman's pay was £3 per month and found.

PLANS MADE

There and then young Sjoberg set his mind on B.C. He bided his time and it wasn't long before he learned that the barque Ellisland was loading coke at Hamburg for a French copper mine at Santa Rosalia, Mexico. He knew enough about geography to know that Mexico wasn't far from Canada. He would "jump ship" there and make his way through the States. The mate signed him on as an AB but, before sailing, he went to a bank in Hamburg and changed his money into Mexican dollars (gold) and stowed it away in money belts which he had made for the purpose.

The trip around the Horn and up the west coast of South America was uneventful but, on reaching Santa Rosalia, Sjoberg heard the best news of his young life. The captain had received orders that as soon as the coke was unloaded the Ellisland was to proceed in ballast to Royal Roads, Esquimalt, where she duly arrived a few months later.

For the next three weeks Sjoberg, now 21, helped chip and paint the Ellisland's rusting sides as she lay at anchor only a few cables length from the beach at Albert Head. He could speak a little English but, in conversation with the few who reached the ship from shore, soon had confirmed everything his sailor friend had previously told him about this part of Canada. He learned that carpenters were in great demand and received more than £1 per day, which was a third of what he was now getting for a whole month's work. This and with the beach so temptingly close, only intensified his determination to "jump ship" and settle here.

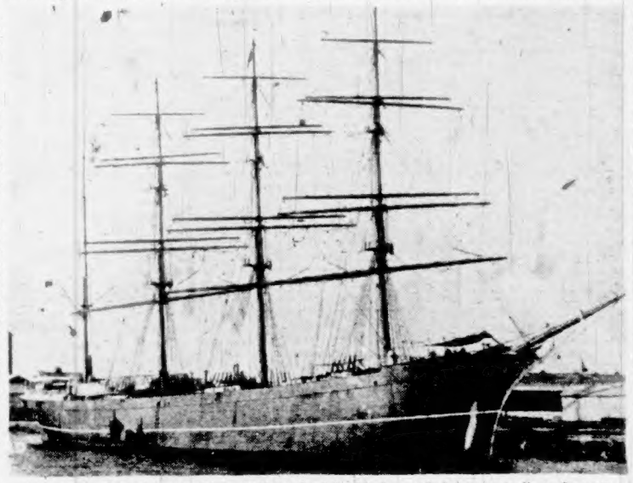
ALBERT SJOBERG
. . . his home overlooks his first footprints.

"ODD MAN OUT"

He enlisted the aid of three shipmates who, on Sunday, August 15, 1909, persuaded the captain to allow them to go ashore to "stretch their legs." The ship's gig was lowered and purposely left riding idly alongside her steep hull, while all hands were below for dinner. Sjoberg hurried through his meal and, finding himself alone on deck, slipped over the side and down the long rope. Then he hid himself under a piece of canvas which had been conveniently left in the bottom of the boat.

A few minutes later his three companions slid down the same rope and in five minutes were on the beach and "taking their stroll." Meanwhile Sjoberg remained hidden under the canvas while the others kept an eye on the ship. They noticed that every now and then the captain came on deck and took a look at them through his telescope.

In one of these moments when he returned below, one of them changed places with Sjoberg and the next time the "three" took a stroll one was Canada's new immigrant. At an opportune moment he disappeared into the brush and his three friends nonchalantly returned to the ship. Whether the captain knew that they had helped Sjoberg make his getaway, of course he never knew.



Four-master brought new citizen to "promised land," then sailed for Australia and an unknown fate.

QUICK WORK

Immigration restrictions were not so rigid in those days and, though no doubt the captain missed him, as far as Sjoberg knew, neither the ship's agents nor the authorities ever made any inquiries as to his whereabouts. All he had with him was the clothes he stood up in and his $800 Mexican gold.

Ten minutes after landing Sjoberg had a job. Climbing to the top of a steep bluff, he came across a man skidding cordwood down into a quarry (now operated by Evans, Coleman & Johnson Bros. Ltd.). He was William Witty and the wood was to fire the boilers for the quarry's stone crushers. Witty's lagoon was named after his father. Sjoberg asked him for a job and for two years worked on the Witty ranch at Metchosin.

He afterwards worked at his cabinet-making trade in Victoria and from 1915 to 1953, when he retired, was employed continuously at the B.C. Electric Company's powerhouse at Jordan River; for the last 20 years as supervisor of construction. In 1927 he became a naturalized Canadian citizen.

WISH FULFILLED

Mr. Sjoberg was so taken with the spot where he first set foot in Canada that he made up his mind to settle there when he retired.

His wishes have been fulfilled, for he now spends his retirement in a modern stucco and peeled-log bungalow which he built himself. It stands back from the road in 3½ acres of shade trees, mostly firs and oak. It immediately adjoins the grounds of the Victoria Gun Club and overlooks the identical spot where the Ellisland dropped anchor and where he came ashore 45 years ago last August.

His next door neighbors are also retired employees of the B.C. Electric Company at Jordan River—his brother Kurt and J. C. Webb, each with 35 years' service in the company. Photography is Mr. Sjoberg's life-long hobby and one has only to see his work bench in the basement and the lay-out of both machine and hand tools, to appreciate that he never lacks for something to keep him busy on a wet day.

In Shadow of Strife, Islanders Cling to Peace

ISLES OF ORCHIDE (NANA)—In the shadow of the burgeoning China Nationalist-Communist war, 1,500 primitive orchid islanders whose origins defy anthropologists stick to their peaceful traditions, unaware that other coastal islands are under attack.

The Yamis, whose island is 40 miles east of Formosa, are a mystery race. Anthropologists can only guess they may have come from the Philippines centuries ago because there is a slight resemblance between their language, which includes only 200 words, and the tagalog dialect of the Filipinos.

Virtually isolated from the world for centuries by the treacherous currents around their island, the Yamis have clung to a matriarchal society. Their sturdy womenfolk, clad in gay sarong-like gowns, plant crops and plant tiny plots of yams. The women also select their marriage partners—and decree when they want a change. With men outnumbering women four-to-one, they have plenty of choice.

There has been no fighting among the Yamis in the oldest islander's memory. Their iron swords and spears and rattan armor are used only during religious ceremonies.

Yamis make their homes in the earth, with the roofs at ground level. Only in this way can they escape destruction from the typhoons which each year sweep this part of the world. Superstition rules their lives. Fish which is blue underneath may be eaten only by men, and fish of another color may be eaten only by elders of the tribe. Women oil their hair with lard to drive away the many spirits which they believe inhabit the island.

The Yamis have no money and no use for it. They have contemptuously refused paper currency offered by various governments. In their version of the way in which life began, "Adam" was born from a rock on a day of storm and thunder, while "Eve" came from a bamboo tree during an earthquake. Every member of the tribe claims descent from this dramatically conceived couple.

During the past 700 years the Isle of Orchids had changed its name three times. On early European charts it was called Tobacco Island. Two hundred and fifty years ago, the Manchus named it Redhead Island in token of the Yamis' fairness.

In 1947, the Chinese Nationalist government, noting the abundance of orchidaceous plants, gave the island its present name. Government officials decided the new name should herald a period of modernization for the Yamis.

But there have been no changes. The Yamis express no complaints. They make clear they do not understand the meaning of either "Communist" or "Nationalist," but judge from the reports reaching them, that they would not want to learn about either.
